DEMOCRATS TO SEEK WIDE RECOUNT

Today

We Plan a Seadrome.
The French Black Squadron.
The Puzzled Land Crabs.
Why Force Solitary Drinking?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 17.

UNCLE SAM, who seems to be as rich just now as some of his nephews are poor, is considering the expenditure of a million and a half to build a seadrome, landing and fueling station for airplanes, five hundred miles out in the Atlantic Ocean.

It will be a baby seadrome, one-quarter as big as was at first proposed. If it works, fliers finding it and landing successfully, as doubtless they will, a bigger seadrome will be built.

Perhaps a series of them all across the ocean, allowing planes to hop from one to the other, like Eliza crossing on the cakes of ice.

VERY LIKELY, by the time the first big seadrome is finished, airplanes will consider a non-stop flight over the Atlantic a triviality. There will be a seadrome for sale cheap.

It is less than twenty-three years since Lord Northcliffe paid a reward of $50,000 to the first man that would fly across the English Channel. A Frenchman won it.

In those days they might have suggested a mid-channel "seadrome." Germany keeps a refueling ship in the Southern Atlantic, to supply gas to German trans-Atlantic planes. It works well.

THE FRENCH "black squadron" of 28 airplanes, flying from France across North Africa, steering with precision, lands in the middle of the Sahara Desert, at the little oasis of Bidon.

There, in addition to water, they found a gasoline pump, planted in the desert for its fliers by the French government.

Long flights of airplanes "in formation," the Balbo flight, the present French "black squadron" flight, Germans going back and forth with ferry-boat regularity from Berlin to South America, ought to awaken the United States government.

If that does not happen, one of these fleets may awaken our government some day with considerable suddenness and unpleasant results.

YOU WOULD be interested in the big land crabs that inhabit the Florida Peninsula, and think, with fairly good reason, that it belongs to them.

In a garden you see hundreds of newly made holes, a land crab living in each, often sitting at his door with a queer claw that looks like a bony hand projecting from the entrance, ready to seize what he likes.

These innumerable holes undermine plants, even palm trees, and the first duty of man is to pour a little gasoline, stop the hole with earth, and let gasoline fumes do their painful duty.

WILLIAM JAMES, great psychologist, in his book of lectures for teachers and students, says the fox terrier, watching its master read a book, cannot possibly imagine what the master is doing, or believe that there is any use in it.

You could not make the land crab understand the purpose of the demon bringing gasoline. The crab would never believe that the gasoline demon was working to save trees. He would, rightly, complain of injustice, because the land crabs were in possession here a million years before men came.

But crabs were content to develop mentally to the point of digging a hole in the ground and stopped there. Man went ahead, learned to think, and make gasoline. And to him who thinks belongs whatever he wants, if he thinks long, hard and well enough.

SOLEMN LAW MAKERS, arranging the distribution of "hard liquor" after prohibition, object to "drinking on the premises," that is to say, where the liquor is sold. Laws will be passed compelling the would-be drinker to buy an entire bottle and take it home.

The women of New Zealand know something about that. They closed public drinking places, the man brought home his bottle or two bottles, put them under a pillow and drank until they were gone, or he was "out."

THEN THE women of New Zealand voted the home bottles out, and the public drinking places in again.

The worst drinker, surely on the road to ruin, is the "solitary drinker," and it seems foolish to pass laws that inevitably would increase his numbers.

The saving grace about drinking is the good fellowship, although of an inferior kind, and it tends to prevent excessive drinking. Why discourage it?

H. K. DAVIS, of New York, had a twenty-dollar certificate printed on yellow paper, "payable in gold" at the United States Treasury. The United States Treasury refused to pay the gold, and Mr. Davis brings suit in the Federal Court to test a clause in the Constitution concerning the sacredness of contracts. Some will ask innocently:

"If the government can repudiate a contract, why cannot I?"

The answer of course would be "because you are not the government."

UNCLE SAM, having talked for a week with Litvinoff, will make up his mind about Russian recognition and the terms accompanying it "some time this week." Starting for the United States, Litvinoff said all the talk he needed would take one-half hour. He had no idea what good talkers we are here.

We use ten words where one would do, and on many things are not quite certain what we want.

Sees Recognition

MAXIM LITVINOFF

The Soviet's Foreign Commissar, Litvinoff, who today as he left President Roosevelt told the press that he "thought there would be a (White House) statement" announcing U. S. recognition of the U. S. S. R.

MARKET LOANS HERE PROBED

Three Pittsburgh banks have been directed to reveal all loans made for stock-market operations in the last five years by Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate banking inquiry, the Associated Press reported today from Washington.

The banks are the Mellon National, Union Trust Company and First National.

They are three of 34 national banks which have received this order.

This information was requested in questionnaires sent to all these banks. It is not expected that representatives of the banks will be required to go to Washington to testify.

It was learned in Pittsburgh that the questionnaires had been received at all of the banks and, presumably, the information was given Pecora. A spokesman for the Mellon bank said the questionnaire had been filled and returned some time ago.

No Defense Plea Made By Adler

A co-defendant, Maurice K. Winters, 52, pleaded guilty to the theft of $300 in electric light gloves and chamois skins from the warehouse.

The prosecution charged Adler received and sold the goods and divided the $200 profits with Winters. Sentence will not be pronounced for one week—until Judge James H. Gray receives a medical report on the condition of Winters, who pleaded ill health.

U. S., RUSSIA NEARING ACCORD

Litvinoff Forecasts Statement From White House

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Emerging from the White House after a conference with President Roosevelt Maxim Litvinoff told reporters that he "thought there would be a statement today" on recognition of the Soviet by this government after 16 years of abnormal relations.

It was the first time since arrival of the Foreign Commissar that he has answered questions by newspapermen, and his attitude was a further indication that the climax of the negotiations between himself and the President was close at hand.

Litvinoff added, however, that any announcement was to come from Mr. Roosevelt. This is expected before the Chief Executive leaves for Warm Springs, Ga., today.

LITVINOFF TO STAY

Litvinoff said he had made no plans to go to Warm Springs, but that he did not intend to leave Washington immediately, as he has "some business here."

The Commissar conferred with the President at the White House in the forenoon for more than an hour and also talked to William C. Bullitt, the State Department's Russian expert.

After 10 days of conferences and compromises a general understanding existed on major issues between the President and Litvinoff.

A conference, which broke up at 1 o'clock this morning, brought the President and the Soviet commissar into mutual agreement on the problems involved.

Litvinoff went to the executive mansion at 10 o'clock last night to attend a musicale given after a dinner to the cabinet.

An hour later, he withdrew to Mr. Roosevelt's study and spent two hours in conference with the President, Secretary Woodin, of the Treasury; Henry Morgenthau, Jr., who today became undersecretary of the Treasury; Undersecretary William Phillips, of the State Department, and Bullitt.

RECORDS REMOVED

While the White House meeting was on, three Army trucks were being loaded a few blocks away with records stored in the old Russian embassy. With Litvinoff's approval, they were removed to a downtown government building for examination by American and Soviet officials.

Secrecy and a heavy police guard surrounded the move. None of the interested parties would disclose the exact nature of the records trucked away. It was considered likely they dealt with debts of the Kerensky regime.

A formula for handling the debt question presented a major difficulty in the Roosevelt-Litvinoff conversations. The Soviet had refused to recognize any obligation because of loans to the Kerensky government.

American loans amounted to $187,000,000, but accumulated interest since pushed the total over $300,000,000.

The Soviet government, however, indicated a willingness to talk about debts claims. Those filed against Russia by United States nationals amount to about $400,000,000 and include about $86,000,000 of old Czarist flotations.

Pirates Send Comorosky And Piet to Reds

In a straight trade, the Pittsburgh Pirates early today traded Second Baseman Tony Piet and Outfielder Adam Comorosky to the Cincinnati Reds for Pitcher Red Lucas and Outfielder Wally Roettger.

Comorosky played regularly in 1931 when he batted .313. He has not been a regular since. Piet, a regular in 1932, was not used steadily last year, his place at second base being held down by Tommy Thevenow.

Lucas, long regarded as one of the best righthanders in the National League, won 13 games last season with the last place Reds. Roettger, a heavy hitter, is expected to be employed as a pinch hitter by the Pirates or used in further trades.

Piet batted .324 last year. In 1932, he stole 19 bases, finishing second in that department.

Grill Nurse In Grace Killing

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Portrayed by herself and her attorney as a victim of heartless bertayal, Frieda Wilhelmina Weltz, accused of killing Francis J. M. Grace, retired capitalist, faces cross-examination here today.

The 43-year-old nurse told the jury the shooting of Grace in the garden of his summer home September 9 was accidental. She denied she had told police she planned the shooting.

Miss Weltz testified that while she was employed by Grace as his nurse in 1932, he attacked her and later induced her to take a drug that would prevent her from becoming a mother.

After telling the jury her health had been wrecked and that she was in need of financial aid, she said:

"I waited and waited to see him. All I planned was to make one last appeal to Mr. Grace to give me a little money so that I could go to some quiet place and rest."

She said she placed a pistol in her purse because she intended to kill herself before Grace if he refused to aid her. Instead of listening to her appeal, Miss Weltz testified, Grace started into the house. She said:

"I felt myself trembling all over. I was dazed. I reached for my gun and the next thing I heard was a crash."

She insisted that she had no idea of shooting Grace and did not intentionally point the gun at him. Her testimony followed the outline of a statement made to the jury by her attorney, John Duggan, Jr., of Pittsburgh, Pa.

STEEL MEN ASK TO EXTEND CODE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—(AP.)—The steel industry today requested the NRA for an extension of its code until May 31, 1934, at the same time recording in a formal resolution "its general satisfaction with the operations of the code in its effects on the industry."

This resolution was made public by Hugh S. Johnson after it had been forwarded to President Roosevelt.

The original steel industry code was adopted for a trial period of three months and the extension is for purposes of further trial, "to the end that sufficient time may be given more fully to demonstrate" that the code will effectuate the purposes of the NRA law.

NRA officials earlier had said they expected the code to be in full operation only towards the expiration of the first trial period, and that further time would be needed to determine how successful it was toward spreading employment, higher wages for workers, and more compact self-government in the industry.

Looted Mail Sacks Found in River

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 17.—(INS.)—Two mail sacks stolen earlier this week by train robbers near Charlotte, N. C., were found on driftwood in the Kentucky River at Boonesboro Bridge, 14 miles from here, early this afternoon.

They had been stripped of the money which they contained and had been filled with rocks. One contained a small empty pasteboard box.

White House Linked With Reds—by Phone

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(INS.)—The White House was linked with Moscow today—by telephone.

Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet foreign minister, conversed with his wife and children in the Russian capital for several minutes, marking the first time in history that the two capitals were in direct telephonic communication.

AKOLA, India, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Questioned about reports that he is going to America in the spring, the Mahatma Gandhi told the Associated Press he had received no invitation to go to the United States.

He added that only recently he declared his utter inability to go to America or elsewhere.

PINCHOT BILL CURBS YULE LIQUOR

Holiday Sales Limited To Retailers This Season Only

By G. EVERETT DOYING
International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 17.—Adoption of the McClure liquor control bill as now written would force Pennsylvania to buy its bottled spirits from hotels, restaurants and other licensed retailers from December 5 until the dawn of 1934.

In this manner Gov. Gifford Pinchot today proposed to restrain the flood of hard liquor that would come with repeal until sufficient time is given for establishment of dispensaries throughout the commonwealth.

The state store section, which is headed for a bitter struggle—unless growing opposition is sidetracked—in the House Monday night, does not become effective until the new year. Other provisions of the measure go into effect with the chief executive's signature.

During the 26-day interim in which falls the Christmas holidays, licensed retailers—hotels, restaurants, clubs, railroad dining cars and steamboats—would be permitted to makes sales both for consumption and non-consumption on the premises.

If, however, unexpected delays prevent the operation of state stores at the beginning of the new year, Pennsylvania will be forced to drink its liquor by the glass. Sales for non-consumption on the premises and importation from other states by retailers are forbidden by the bill after that date. Few doubt the stores could be set up during the four weeks after repeal.

Legal interpretations also disclosed that no person could legally possess liquor in this commonwealth after the new year

LAWYERS SUED AS 'BUNGLERS'

International News Service.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 17.—A cross-petition demanding $500,000 from a New York law firm for alleged mismanagement of their defense in "lottery" trials in New York was filed here today on behalf of Conrad H. Mann, of Kansas City, Mo., and Frank E. Hering, of South Bend, Ind., high officers of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Swiger, Scandreet, Chambers and Landon comprised the New York legal concern named defendant. The suit was filed in the local court because of a $14,183 suit filed against Mann and Hering on August 1 when the two were attending an Eagles' convention here. The latter action, filed on behalf of the New York attorneys, asked the money for fees.

Liberty and the Press

THERE IS A SAYING, "Nothing is so dangerous as an ignorant enthusiasm."

While we do not impute this type of enthusiasm to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, of the National Recovery Administration, we feel strongly that his failure freely, frankly and promptly to eliminate from the publishers' code the licensing feature as applied to the press, is clearly the result of an imperfect or defective reading of what history has to say on this great subject.

No man, without inviting suspicion as to the breadth of his cultural backgrounds, could stumble as he has in his approach to it.

He cannot be deeply versed in the history of popular liberty to so misunderstand the vital importance of keeping the press, as an organ of popular information, protest and discussion, clear of the faintest shadow of governmental or political restraint.

THE QUESTION is not how a licensing clause in the publishers' code shall be enforced—whether rigorously or not at all. It is not a matter of leniency in the interpretation of such a provision, nor a question as to whether this or that administrator, who happens to be in office, intends to enforce it, or perhaps to disregard it, as Gen. Johnson announces his intention to be.

THE EXISTENCE OF SUCH A POWER IS IRRECONCILABLE WITH THE SPIRIT OF FREEDOM!

It is a falsification of our history—a nullification of the spirit as well as the letter of the Constitution.

While in one view a newspaper may be looked upon as not differing essentially from other industries, its compliance with the commercial and industrial provisions of the publishers' code must be, and readily could be, enforced otherwise than by dangling over its head the possible forfeiture of its government license.

The existence of a license is a temptation to revoke it for doubtful cause, and that this temptation has proved too strong to resist has been repeatedly shown in the past.

WE NEED only cite the well-remembered case of the New York Times during its exposures of the corrupt conditions which prevailed in New York under the Tweed ring.

The ring first tried to buy control of the stock of the Times. Then utilizing its corrupt power over the courts and officials of the city, it endeavored to indict the publishers for libeling the mayor.

Upon the refusal of the grand jury to bring in a bill of indictment, the ring professed to discover that there was a flaw in the title to the real estate occupied by the Times, which would enable the city authorities to place a receiver in possession of its building and thus prevent its publication.

IT REQUIRES little imagination to see that, in the case of a newspaper discharging what it conceived to be its duty of bold criticism of a political party, the license to publish might be canceled on the allegation of an unwitting or trivial infraction of the code provisions regarding hours of work, wage scales or what not.

Let us not forget that the spirit of public office, like tyranny, feeds voraciously upon opportunity and fast grows rank.

THIS is the DANGER, and it MUST BE MET BOLDLY AT THE GATE.

IT IS THE PEOPLE'S RIGHT PRIMARILY—not a publisher's right—THAT IS INVOLVED.

As Thomas Jefferson said, and his words go to the core of the matter—"OUR LIBERTY depends on the FREEDOM OF THE PRESS and THAT CANNOT BE LIMITED WITHOUT BEING LOST."

Bullet Killing Man Sets Fire to Home

Samuel Cooper, 65, was found dead in bed, a bullet in his head, in a house at 816 Mifflin road, Hays, today. The bullet, which killed him, set fire to the bedclothes, but firemen extinguished the flames early.

A newspaper carrier first noted smoke issuing from the house. Cooper roomed at the home of John Evans, at whose gasoline station he worked. He had been in poor health, friends said.

COUNTY WILL PAY FOR WORK

Gollmar Still Holds Lead in Race For Sheriff

Democrats will ask a wide recount but will not ask that every ballot box in Allegheny County be recounted for evidences of fraud or error in the Common Pleas Court and Sheriff fights, it was reported today.

The report came upon the heels of the promise by County Commissioners yesterday that the Return Board judges were authorized to incur such expense as was necessary to recount boxes where wrong counts were indicated.

IRREGULARITIES FOUND

So far, a dozen districts have been ordered recounted, and irregularities were found in a number of tally sheets.

The Recount and Return boards started work this morning amid a growing complexity of issues. They had canvassed 326 districts at noon.

Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, Republican, led his Democratic opponent, John Heinz, by 163 votes in combination of official and unofficial counts.

About half a dozen ballots without numbers, and with the corners where the numbers should have been still attached, were discovered by the Recount Board in the First District of the Third Ward, according to Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, representing the Democrats.

McGinnis said the ballots had been cut to low.

Heinz, however, picked up 2[illegible] votes in a recount of the Fourth District, Seventh Ward, and two from the Second District, Second Ward.

A petition asking recount of the Ninth District, Twenty-second Ward, was dropped, while Attorney A. L. Wolk planned asking recount of the First and Second

ELECTION CASE GOES TO JURY

A jury in Federal Court today deliberated on the evidence in the first of the government's congressional vote fraud prosecutions involving a Hill District election board and a Negro constable.

The verdict was expected to test the strength of the government's attack in all of the cases charging vote frauds, embracing a total of 107 defendants, among them State Senator James J. Coyne and a number of his chief lieutenants.

As a verdict was being debated, a second group of defendants, consisting of five election board members of the Nineteenth District, Fourth Ward, was placed on trial.

JURY RETIRES

Twelve men who heard the testimony in the initial case retired at 10:45 a. m.

The defendants are Mike Wendell, judge; Carman Bosco and Charles P. Betters, inspectors; James Stuhlfire and Louis D. Petty, clerks, all of the election board of the Ninth District, Third Ward, and George Taylor, constable.

All are charged with conspiracy to violate the election laws.

MORGAN HAS 'TEA PARTY' WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

BANKER DENIED MONEY POLICY INFORMATION

Visit Held Similar to Montagu Norman Incident

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. — J. Pierpont Morgan had tea at the White House just like Montagu Norman.

Mrs. Roosevelt was there all the time.

The great financier came down —if official guessing is right—to get a line on President Roosevelt's new monetary policies. He and his associates — especially his associates — have been cool towards the executive's recently inaugurated gold buying program.

Morgan came with Myron Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation board. They were with the President a little more than half an hour. Afterwards it was made known that they had tea and that Mrs. Roosevelt was in on the tea party.

BANKER GENIAL

The banker was in a genial enough mood when he left, but refused to talk about his meeting with the President. The conference was not on the President's regular schedule of engagements made public daily. It was not announced at all. Leaving, Morgan joined Taylor in saying:

"You boys understand we can't discuss what we were talking about with the President of the United States."

The pair then drove to Union Station and left the capital. Later, at the White House, it was made known there was little that either Morgan or Taylor could have revealed had they felt like talking.

SIMILAR MEETING

Similar circumstances marked the visit of the English banker, Montagu Norman, when the President was in Poughkeepsie last summer. Norman sought and was granted a meeting with Mr. Roosevelt.

When he arrived at the summer White House he found himself in the midst of a gay tea party. The President was there. So was Mrs. Roosevelt, other members of the family, and a number of friends.

There was no chance to talk business.

Roosevelt Statement On Money Policy Due

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(Universal.)—To reassure American business, President Roosevelt is planning a statement to the country shortly to clarify the administration's monetary policy, Universal Service is advised in high quarters.

It is also learned the revamped Treasury Department leadership is considering issuance of United States notes—greenbacks—to retire maturing federal obligations in December.

This course is open under the Thomas amendment, authorizing a maximum of $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks, which would have to be retired at the rate of four per cent annually. A decision is expected soon.

School Man's Trial For Theft Near End

MEADVILLE, Pa., Nov. 17.—(INS.)—With the prosecution nearing completion of its case, indications were that the trial of Paul J. Murphy, former Titusville High School principal, on charges of burglary would be placed in the hands of the jury late today.

In direct examination, Murphy had testified that the alleged pilfering of school desks on the night of August 20, last, was done at the "suggestion and request" of one of his superiors.

Cripple Kidnaped, Robbed by Bandits

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Two men today kidnaped Martin Sloey, a 28-year-old crippled filling station proprietor, drove him to Mt. Morris, Pa., and then dumped him out of their automobile after robbing him of $27.

Woodin Quit Treasury In Dispute, Cox Says

William H. Woodin, on indefinite leave of absence, as Secretary of the Treasury, quit because he disagreed with President Roosevelt on inflation, according to Father James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church.

That was the opinion he expressed last night in Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall before representatives of six leading Western Pennsylvania retail organizations, holding a protest meeting against the alleged unfair trade practices.

Declaring himself in sympathy with President Roosevelt and in favor of inflation, the candidate on the Jobless ticket for president who withdrew before the election, then fired pointed language at the "money dictators."

He declared the business men in the country "are greater leaders than men advertised like Charles M. Schwab" and that they have to do the same as the farmers in Iowa—they have to get together, say what they want and stand for it. He said:

"The NRA is not going to do anything unless you stand by. Money is still the cog—if NRA goes through then you have a chance.

"We say we do not want a Mussolini; where could we get one? We say we do not want a Stalin or a Hitler, he persecuted my brethren. Where can you find a worse dictatorship than the money leaders in the United States? What in the name of God do we want?"

As for the chain groups, Father Cox said he was against the system.

SILVER MONEY PARLEY OPENS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Remonetization of silver will do more to restore economic prosperity than any other relief measure, Senator Pittman (Dem.), of Nevada, declared today in opening a conference called by the Committee for the Nation to consider plans for expanding the currency.

Pittsman reviewed the history of silver as a coin. He asserted its remonetization by the United States would be a "sound, safe and natural reflation of the currency of the world and start the purchase of our surplus productions by peoples who have been deprived of this opportunity through the unnatural depression in the exchance value of their money—silver." He added:

"Let us get behind the President in the plan to coin silver produced in the United States, in the hope and belief that such action will be followed by India, Canada, Mexico, Peru and Australia."

With them were held the customs inspector of Matamoros, Mexico, and two other Matamoros officials. The inquiry was nearly complete and the men were expected to be released within a day or two, apparently having satisfied the government of their innocence.

OVERTON FRAUD EVIDENCE TOLD

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Edward Blaise, who served as an Overton commissioner in the primary election won by Senator John H. Overton, today told the Senate committee investigating the election that attempts were made to stuff the ballot boxes in his precinct by Overton officials.

Blaise said he had prevented it, but that when the count was made, 17 ballots were found under the ballot box. He said also that he was discharged as a New Orleans dock board patrolman the next day.

Sixteen of the ballots found under the box, he testified, were for ex-Senator Edwin S. Broussard, who was defeated and who filed charges of fraud against Senator Overton.

A number of strikes, most of them resulting from disputes among the trades, have occurred on the federal building.

FIGHT IN COURT FOR PRIZE PUP

A court fight was in progress today over possession of a prize Pomeranian that weighs five pounds and answers to the name of Tiny.

Tiny belonged to Mrs. Annie O. Wilson, of Rippey street, according to Attorney M. J. Hosack.

But while Mrs. Wilson was ill, the pup was sold to Mr. and Mrs. George F. Hackius, of Carnegie, not by Mrs. Wilson, it seems, but by another person.

So Mrs. Wilson now wants Tiny returned and her counsel asked the courts to advance the trial because, in the ordinary course of events, it would not be heard for another year.

However, Mr. and Mrs. Hackius want to keep Tiny, who has won a ribbon in a Sewickley dog show. Tiny, they say, may not have the most royal pedigree in the world, although his background is quite worthy, but they like him nevertheless.

Judge Samuel H. Gardner reserved decision on Mrs. Wilson's request.

STATE FRAMES WORK RELIEF PROJECTS

Roosevelt Program To Give 300,000 Jobs Launched

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 17.—President Roosevelt's civil works program got under way today in Pennsylvania, where about $35,000,000 will be spent giving work to approximately 300,000 persons.

Eric H. Biddle, civil works administrator for the state, asked state department heads to submit to him by the early part of next week lists of projects upon which work can begin immediately.

The program will spread out during the rest of the month to the entire state, with appointment of municipal civil works administrators to ascertain what local projects can be included in the emergency program. Biddle hopes to have all projects started by the middle of December.

Half of those to be given work, Biddle told cabinet members, will be drawn from the relief lists and half from the self-sustaining unemployed of the state.

In outlining the program to the cabinet, Biddle pointed out that there is to be no "cheating" to get grants from the civil works fund. Major projects for which public works funds have been or are to be asked will not be permitted under the civil works scheme, he explained.

Aides to Eric H. Biddle, civil works administrator for Pennsylvania, in administering civil works program which promises to give employment to 300,000 men in the state were named today by Harry L. Hopkins.

They are: Gov. Gifford Pinchot, Lieut. Gov. E. C. Shannon, C. A. Waters, State Treasurer; Frank Baldwin, Auditor General, and Grover C. Talbot, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

BROKER URGES U. S. TO POLICE EXCHANGES

Confidence of Public In Wall Street Blasted, He Says

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Creation of a federal board to regulate stock exchange practices was recommended today in a letter to the Senate Stock Market Committee from Henry Goldman, Jr., a member of the exchange.

Goldman submitted his recommendation in a letter to Chairman Fletcher, enclosing a letter he had written the exchange asserting "the banks and the bankers" have lost the confidence of the public.

URGES BOARD

The writer said his father for many years up to 1917 was senior member of Goldman, Sachs & Co.

He recommended that the government appoint a board of six men, composed of two members of the Senate Banking Committee, two members of the exchange and two businessmen to "establish rules and regulations on the various stock exchanges for trading in securities which are not only legal, but fair and equitable to all concerned."

The board should have power, he said, to "supervise, regulate and scrutinize the activities of stock exchanges, stock exchange firms and stock exchange members."

CONFIDENCE NEED

Goldman's recommendations, believed here the most drastic ever proposed by a member of the exchange, were placed before the committee today by Fletcher at the opening of the hearing into organization of General Theaters Equipment, Inc. Goldman said:

"In my opinion, the banks, bankers and stock exchanges of the country have lost the confidence of the public, and I believe that this confidenc must be restored as a part of the general program of recovery.

"Men that I have contact with in my business life consider you and your committee the enemies of Wall street. I, for one, do not."

WARNS EXCHANGE

Goldman disclosed a letter to Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, in which he warned that "unless we, the stock exchange members, initiate and bring about these changes, there is no telling how far the government will go."

The broker's recommendations to Whitney were far more elaborate than those to the Senate committee.

He advocated that the governing committee of the exchange be enlarged to include two senators, two governors of the Federal Reserve Board, the president of a life insurance company and the president of a fire insurance company.

Among his other recommendations were:

"That the membership of the New York Stock Exchange shall be divided into two classes—brokers and dealers—and that each member shall be registered with the exchange as broker or dealer.

"That dealers shall be allowed to buy and sell securities for their own account only."

She was releaser on bond, which was raised from $5,000 to $10,000 after the arraignment. It was indicated she would face trial the third Monday in January.

The murder charge, lodged against her last summer, was based on an alleged deathbed statement by Dr. Kennedy charging Dr. Dean with handing him a poisoned whisky highball at her apartment during a night visit there.

MEAT STRIKERS RETURNING TO WORK

Normal Operations at Plants Expected In Few Days

The first break in the ranks of striking meat workers occurred today as a handful of employes reported for duty at packing plants.

At the same time Attorney James Milholland, representing the packers and distributors, issued a statement that in their opinion "operations presently will be normal" and that by tomorrow all retail dealers will be "plentifully supplied."

The statement said:

"The packing companies feel the strike is not the result of dissatisfaction among their employes, but rather it is the result of intimidation."

GIRL BEATEN

At the Swift and Company plant, South Twenty-first and Carson streets, today, three striking drivers returned to work. They were assigned to unloading freight cars, no attempt being made to operate trucks as yet.

Several girls who had been on strike returned to their tasks at the Pittsburgh Provision and Packing Company, Herrs Island, police said.

Florence Rodgers, 20, of 915 High street, Sharpsburg, an employe of the Provision and Packing Company, is in St. John's Hospital, her face scratched by two striking girl employes, according to police reports. Two girls, sisters, followed her and attacked her as she alighted from a street car at Butler and Sixty-second streets, she reported to company officials.

LEADER FINED

John Wenzel, 37, of 832 Lockhart street, leader of a crowd of strike sympathizers that halted a truckload of meat from Buffalo Wednesday, was fined $25 or 30 days in jail by Magistrate John J. Sweeney in North Side Police Court today.

The drivers, John Farrclough and John Mason, both of Buffalo, testified Wenzel had threatened to fire the truck and beat them if they attempted to proceed. Three others arrested with Wenzel were discharged.

Fred Holbert, 33, of 2710 Spring Garden avenue, an alleged striker, was fined $10 or 30 days in jail, accused of having thrown a brick at a truck owned by the William Zoller Company. Andrew Muehldauer, 26, of 1261 High street, and Joseph Speahr, 17, of 1237 High street, were fined $5 each, with the alternative of 5 days in jail, by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones, in Morals Court this morning.

REJECT MEDIATION

Arrested yesterday in a group of picketers outside the Oswald and Hess packing plant on the North Side, the youths were accused of disorderly conduct.

Judge George V. Moore yesterday granted an order restraining any interefernce with the Zoller and Hess companies, both in the hands of State Senator Frank J. Harris as receiver.

According to A. C. Jewett, executive of the NRA Regional Labor Board, the packers yesterday rejected the board's proffer of mediation, stating they are complying with the NRA, and that they are ready at any time to talk with duly accredited representatives of employes.

"Very sorry I cannot attend interesting lunch to Ripley. I am enveloped in fog like the government. Like them, I am unable to get anywhere."

City Architect Slated To Go After Ladder Inspection

The new Mayor-elect reformed today.

Mr. McNair publicly announced that he was going to "cut out all this monkey business" and go in for dignity.

How long will the reformation last?

Well, the Mayor-elect admitted:

"I can't tell."

Not only did the Mayor-elect renounce "monkey business," but he promised that in the future he would have less to say about his fixation—the single tax.

TAKES THE PLEDGE

McNair took the pledge in a speech before the Henry George Club. He all but raised a solemn right hand into the air as he declared:

"I intend to cut out all this monkey business and get down to be a real Mayor-elect."

The Mayor-elect's reformation is not expected to be more than 99 per cent complete. In the same speech today he referred to his ladder inspection of the City-County Building's heating system yesterday:

"I find that the architect in the building put the radiators behind the marble walls. We'll have no city architect after this."

McNair's reluctant—and no doubt temporary—desertion of the single tax was announced incidentally. Another single-taxer, George Evans, suggested that the 31 Democratic clubs in the city be converted into Henry George clubs. To which McNair replied:

"If we've got 31 ward associations that can talk single tax, they can take that load off my shoulders . . . The chances are if I stop talking single tax nobody'll want to hear me again.

"I spoke at a big meeting of Italians and I think the only reason they came to hear me was because they wondered if the single tax is a new tax on bachelors or a new Democratic drink."

REFERS TO SPEECH

The Mayor-elect made this reference to an earlier speech made today before the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania:

"I told the Historical Society of my relationship to an old family named Oberholtzer who came here and changed their name to Overholt. Being elected, I can run the risk of losing the dry vote by mentioning it."

Before he reformed McNair had one final workout today. He said:

"I want to remember that man."

"That man" is G. R. Givens, inspector of the City Bureau of Building Inspection, who tangled orally with McNair during the mayoralty campaign when McNair toured the slums of the Hill district. By way of entertaining conversation Givens told McNair:

"You have no more chance of being elected than I have."

McNair also announced he'd be more than glad to speak on the same platform with Mrs. Gifford Pinchot at Vandergrift next Wednesday, the prospects for an unusual evening being good. Mrs. Pinchot has been having trouble finding a platform from which to speak.

TOUHY TO FACE LEGAL ACE

International News Service.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 17.—Abandoning its plan of calling Roger Touhy himself as the first witness, counsel for the defense in the William Hamm kidnaping trial today began the recitation of a score of sworn statements, proving, in effect, that Gus Schaefer, another of the four defendants, was in California before, during and after the Hamm abduction.

The hope of putting Touhy on the stand before Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan returned to St. Paul to handle the cross-examination was dashed when it was learned that while Touhy might testify today, the prosecution could obtain a delay in cross-examination until Keenan arrived.

'Dad,' Pitt Candy Man, Ousted; Students Act

For three years Frank Pryer, "Dad" to hundreds of Pitt students, has conducted his little candy booth on the seventh floor of the Cathedral of Learning.

He has swept up the place, kept it clean in spite of his rheumatism. He has enjoyed the confidence of a lot of the boys. He is a likable fixture.

He was, taht is, until the other day the department of buildings and grounds ruled that only students could conduct concessions on the campus. And he was ordered to leave, candy booth and all, January 1.

He hates to go back selling apples on the streets, as he used to. And since his wife died in the spring, the laughing boys and girls have been company for him. They made life fairly pleasant.

Anyhow, five students started out totday to get 1,000 names on petitions. And when they get the pages filled, they're going to ask Pitt officials to make "Dad" an exception, since he's almost 70, and wouold find it very hard to start all over again. The boys are Mark Mason, J. W. McKnight, Charles Lawrence, Ralph F. Keenan and W. M. McCandless.

The high that covered most of the country east of the Rocky Mountain yesterday morning is now centered over the Middle Atlantic coast, considerably diminished in area, while the low that was centered over Alberta is now centered north of Lake Superior. As a result of this rapid change in pressure there was a marked rise in temperature over the country since yesterday morning and cloudiness has set in over the lake region and the Ohio Valley states. Precipitation for the last 24 hours was limited to light snowfall over the lower lakes and southward over the Appalachian Mountains. Another high has developed over the plateau section, pressure 30.46 inches, at Boise, Idaho, resulting in clear skies over most of the western states. Pressure is relatively low in Central Alaska and the temperature ranges from 12 to 18 degrees above zero.

Suspect in Kidnap Death Sings in Cell

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 17.—(INS.)—Jack Holmes, one of the confessed slayers of Brooke Hart, was singing and whistling in his jail cell here today.

He asked amazed jailers who reported he apparently was unconcerned over his plight:

"Why shouldn't I sing?"

TELL OF SHOTS IN GAINES CASE

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Neighbors of Dr. and Mrs. James I. Gaines have testified for the state in the murder trial of Mrs. Gaines that three shots were fired the morning of last August 15 when the physician was slain in the driveway of his home.

One of them, Miss Elizabeth Callison, whose bedroom overlooked the driveway, said within a few seconds after the third shot Mrs. Gaines was calling to members of the Callison family for help.

The last two witnesses yesterday laid the groundwork for the state's expected testimoney—the life of the wealthy drugless doctor and sportsman in the last months of his life. They were Miss Catherine Pluym, his former office nurse, and Miss Mildred Trask, the sister of Mrs. Harriette Andrew, in whose company Gaines allegedly spent much of his time the last three weeks of his life.

Miss Pluym said Mrs. Gaines appeared at her husband's office daily to keep books. Miss Trask told of a trip to Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, with Gaines the evening before he was shot.

BODY OF KIDNAP VICTIM SOUGHT IN BAY

2 Admit Slaying Young Store Executive, Police Say

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Efforts to recover the body of Brooke L. Hart, which authorities said would complete the case against his alleged kidnapers and slayers, were pressed by state and federal authorities today.

John M. Holmes, 29, and Thomas H. Thurmond, 28, who Department of Justice agents and state officials said confessed to throwing Hart in San Francisco bay after abducting him, were held in a San Francisco jail.

Grappling hooks brought up a strip of white cloth with thin purple stripes from the bay near the place the two men were quoted as saying they tossed the 22-year-old San Jose store executive.

Authorities said the material matched the description of a shirt Hart was wearing when he vanished shortly before a $40,000 ransom demand was made by telephone to his family November 9.

A San Francisco police boat and a yacht, owned by a friend of the Hart family, were engaged in the dragging operations.

MOB THREATENS SUSPECTS

The efforts to recover the body were started shortly after Holmes and Thurmond allegedly confessed yesterday and were taken to San Francisco to prevent possible mob violence from San Jose residents, who swarmed about the courthouse here.

Sheriff William J. Emig, who trapped Thurmond in a telephone booth at a San Jose garage while the latter was allegedly making further ransom demands on Alex J. Hart, wealthy San Jose merchant and father of young Hart, said no one except the two men was involved.

Holmes was later arrested at a hotel, to which officers were led by Thurmond, and was taken to San Francisco, where he was questioned by state and federal authorities.

FACE DEATH PENALTY

The two men were temporarily held under the federal kidnaping law. District Attorney Fred Thomas said here they will be prosecuted under a state law which makes the penalty for kidnaping, where the victim suffers bodily injury, death or life imprisonment.

Sheriff Emig said the alleged confessions of the two men varied only in minor details and in that each sought to place the major responsibility on the other.

As quoted by Sheriff Emig and other officials the men said they abducted young Hart while he was leaving a parking lot in his automobile, took him to the bridge, knocked him unconscious with a brick, bound him and weighted him down and then threw him into the bay.

RESPECTED FAMILIES

Holmes, operator of a San Jose service station, and Thurmond, until recently employed by an oil company, are members of respected Santa Clara County families.

No suspicion was directed toward them, Sheriff Emig said, until the telephone call to the Hart home was quickly traced and Thurmond was found in the garage booth.

Holmes' wife, after hearing of his arrest, went to the home of a sister in Stockton, taking with her the couple's two children, David, 6, and Joyce, 5. Ira B. Langdon, a Stockton attorney, announced he had been retained by her to represent Holmes.

Hart's parents were reported prostrated by grief. The elder Hart fainted when he was notified by Max Blum, a close friend, that his son was dead.

WEATHER HALTS SETTLE FLIGHT

International News Service.

AKRON, Nov. 17.—The bad weather jinx, which held Lieut.-Comm. T. G. W. Settle's stratosphere balloon to the ground at the Chicago World Fair, continued to shadow him today and forced postponement of the latest attempt to ascend into the upper regions of the atmosphere.

Because of a wind of 22 miles an hour, which freshened just after dawn, the flight was definitely abandoned for today. Weather maps will be studied shortly after midnight tonight to determine whether the hopoff will take place tomorrow.

All is in readiness for the flight. The 600,000 cubic feet gas bag is inflated and anchored inside the huge airdock hangar here. Maj. Chester Fordney, Marine Corps scientist, is scheduled to accompany the Navy flier on the adventure.

GIRL PROTESTS LAWYER FEES

Madeline McKnight complained to the courts today that she doesn't think the lawyers should get as much as $18,000 out of the estate left her by her father, Paddy McKnight, the Soho political boss.

Through a brother John, Madeline, a minor, filed exceptions to the lawyers' bills for services in connection with settling the estate. She thinks they're excessive.

Attorney Howard Neely has a bill totalling $10,235, Howard Zacharias' is $5,000 and J. Frank McKenna's $3,000. The complaint will be heard November 27.

Judge Refuses Jail For Jobless Man

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(Universal.)—A man who is jobless and has earned only $14 in two months shouldn't be sent to jail because he can't pay $510 back alimony. That's what Supreme Court Justice Norton said in Brooklyn court in the case of Amelia Damchlaski against her husband.

COLD WAVE HERE 'BREAKS' AFTER 11 DEATHS

Milder Weather Due As Frigid Blasts Turn to North

The mercury went bounding up towards the thirties today as the record-breaking cold wave, which left death, destruction and discomfort in its path, veered back to the northlands.

But not before another record was broken. Today's lowest, 15 degrees at 3 a. m., set a new low for this date. The previous record was 19 degrees in 1891.

Rain is predicted for tomorrow morning, according to W. S. Brotzman, meteorologist. West of Chicago, where Pittsburgh weather ordinarily originates, he said, temperatures climbed to the forties.

Deaths in Pennsylvania due to the three-day near-zero wave were set at 11, and many were injured in sledding and automobile accidents.

Kenneth Strong, 8, of Edmon, was in a critical condition in Citizens' General Hospital at New Kensington today with a fractured skull suffered when his sled crashed into a truck while he was coasting near his home last night, according to a hospital report.

John F. Cox, 10, of Oakhurst, died in Johnstown Memorial Hospital today from head injuries received when his sled crashed into a truck, while Jean Lambert, 17, of Moxham, is in a critical condition in the same hospital as the result of a similar accident.

The condition of Nathan B. Jacobs, of Pittsburgh, vice president of Morris Knowles, Inc., engineers, remained critical as the result of an automobile accident near Blairsville. He also is in the Johnstown Hospital.

Substations of the United States Weather Bureau in the mountains of Pennsylvania and West Virginia reported zero temperatures there.

KILLED IN SKID ON BOULEVARD

Kenneth Moore, 23, New Kensington, driver of the car, escaped injury. He told Homicide Detectives James O'Kane and Robert Carroll that his car skidded on the ice-caked boulevard at a curve.

'One-Punch' Mary Flees Suit; May 'Sock' Serge

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 17.—While Mary McCormic was speeding East by airplane today, pretty Grace Williams, a writer, prepared to file a $1,000,000 damage suit against the grand opera diva as a result of the one-slap encounter in a Los Angeles newspaper office.

Announcement that the suit would be filed today was made by Attorney S. S. Hahn.

Miss Williams is the biographer for Prince Serge Mdivani, who was divorced Tuesday by Miss McCormic.

The two women met late Wednesday night in the newspaper office, where Miss Williams was negotiating to sell the details of the McCormic-Mdivani settlement.

"I can dish it out and I can take it. But when it comes to process servers I'm on my way. I've got a feeling that I'm about to be sued. So-oo-oo, Jeeves, call me an airplane!

Miss McCormic, who described herself as "One-Punch" Mary, made that statement as she stepped into a United Airlines plane yesterday. Her passage was booked for New York, but she said she planned to open a two-week's engagement Tuesday in Detroit.

As she shook the stardust of Hollywood from her dainty feet, Miss McCormic said:

"If, as and when I ever see Serge again, I doubt if I will be able to restrain myself from socking that complacent countenance of his."

At the same time Miss Williams declared:

"Most certainly I'm going to institute a suit."

YULE RUM SALE LIMITED UNDER PINCHOT BILL

unless it is purchased from a state store. The maximum penalty fixed is $1,000 fine and one year in jail.

On this point, the bill states:

"It shall be unlawful for any person except a manufacturer or the (alcohol permit) Board to keep any liquor within this commonwealth which has not been purchased from a Pennsylvania liquor store."

Explaining this, one high state official cautioned:

"If you go down to Atlantic City—or any place outside the state—and buy liquor be s e to drink it all before you come home."

It was pointed out that this restriction should work no hardship on connoisseurs of rare brands because the bill also stipulates that state stores must purchase and sell any type of liquor desired.

Liquor manufactured after repeal and exported would be taxed $1 per proof gallon if distilled, 30 cents per proof gallon if rectified and 1 cent per unit of proof per gallon for wines under the administration's program.

Imported liquor before January 1 will be assessed the same taxes except that rectified beverage will be charged $1.30 per proof gallon. The importation taxes will become inoperative after e state stores begin functioning because no liquor sold to state stores is to be taxed and no other imports are permissable.

Phila. Wets, Drys Oppose Pinchot Control Plan

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Republicans and Democrats, wets and drys, are lining up in Philadelphia against Gov. Pinchot's liquor control program, now before a special session of the Legislature.

James M. Hazlett, Republican city chairman, has called a caucus of Philadelphia Republican members of the Legislature to discuss liquor legislation tomorrow.

Asserting he strenuously opposed the Governor's plan for a state monopoly, Hazlett said:

"I do not know the feeling of the entire delegation, but I think there is a great deal of sentiment in favor of the revival of the Brooks High License Law."

John B. Kelly, Democratic city leader, sent the Governor a telegram in which he warned of "most serious consequences" if the Governor's plans become law.

Referring to the proposed tax on liquor to be sent out of the state, Kelly telegraphed it "would be a great hardship to the farmers" as "in essence this means a levy on farm products such as rye."

"Distillers informed me they would have to shut down or move to another state."

While changes were being urged by the leaders of the two parties, both of which supported repeal in a state referendum, another protest was being voiced by Bishop Ernest G. Richardson, president of the National Anti-Saloon League. He asserted the state "should stay out of the liquor business" and said:

"I am still convinced that total prohibition is the only way to handle the question."

districts, First Ward, McKees Rocks; the First of the First, Pittsburgh, and the Twenty-fifth, of the Fourteenth Ward.

As well as for Sheriff, Democrats were following the recounted votes of John J. Kennedy, their candidate for Common Pleas Court, as against Judge Harry H. Rowand.

JUDGE RACE CLOSE

With 60 districts missing in the unofficial returns, Rowand had a 5,701 lead. But Kennedy yesterday said he believed figures taken by his checker gave him more than 500 gain over that computation.

Fate of votes in the Eighth District of the Seventeenth Ward, where armed thugs stole a number of the ballots, still hung in the air.

Democratic and Republican attorneys presented statements for and against inclusion of the disputed votes yesterday. But argument was postponed to await transcription of testimony from a hearing of the district board earlier this week.

PRIESTS OPPOSE WINE PLAN

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—Opposition of authorities of the Roman Catholic Church to Gov. Gifford Pinchot's plan for liquor control, which includes exclusive dispensation of sacramental wines through state stores, was expressed here today.

The opposition was in the form of a news article and editorial appearing today in the Catholic Standard and Times, which is the official organ of the archdiocese of the state of Pennsylvania of which Denis Cardinal Dougherty is archbishop.

The newspaper pointed out that the system of state distribution was tried in some of the southern states during prohibition and was found unsatisfactory to the clergy, who were forced to stand in line at dispensaries to obtain wine for mass.

The paper said the wines were not always satisfactory as to quality.

Michigan Liquor Control Mapped

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 17.—(INS.)—State monopoly of the sale of liquor at wholesale and retail was proposed in the liquor control bill completed by the Michigan legislative council today and sent to all members of the Legislature.

Sale of liquor by the glass is permitted in the bill only in hotels and restaurants in cities where the majority of the voters or two-thirds of the governing body approve the plan.

BALLOT FRAUD CASE GOES TO JURY

government are to be considered. Your verdict must be reached by consideration of the evidence brought out in this courtroom and not by anything you may have read."

The court explained that, although seven overt acts were charged in the indictment, a guilty verdict could be rendered if one charge were sustained.

CONSPIRACY RULING

At least two must be found to have conspired to warrant a verdict of guilty as to conspiracy, the court stated.

Closing addresses were made yesterday afternoon by Attorney Sebastian C. Pugliese for the defense, and Attorney Earl F. Reed, special prosecutor appointed by the government to prosecute alleged election frauds that involved candidacies of persons seeking federal offices.

Attorney Pugliese asked the jurors to consider during their deliberations the fact that records showed that in the casting of 279 ballots at the polling place in the Letsche School, 90 of the voters received assistance in preparing their ballots.

DEFENSE CLAIM

He said irregularities charged by the government might have occurred before some of the ballots were placed in the ballot box. He also said that of the ballots in which the government charged dissimilarity in crossmorks there were only nine votes for M. J. Muldowney, Republican, over the number for Mrs. Anne E. Felix Democrat, candidates for Congress.

Upon conviction under the federal code defendants in such cases are subject to a maximum sentence of 10 years and a maximum fine of $5,000.

The trial of five members of the election board of the Nineteenth District, Fourth Ward, got under way today. It originally was postponed because of the other case still on trial.

The defendants are Joseph Tortorelli, judge; Malachi Tiernan and Irvin Braun, inspectors; Bernard Grossman and John. F. McNally, clerks. They were represented by Attorneys E. G. Coll, A. M. Oliver and John A Metz.

DRYS MAP WAR TO HOLD UP REPEAL

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—A surprise court attempt to prevent prohibition repeal from becoming effective December 5 was being planned today by a group of fighting drys.

Although dubious of the success of the movement, since 37 states have voted for repeal and the last necessary ratification convention will be held December 5, the dry group is exploring every possible legal angle of attack.

CHASE REVEALS PLAN

Canon William Sheafe Chase, secretary of the International Reform Federation, disclosed that the movement is not only under way to prevent ratification from becoming effective but that the court battle will be continued in any event. He said:

"We must find a way to hold up repeal on December 5, and we have plans. We are not ready to disclose them, but will in due time."

While some dry leaders have accepted repeal as a mere matter of formality, the Chase group will fight through to the Supreme Court under present plans.

Two cases—one in Pennsylvania and one in Vermont—offer the drys a chance to assail the constitutionality of repeal in the high court, he said.

While the drys failed in an attempt to prevent the repeal ratification election in Pennsylvania, they still have the chance to have the method declared invalid, he said.

LEGAL STRATEGY

After a decision in Dauphin County Court, however, Mr. Chase explained, the drys would have to appeal to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court before reaching the nation's high tribunal.

Another move before the Vermont Supreme Court, he said, cannot be complete until in January.

The dry group claims the constitutional conventions which considered repeal were neither representative nor deliberative—as contemplated by the federal constitution. This contention was cited in a recent Missouri case which the court refused to consider but it may have acted on other grounds.

Advocates of repeal are not disturbed. They said the method chosen by Congress was approved by the leading constitutional lawyers of the country, and met every test prescribed for the submission of a constitutional amendment.

No Theory Found In Students' Death

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall, who took personal charge today of the investigation into the death of Jay F. Towner III, 23 years old, of Perryman, Md., said today no satisfactory theory had been found to account for the presence of the youth's crushed body on the university campus.

A new theory, that Towner fell off a ledge on the third floor of Kuyot Hall, advanced after a window was found open, was termed "highly improbable" by the prosecutor.

JUDGE SMITH CALLS COYNE 'BETRAYER'

State Senator James J. Coyne was charged with betraying the desires of the majority of Republicans in an address last night by Common Pleas Court Judge Ralph H. Smith. Judge Smith also launched an attack against Representative Joseph G. Steedle, of McKees Rocks, through whom he said Coyne is once more attempting to seize the reins of leadership in the Republican organization.

Judge Smith pointed out that Steedle treated the people to a "disgusting spectacle" when he led the fight this week against the state-owned liquor store provision of the Governor's liquor bill. This while both "share the suspicion which comes from federal indictments," Judge Smith said.

TALKS TO BANKERS

Judge Smith spoke in the Keystone Athletic Club at the monthly meeting of the American Institute of Banking.

Judge Smith, in part, said:

"No party can ask to be entrusted with the responsibilities of office that does not accurately represent the will of its membership. The Democratic victory at the general election was only a repudiation by the Republicans of Allegheny County of the Coyne leadership, which had betrayed the desires of the majority of Republicans.

"Coyne and his gang have not learned their lesson. Once more, through Steedle, he is attempting to seize the reins of leadership of the party.

"In the last week, the people have been treated to the disgusting spectacle of seeing Steedle, whose political leadership and associations were repudiated at the polls, who, along with his leader, Coyne, shares the suspicion which comes from federal indictments, leading the fight against the state owned liquor stores, supported by wets and drys, alike, in the interest of a selfish few, who place private profit above public welfare.

ONLY FIRST ATTACK

"This is only the first attack of those who defy public will. This is not the courage of conviction, but stupidity and bullheadedness.

"That brazen attempt to again assume leadership should be resented by every Republican legislator who is interested in the public welfare and future rehabilitation of the Republican party.

"The eyes of the people are upon them, and every Republican legislator who fails to repudiate the Coyne-Steedle leadership and assert his independence of that leadership, faces the inevitable defeat at the polls which comes as a stern rebuke of an aroused public that has already spoken its mind on that subject."

OHIO GETS RUM CONTROL PLAN

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—White's advisory commission on liquor control today recommended that the trade in liquor in Ohio after effective repeal be centered in a three-member commission with sweeping powers to control the processing, sale by package or glass, price, and distribution of all liquor, wine and beer.

The eight men and two women of the advisory group, with only three dissenting chiefly over permission for sale of hard liquors by the glass developed a program of a state monopoly for wholesale and retail distribution of distilled spirits in packages for off premises consumption; for sale of wines, malt beverages and distilled liquors by the glass for consumption on premises at tables only where meals are served, in hotels, restaurants and clubs.

Urging a course of taxation that would at once provide a method of social control as well as revenue, and discourage bootlegging the commission recommended that the combined federal and state levy on 100-proof distilled liquor be $3 a gallon; on ordinary wines 30 cents a gallon, and on beer $5 a barrel.

School of Wine Balked Here as U.S. Bans Bottles

School is delayed for the Pittsburgh district stewards and maitre d' hotels today just because Uncle Sam considers empty bottles of famous French and Italian wines and rums as advertising matter and won't permit them to enter from Canada.

A lecture on the proper handling and care of rare wines, with bottles, minus their fluid, and all the trimmings necessary for serving a guest when the beverages become legal was being planned by the Pittsburgh Chapter, International Stewards and Caterers' Association. A. Albert, maitre d' hotel of the William Penn and president of the local group, is an expert on wine service.

Scheduled to give the lecture, Albert sought assistance from a friend, Johan Helders, maitre d' hotel at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, Canada. Helders gathered several boxes of the required bottles. Customs officers stopped the shipment. An appeal has been taken to the Commissioner of Customs at Washington.

DAVIS SUGGESTS LIQUOR BOARD

Speaking on liquor control over Station WJAS last night, Senator James J. Davis advocated county boards of licensing commissioners named by the courts and county commissioners to grant permits and licinses. As outlined, his plan would call for each board to consist of three members, one to be elected by the Supreme Court, one by Common Pleas of the county and one by the county commissioners.

Investigations have convinced him, he said, that Pennsylvania, with its Brooks high license law, had one of the best regulated and operating systems in the country before the advent of prohibition. He said in part:

"I suggest that every county and district shall have a board of licensing commissioners who shall have power to grant permits and licenses.

"The commission of the county should have the right to investigate the character and standing of all applicants, and the community where the license is to open his establishment should have the right to review the act of the licensing commission, and the act of the Common Pleas Court would be final. This would be much better than placing the appointing power in the hands of any one man."

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Some 40,000 cases of liquor destined for the United States are expected to pass through St. John early in December, it was learned today.

That is, if the ban on liquor importation into the United States is lifted at the time repeal is ratified, on or about December 5. Otherwise the 40,000 cases may stay here longer.

De Valera Stays Out Of Northern Ireland

FEDERAL MEN TO SUPERVISE MINE VOTING

Pittsburgh district miners will elect their representatives for collective bargaining at federal supervised elections in the captive mines next Wednesday, it was announced today by Jesse I. Miller, assistant to the chairman of the National Labor Board.

Supervisors for the elections will be sent into Pittsburgh next Tuesday. They will conduct the elections under rules laid down early this week in Washington following a conference between Dr. W. M. Leiserson, secretary of the board; Miller and Senator Robert H. Wagner, chairman.

Only those mines now operating will vote at this time, the board following to the letter the Presidential captive mine agreement which provides that elections shall be held "after the employes have returned to work."

Election notices have been posted at practically all of the mines affected by the Roosevelt truce agreement and polling places have been selected, for the most part, away from company property. Employes will vote as individual groups at each mine, selecting through the secret ballot six representatives for each mine. Any person may be nominated, the only requirement being 10 signatures on the nominating petition.

Nominations must be in the hands of National Labor Board officials at their headquarters in the William Penn Hotel no later than next Monday. The ballots will be printed Tuesday and distributed by a Labor Board supervisor at the polls to those eligible to vote, their eligibility being established by company payrolls as of last July 26, when the captive mine strike began.

For the most part local unions of the United Mine Workers of America are expected to nominate three international and three district officers. In District No. 5 the nominations, in all probability, will include:

In District No. 4 the nominations likely will be the same except for the district officers. William Hynes, recently appointed to succeed William Feeney, is president of District No. 4.

PRESS CODE HIT BY M'CORMICK

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor of the Chicago Tribune, last night expressed the opinion that the regimentation of American newspapers under a national recovery code was not permitted by the United States Constitution.

Col. McCormick, who reviewed the history of the long fight to establish the freedom of the press, spoke at the one hundred sixty-fifth anniversary banquet of the New York State Chamber of Commerce. He said:

"It must be very plain that a method that will permit costs to be put upon newspapers which they cannot bear will be more universally successful in suppressing them than any method—other than of licensing."

He added:

"If once the press is segregated for regulation, it may be destroyed, as was the press of England under the special tax laws. Therefore, it is highly questionable whether such regimentation is permissible under the first amendment (to the United States Constitution). In my opinion, it is not."

30-HOUR WEEK AT MINES ASKED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—(AP.)—A thirty-hour maximum workweek and compulsory equalization of working time under federal supervision were recommended for the anthracite industry today by Thomas Kennedy, of Hazleton, Pa., secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America.

Presenting the union's views at a Recovery Administration hearing on the hard coal code, Kennedy said the shortened workweek would "place thousands of men in jobs."

More equal division of available work among all the collieries of all companies owning more than one mine, he said, would insure work to additional thousands.

Farmers Join Fight On Truckers' Code

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—A proposal to regulate all trucking in the United States made at an NRA public hearing today drew an emphatic protest from spokesmen for farm trucking and many other classes which demanded exemption.

Johnson Brutal, Declares Beck, Denounces NRA

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Representative James M. Beck of Pennsylvania said last night that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, has assumed the "tone of a brutal taskmaster, cracking a whip at the industrial forces of America."

Congressman Beck, in an address before the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, said the NRA was fundamentally unconstitutional, and called the Blue Eagle "a symbol of economic bondage."

Tracing the development of the emergency acts of the administration, Congressman Beck said:

"The policy of those administering those laws has been neither conciliatory nor tactful. There has been a coercive pressure—at times brutal— to do that which the American people would have done willingly without the lash of a whip of a Washington bureaucrat."

The stand of Henry Ford in not signing the code for the automobile industry was supported by the Congressman. He said:

"It is not disputed at all that Henry Ford was under no legal obligation to sign the code.

"Insulting, abusive and threating remarks by Johnson met Ford's silence on the question, and were followed by sneering references to imaginary evasions after Ford had signified his intention to follow the provisions of the code without signing."

FIRM INDICTED UNDER NRA

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—A federal indictment for violating an NRA code—described by the prosecutor as the first of its kind—was returned by a Brooklyn grand jury today against a filling station chain.

Six of the nine counts in the indictment are based on working hours allegedly maintained by the firm. The other three charge that the company failed to post the price of gasoline in the manner prescribed by the code.

The president and vice president asserted they had not signed the code and maintained their business was outside the NRA's jurisdiction. They said they had engaged counsel to fight the case.

The indictment charges the company has been requiring employes to work 11 hours a day, 6 days a week, with one hour for lunch. The maximum under the code is 48 hours a week.

BUYERS FIGHT GASOLINE PRICE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The first protests against proposed oil prices were placed on the record today after Secretary Ickes, the oil administrator, had advised the oil industry that prices probably would not be fixed as scheduled on December 1 so as to give both sides an opportunity to present their views.

Gov. Miller and Senator-designate O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, appeared before the petroleum administrative board to argue that the price schedules would cost Wyoming people 3 to 5 cents a gallon extra for gasoline.

Gov. Miller contended that since Wyoming had so many refineries of its own, it was unreasonable to fix prices on the basis of the Oklahoma price plus freight. In one case, he said, this practice would cost the citizens of a certain region 8 cents more a gallon.

BISHOPS BACK ROOSEVELT ON RECOVERY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The bishops of the administrative committee of the National Catholic Welfare Conference in a statement today said the upset of the financial and economic structure "had its roots in forces that had been corroding and undermining the foundations of law, justice and morality for years."

Charging directly to voters many political, economic and social ills, the bishops said wise legislation could have averted many of them, adding:

NOT BEYOND CURE

Recognizing the gravity of present conditions, the bishops continued:

"It would be craven to entertain for a moment the thought that the situation is beyond cure, or that it calls for remedies so drastic as cummunism or a dictatorship."

Turning to the President's recovery program, they said:

"It is the best he could devise, it is the best Congress could construct, and any attempt to make partisan profit out of the present misery and distress is a crime against fair dealing and humanity."

The disclosures being made before the Senate Banking Committee were handled with the assertion:

"The publication of the crooked and dishonest practices of stockbrokers and bankers to fleece the public as revealed in this investigation has done as much to destroy respect for the integrity of commercial institutions and to fan the flames of discontent as the preaching of radicals and communists.

SEE MANDATE OBEYED

The bishops said President Roosevelt's recovery measures were created "in obedience to a peremptory mandate by the people in Congress," and that their execution was committed to the President "as a constitutional and sacred duty." They continued:

"Already every section of industry, commercial, financial and agricultural, every phase of economic life, all the departments of normal social activity are commencing to feel, in greater or less degree, the influence of his activities and are being revitalized by his efforts."

The bishops said:

"If public opinion can once more be made the expression of the moral law taught by Christ, no power on earth can prevent this nation from becoming what its founders hoped it would be, the home of liberty, of opportunity and of plenty."

But "the plague spots in our financial centers that destroyed business integrity and debased business methods must be made amenable to justice and decency," they continued.

Anthracite Strike Resumes After Truce

TAMAQUA, Pa., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Anthracite miners of the Panther Creek Valley are on strike today for the second time since they returned to work last week after several months' idlness.

Union leaders announced last night that a truce called Tuesday is off as a result of most of the 6,000 men employed by six collieries of the Lehigh Navigation Coal Company voting not to return to work until their demands are met.

Turkey Growers Ask U. S. to Boost Price

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Officers of western turkey growers' associations, with headquarters here, today had appealed to federal officials at Washington for relief from present low prices which, they declared, do not pay the grower for his costs.

Milk Ruling Appeal Voted by Producers

CARLISLE, Pa., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Two representatives of the Capital City Milk Producers' Association are empowered to appeal, if they see fit, the decision of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia denying an injunction to restrain the Secretary of Agriculture from enforcing price-fixing provisions of the Philadelphia milk code.

The association adopted a resolution last night delegating the appeal authority to Paul Sunday and A. S. Thompson. It also reiterated its protest against Dr. Clyde L. King as federal milk administrator.

STRACHEY HERE, SEES REVOLT

NRA means "no revolution as yet." At least, so thinks John Strachey, English author, in Pittsburgh today for a lecture engagement.

Strachey, at the Schenley Hotel, predicted war, revolt, and an overthrow of capitalism in the United States. The war will come first—with one of the European powers which he says bitterly resent Roosevelt's dollar policy.

Though a professed Communist, Strachey scoffed at the single tax plan, advocated by Mayor-elect McNair. He was surprised to learn that the theory is still alive, saying:

"Single tax would be 30 years too late for Pittsburgh. It may have been all right in the bouyant youth of American capitalism, but not today in its stiff old age."

Two books of Strachey's, "The Coming Struggle for Power," and "The Menace of Fascism," have been published in the United States this year. He is only 32.

Oakes, Ship Firm Vice President, Dies

Before his health began to fail he also was vice president in charge of operations of Cambria Steamship Company and the Mahoning Steamship Company.

SURPRISE HELPS HOLD 3 MULLS IN SLAYING

The three Mulls—Roy, Grace and their son, Elmer—were back in the County Jail today, held for court charged with the murder of Margaret Schwickrath, 24-year-old "mystery girl," whose body was dragged from a storm sewer October 30.

They were held yesterday by Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan, following "surprise" testimony by two women that Mrs. Mull told them Margaret was sick, although her body was lying unidentified in the County Morgue.

The women were Anna Formhals, 946 West North avenue, and Marion Scheider, 1308 Firth street, employed at the same packing plant as Mrs. Mull and Margaret.

TEST RESULTS SECRET

George F. P. Langfitt, first assistant district attorney, refused to divulge the results of blood tests made by County Chemist F. C. Buckmaster on trousers worn by Mull, declaring the hearing was not the time for such evidence.

County Detective Peter A. Connors testified Mrs. Mull told him of a .38 caliber revolver disappearing from the Mull farmhouse near Greensburg the morning of October 30, after she and her husband and Margaret had driven to the farm.

A man named Mike Cheslock, her son, Elmer, and another man were already at the farmhouse, Mrs. Mull was alleged to have told Connors. Cheslock was seen holding the weapon that morning by Mrs. Mull, according to her story to Connors.

CONVERSATION TOLD

Mrs. Mull was asked October 31, the day after the body of the "mystery girl" had been found, why she failed to go to see if it might be Margaret, according to Mrs. Marie Laufman, in whose apartment the Mulls lived at 816 East Ohio street. Mrs. Laufman testified:

"I asked her why she didn't look at the body after reading all about it in the papers, and it was so much like Margaret. She said the girls at the packing plant had looked and said it wasn't her. She also said she had talked with Margaret's attorney in Greensburg and was sure it couldn't be her body."

TRIAL IN WIFE SLAYING SET

BEAVER, Nov. 17.—James Milton Crawford, 50, of Conway, railroad telegrapher, will be tried at the December term of court for the murder of his wife, Hilda Marr Crawford, 38, last October 31. Crawford was committed without bail to the county jail.

Crawford, who worked at Canton, O., came home unexpectedly and found his wife away. When she returned in an automobile early in the morning Crawford opened fire on the driver of the car.

Mrs. Crawford jumped in the line of fire, presumably to shield her companion. She died without revealing his name.

FLEET 'SAVES' WEST COAST

AT SEA WITH THE UNITED STATES FLEET, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Ships of the United States fleet, having saved the Pacific coast from theoretical invasion by an "alien" fleet, were bound today for their home ports.

The major high sea "battle," ending late yesterday, closed the three-day maneuver off the California coast, and once again displayed the adaptability of aircraft in warfare.

The Navy's queen of the skies, the giant dirigible Macon, making its maiden trip as part of the United States fleet, however, was twice destroyed, theoretically, in the war games. In the concluding problem of the maneuvers—the repulse of an alien fleet—the Macon, serving as a scouting ship for the defending forces, was outdone by the cruiser force in locating the "invading" ships.

Heir Spurns City For Forest Life

RED WING, Minn., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—More appealing to Herman Ringland, gold prospector, is Canada's wilderness than Chicago's bright lights.

Given a trust fund of $14,541, which had been held for him six years, he was invited by his sister, Miss Rachel Ringland, of Chicago, to make his home with her.

America's cheaper dollar is the best salesman this country ever had, Franklin Johnston, editor and publisher of the American Exporter, asserted at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon yesterday. Domestic business improves when foreign trade improves, he pointed out.

CITY TO DECIDE NEW GARBAGE ORDINANCE

A conference to be called by President of Council Harry A. Little will decide the fate of the city's long-term garbage and rubbish ordinance.

Among those who will be invited to attend the conference are representatives of civic and business organizations, Mayor-elect William N. McNair, the five councilmen-elect, Mayor John S. Herron and prospective bidders on the long-term contract.

The conference was suggested late yesterday by Councilmen W. Y. English and Charles H. Anderson. It was also suggested by Anderson that copies of garbage and rubbish disposal specifications be sent to everybody invited to participate in the meeting. The date of the conference has not yet been set by President Little.

Councilman William J. Soost asked Council that milk bottles be excluded from the rubbish specifications. He explained that several milk dealers have protested to him that about 800,000 bottles weighing approximately 600 tons were collected as rubbish within the past year. The dealers, he said, must pay to have the bottles returned.

Councilman English pointed out that the 600 tons of bottles ran into a considerable item as the city, under the contract with the American Reduction Company, must pay $7 a ton for collected rubbish. Council, however, took no definite action yesterday to exclude bottles from the specifications.

The ordinance provides for a contract of one, three or five years to begin January 1, 1934.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Butch seems to be having a change of heart, fellows!

We noticed that in yesterday's Junior Patrol comic strip that he wasn't to be got back to his old ways by one of the tough boys he used to run around with.

Junior is in bad with Eloise because he is standing up for Butch, so let's hope Butch doesn't disappoint him and backslide now. We are all pulling for Butch to start going to school — to start in amounting to something right away.

Since Butch's team got scared and wouldn't play, we are wondering now if Junior's team will schedule any other games. Many Junior Patrols everywhere are playing football, but the bad weather lately has slowed up all football practice.

Don't be reckless this kind of weather, fellows. When it is cold this way, you want to bundle up warmly — not too stuffily, of course—and be sure to stay out of drafts. Best of all, you want to get plenty of exercise every day and eat good wholesome food.

Do you read the newspaper every day, fellows? We know that most Junior Patrol members are hunting through the paper every night to find the Mail Box, and surely on the way, you are reading many interesting things. And of course you often listen to the Globe Trotter on the radio.

How about more letters fellows? Surely you have more news about your patrols than we have heard about. Most patrols meet every week or so and a good captain will see to it that the lieutenant writes a letter reporting progress after every meeting.

Never give up looking for more members. The bigger your patrol the more fun you can have and more help you can be to others.

Again we want to remind you, fellows, about helping the Welfare Fund and other drives for money to feed and help poor and sick people. Tell everybody about it; ask them to help, and help yourselves as much as you can.

DOPE PEDDLING BY CHILDREN REVEALED

By WINIFRED BLACK
Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 17.—Did you ever see a copy of the New Orleans Picayune?

Fine conservative old newspaper, published and owned in the fine conservative, picturesque and interesting city of New Orleans.

Some one sent me a copy of the Times-Picayune Wednesday.

It was interesting to see all the news about the steamships and the levee and the cotton crop, and the plantations, and the great world news besides. One article in the Times-Picayune of November the seventh though made me shiver just a little.

PEDDLING CHARGED

Here is part of that article:

"A small army of boys and girls, many of whom are still in high school, is being used by a large-scale narcotic dealer in New Orleans to peddle narcotics on a commission basis, J. B. Greeson, head of the United States narcotics division here, charged Monday, announcing that police and federal officers of New Orleans have opened up a relentless war to stamp out this practice.

"A 16-year-old boy, Thomas E. Donovan, was charged before the United States Commissioner R. H Carter, Jr., Monday with violation of the Harrison narcotic act and was held in default of $3,000 bond.

"Mr. Greeson and Capt. James E. Cripps, of the Sixth Precinct Station, said they are faced with one of the most serious situations in the history of narcotic traffic in New Orleans.

Mr. Greeson said:

"The youngsters boast of the fact that they will not squeal on the higher-ups for whom they work, and they make good their boasts. I hate to arrest mere children, but have decided that this is the only step left."

WON'T LAST LONG

The big dope dealers won't want Thomas Donovan much longer—not if what he says is true.

The poor boy declares he is a dope himself, and brags he can't get along without four capsules of the stuff a day.

If what he says is true the dealers will soon be through with him.

They prefer to break in children who have never used any sort of dope.

They have a different line of customers and besides they are more reliable.

After they get "on the stuff" themselves they can't be trusted with 50 cents worth of dope or with 10 cents worth of change.

PLUNGE INTO MISERY

So they just plunge into hunger and cold and disgrace and misery—and the dealers break in a new lot.

You can't believe it, can you?

Neither could I, if I hadn't seen the same thing going on in other cities in different parts of the country.

And now that the marihuana crop is ripe—there will be a brand new crop of childish victims.

Mothers and fathers will begin to wonder what makes little Johnny so pale and listless and what on earth has happened to little sister to turn her from a bright, lively, good-natured child into a sly, sullen, morose, deceitful creature who seems to belong anywhere on earth but in a good honest home.

ACTION URGED

What on earth are we going to do about this hideous business of ruining every chance for success or decent happiness for a regular army of poor little boys and girls whose parents do not know how to protect them?

Will every mother and father who wants to protect the children write to Budget Director Douglas, Washington, D. C., and ask him if he can't find some way to make it possible for the Federal Narcotic Bureau to go after these vultures that feed on human degradation and get rid of them or at least put them under some kind of practical control?

The Narcotic Bureau budget has been cut so deep that there isn't a chance for actual practical control of this terrible situation.

How do you feel about it, neighbor?

Leetsdale Group To Give Minstrel

Wilderness Hero To Vie in Dog Race

SEATTLE, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Leonard Seppela, who won fame in 1925 in his dog team race across the wilderness to Nome, Alaska, carrying serum, still loves his dogs. He said:

"I'm nearer 60 than 50, and I ought to be dropping out.

Six Cabbages Grow On Single Stalk

GALLITZIN, Pa., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Six heads are better than one, especially babbage heads says Norbert Hall. He reports as a late autumn find in his garden a cabbage stalk bearing six heads, ranging from 10 to 15 inches each in circumference and weighing a total of 24 pounds.

'Midnight Cupid' Issues Warning

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—A. B. Leigh, Reno County judge, has served notice he is not on the job around the clock when it comes to issuing marriage licenses.

After being routed from bed one morning by a couple who had enlisted the aid of police in arousing him, Judge Leigh told officers he was willing to function until midnight, "but that is the deadline."

Grid Heroes Win 'Facials' by Victory

HADDONFIELD, N. J., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Haddonfield High School's football heroes are not only victorious — they're well-groomed and smell sweet! After their triumph over Collingswood High a barber offered the entire team free shaves and haircuts and everything in between.

'Conscience' Money Paid After Years

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Walter Freeman, garage owner here, is $10 richer because of another man's troubled conscience. Freeman recently received the $10 in a letter from a man with whom he worked 14 years ago in Taft, Cal.; the letter explained that Freeman dropped the bill in their room one day and that the writer picked it up and kept it. He asked forgiveness.

ERMAN 'ARYAN' CHURCH LAW TO BE REVOKED

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Non-zi Christians hailed a sweeping ctory today in the announce-ent that all church laws adopt- in recent months—including e so-called Aryan statute—will rescinded.

Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, ader of German Protestants, an-ounced last night he would draw a law rescinding the measures once.

His announcement climaxed a tter dispute between the domi-nt Nazi faction and the non-zi groups.

Under the Aryan statute, Chris-ans with Jewish blood were de-ed privileges of worship in urches with Aryans—were, in ct, told to form new congrega-ons.

Despite the triumph on laws, e group headed by former ishop Friedrich von Bodel-hwingh still was not completely tisfied.

For one thing, they vigorously ek the ousting of the Rev. Jo-him Hossenfelder, head of the zi movement in German Protes-ntism.

Another factor is the order for e suspension of three ministers o challenged the anti-Semetic and of the Nazi-German Chris-ns.

AZIS IMPOSE DRASTIC LAWS

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The w Nazi criminal code, contain- some of the most drastic penal easures of modern court his-ry, was made public today in tail.

Indefinite sentences up to life prisonment, as in many Amer-n state laws, face habitual iminals under the new code. en beggars and tramps can be mmitted to detention homes for definite periods at hard labor.

Sterilization for dangerous sex iminals is provided in the law, e provision being accompanied a statement explaining that e measure was modeled on va-ous state laws in America.

The total budget calls for ex-enditures of 2,017,000,000 yen bout $445,757,000), a figure 221,-0,000 yen ($70,432,000) below at of last year but otherwise tting a peace-time record.

Famed War Spy Now a Barber In New York

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—A score of guests from Boston, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Atlanta, Des Moines and other points today all unknowingly were shaved, trimmed or massaged by one of Europe's celebrated war spies.

For today Universal Service identified Nick Soltesz, prosaic-looking barber at the No. 5 chair in the barber shop of a large New York hotel as "Nicholas Snowden," former spy for Austria-Hungary, Czechoslovakia and other governments he doesn't care to mention.

Soltesz, author of a recent autobiography called "Memors of a Spy," said he has turned barber because there was nothing else to do.

NAZI ACTIVITY IN WEST TOLD

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Evidence showing that German Nazi propaganda organizations have been set up in Chicago and Milwaukee has been disclosed to the House immigration committee, Chairman Samuel Dickstein (Dem.), of New York, said today.

With the investigation of the committee into Nazi propaganda temporarily in abeyance until December 4, Dickstein continued to receive information of Nazi movements behind closed doors.

Dickstein is confident he has obtained sufficient evidence to show a widespread effort to implant the doctrines of Hitlerism in this country—including persecution of the Jews.

CUBANS WATCH ROOSEVELT

HAVANA, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Cubans forgot their own politics today and all eyes were focussed on Warm Springs, Ga., to which United States Ambassador Sumner Welles planned to fly for a conference with President Roosevelt.

Nothing short of last week's two-day revolt could have caused as much comment as the American Ambassador's trip.

In cafes, on street corners and in private homes talk of intervention or recognition by the United States dominated all conversation.

Cuban papers gave prominence to the meeting at Warm Springs on all front pages along with the plans for the trip of the Cuban delegation to Montevideo for the Pan-American conference there.

Mexican Rebellion Plotters Arrested

TAMPICO, Mex., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—A plot against the government was discovered today when several Americans, reported to be followers of Col Adalberto Tejeda, candidate for the presidency of Mexico, were arrested by military authorities. A quantity of arms was seized.

Questioned by a federal district judge, the men confessed having planned an uprising against the government.

BRITISH RULER HOPEFUL FOR WORLD PEACE

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Parliament was prorogued until the opening of the new session, November 21, after the reading of a speech by King George today in which he expressed hope that world disarmament difficulties can be overcome.

His majesty said:

"My government has throughout taken an active part in the disarmament conference, and the British draft presented March 16 was adopted as the basis for a proposed convention.

"I earnestly trust that the difficulties which have since arisen may be surmounted.

"The withdrawal of Germany a month ago from the deliberations at Geneva necessarily dislocated the program, but work for international disarmament by agreement between the nations must be vigorously pursued."

Regarding Britain's general situation, King George said:

"The continued willingness of my people to bear heavy sacrifices made it possible for this country almost alone among the great countries of the world to maintain a satisfactory balance between its national income and expenditure."

Britons Hurry to Geneva In Arms Parley Crisis

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(INS.)—In response to an urgent appeal from Arthur Henderson, chairman of the disarmament conference, Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon and his chief aide, Capt. Anthony Eden, left for Geneva today.

They will confer with the delegates of other powers in an effort to find some way of saving the conference from collapse.

Anglo-Catholic Head Quits After Attack

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Widespread changes in the Anglo-Catholic movement in England were threatened today by the announcement that Viscount Halifax had resigned after 65 years as president of the English Church Union.

The resignation of the venerable layman, now 94 years old, was attributed largely to what he described as a "vicious attack on the Anglo-Catholic Congress," made recently by the official organ of the English Church Union.

FORTUNE BARES ROMANCE OF 'SPINSTER'

Universal Service.

HARWICHPORT, Mass., Nov. 17.—A woman whom her neighbors thought for half a century was a drab spinster, was dramatically revealed as twice a wife, twice a mother and twice a divorcee in a probate court action on file today in Barnstable.

As a result, Gladys Chapman, bookkeeper for a Lowell electrical concern, who lost sight of her mother as a child, will probably come into a fortune which she never dreamed existed until last week.

When Miss Lettie Chase died here last summer, aged 78, she left her estate, valued at "more than $20,000," to the widow of her nephew, who believed she was a spinster.

A sister of the dead woman, Miss Helena Chase, seeking to have the will set aside, broke a silence of 50 years to tell of her sister's early marriages.

Lettie Chase left Harwichport when she was 20 and was gone for some years. When she returned, she had considerable money which she invested carefully, and settled down to a solitary life under a maiden name.

None of her old-time friends and neighbors knew that anything romantic had entered her life during her absence. Now they know, due to Helena Chase's revelations, that during this period Lettie Chase first married a blacksmith named Mellon and later another named Chapman, and bore both of them daughters.

A search instituted by Helena Chase's attorney failed to reveal trace of Mellon or his daughter, and the search for Chapman and his daughter was about to be given up when Miss Chapman was located in Lowell.

By the discovery, Helena Chase loses her chance to inherit any part of the estate.

Miss Chapman was amazed to get news of her mother after almost half a century, as amazed as Harwichport folks, who thought they knew all about "Miss Lettie," spinster.

COURT FORBIDS LOW FLYING

Judge James H. Gray handed down an opinion perpetually restraining Robert A. Collins and John McClintock, tenants in possession of the Wilkinsburg Airport, from operating airplanes over certain Wilkinsburg properties at a height of less than 500 feet and dismissed it as to others.

The latest ruling was made because of exceptions to the original opinion having been filed. Among the complainants to the original bill of complaint were Eva R. Chalfant, Mark F. Quinn, Kenneth Black and numerous others. The order as to them still stands.

The court dismissed the bill of complaint as it pertains to G. N. Myers, C. F. Spinning, J. B. Sabal, W. N. Dambach and E. L. Piper. This was done without prejudice, the order set forth. The court directed that McClintock pay the costs.

Complaint had been made regarding the operations of airplanes westwardly from the east-west runway, it being alleged they operated too close to the tops of buildings for safety.

Highway Patrolman Held for Boy's Hurts

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Nov. 17.—Boy Scout friends of Mansil L. Hurlbut, 13, of New Kensington, last night were spectators at a hearing before Burgess John W. Hunter, at which State Highway Patrolman Paul Mihalko was held for court.

Mihalko, driving an automobile, was accused of knocking the boy from his bicycle last July 26. The youth was seriously injured, was at the point of death for nearly a week, Burgess Hunter said.

The Detroit homecoming of young Mr. Dawson, not long ago seized upon and returned to Jackson prison, five years after his escape from a road gang. His bride was surprised, hadn't known of his jail record and Henry Ford stepped in, helped the little family until the parole came. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

BLAZE ROUTS 4 ON NORTH SIDE

Four persons fled into the street when fire broke out in a two-story frame dwelling at 2214 Perrysville avenue last night.

They were Mrs. Ralph W. Mercer, who lives on the first floor, and Miss Josephine Tedrow and her brothers, Robert and Harry Tedrow, who occupy the second floor. The blaze was caused by a defective flue, firemen said. Damage was estimated at $250.

When woodwork in the basement of the home of Paul Ade, 1800 Brownsville avenue, ignited from an open flame being used in thawing water pipes, Ade hurried to Engine Company No. 23, next door, and called firemen.

Other members of the household ran to the street. The fire was extinguished with a loss estimated at $300.

BANKERS HELD AT JOHNSTOWN

David Barry, Jacob M. Murdoch, Harry Swank and Patrick F. McAneny, of Johnstown, were indicted yesterday by the federal grand jury on a charge of misapplication of $10,000 of funds and credits of the First National Bank of Johnstown, on November 17, 1930.

The indictment record, that at the time of the alleged offense Barry was president and director; Murdoch and Swank, vice presidents and directors, and McAneny, cashier and director, of the bank, now operated under the supervision of a conservator.

The indictment charges the acceptance of a demand note for $10,000 from Emmanuel J. Young, alleged to be worthless. Young was said to be a relative of Murdock.

CONVICT GIVEN JOB BY FORD

International News Service.

DETROIT, Nov. 17.—Brookie Dawson, the escaped convict who "went straight" for five years, changed his number today—from Convict No. 34148 at Jackson State Prison to Employe No. T-973 at the Ford Motor Company.

Dawson escaped from Jackson five and a half years ago to visit his sister, who was dying in River Rouge. He had served four years of a minimum five-year sentence and was eligible to parole in a few weeks.

His sister died shortly after he reached her bedside and Dawson fled to Peekskill, N. Y., where he "went straight" for five years, incidentally acquiring a pretty wife and a baby son.

Jobless, he returned to River Rouge in search of work last summer, was recognized and arrested. Henry Ford immediately became interested in the case. The Dawson baby, "Bunny," was taken to Ford Hospital for treatment of a crippled leg. Mrs. Dawson was given a home. And pressure was brought to bear on parole authorities to give the youthful prisoner another chance.

He was released yesterday—on condition that a job could be found for him. Ford took care of that, too.

Withers, Film Star, Routed From Bed By Police

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Before he was awake yesterday, detectives had Grant Withers, movie star, out of bed, dressed, finger-printed, booked on a confidence game charge, and even weighed.

Then Withers went into court, paid a friend $50 he owed him, and the case was dropped. Officially it came up today, but only for formal dismissal.

Withers was perturbed when the police arrived. He said in amazement:

"Arrested? Why it's too cold."

SLEEP MALADY TESTS WILL BE MADE HERE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Seeking an effective treatment for encephalitis or sleeping sickness which has caused many deaths during the year, the United States Public Health Service today launched a national survey to collect samples of serum for an immunological study.

In a letter to Dr. W. W. McFarland, director of public health at Pittsburgh, Dr. J. P. Leake, senior surgeon of the Public Health Service in charge of the sleeping sickness investigation, said Dr. W. G. Workman, also of the federal bureau, would be in the Pittsburgh area for several days.

REPORT EXPECTED

Workman will prepare a report as to cases of the disease in that area as to number, ages and sex of victims, the fatal cases and the general type and severity of the epidemic. Dr. Leake said:

"Dr. Workman also is prepared to take small samples of blood from about a dozen cases and would like to be put in touch with clinicians who know of such cases.

"If there were not enough cases of encephalitis, those who had recovered from other acute disease would be suitable donors."

TESTS ON MICE

Leake said the serum would be used in an attempt to determine by test on mice, which have recently been discovered to be susceptible, whether the individual yielding the serum was or was not immune to the St. Louis type of sleeping sickness. Dr. Leake said:

"In this way some idea might be gained of the general distribution of immunity to this disease."

The Public Health Service has been conducting an intensive investigation of sleeping sickness since the St. Louis epidemic broke out sometime ago resulting in a considerable number of deaths. The disease is one of the most perplexing that has been studied by the federal bureau in many years.

CASH FOR DROME QUESTIONED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Two cabinet members were in disagreement today over the status of plans for possible federal construction of seadromes across the Atlantic to facilitate trans-oceanic flights.

'Switchboard Secrets' On Radio Today

The humorous and exciting experience of a girl who was forced to dress and pose as a man, and her difficulties in extricating herself from her duel role, are dramatized in a radio program heard over eight stations in the tri-state area this afternoon and evening.

A presentation of the American Weekly, big feature magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, the "Switchboard Secrets" dramatization is heard as follows:

WSAZ, Huntington, W. Va., 1:30 p. m.; WHBC, Canton, O., 2 p. m.; WALR, Zanesville, 5 p. m.; WJAC, Johnstown, 5:15 p. m.; WOBU, Charleston, W. Va., 5:15; WAIU, Columbus, 7:15 p. m.; WADC, Akron, 7:45 p. m., and WLBW, Erie, 9 p. m.

Repeal Brings New Type Radio Crime Drama

By AIRCASTER

The more adroit radio showmen have been reluctant this season about producing crime dramas.

Imminent repeal, with the possible eradication of the gangster, is reckoned to exercise the curse so far as cops and robbers plays are concerned because, it is naively theorized, gang incentives will shortly have ceased to exist.

Wherefore, the mystery guild of CBS has gone ahead with its plan of abandoning the dramatizations of Poe and De Maupassant stories as somewhat obsolete.

Indeed it will present a series of up-to-date mysteries involving the struggle between the limbs of the law and the rats of the racket.

* * *

Treat 'Em Rough

The first of these offerings comes November 23, at 9:30 p. m. over WJAS, and it will be based on a yarn by that virile fellow, Fred Nebel, whose twin heroes, Captain McBride, and Kennedy, the tough reporter, most every detective story addict knows rather intimately.

Knowing the Nebel technique, the news comes as a pleasant departure. The author doesn't dispense halos to the criminal mugs.

Mr. Listener and his brood, I'm sure, will like the forthcoming series.

* * *

Tibbett, Crooks

Those concert crooners, Lawrence Tibbett and Richard Crooks, who do so well together, are booked to stage an impressive return to the air December 4, with William Daly's Orchestra, when they inaugurate a series via NBC to sing the praises of an auto tire.

* * *

* * *

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Now we get the mail. My, oh, my, how you people are!

Poor Julian! He came to Pittsburgh a soft and gentle lad with idealistic visions that he translated into words—his poetry. But do people think of him as soft spoken, pleasant, sincere?

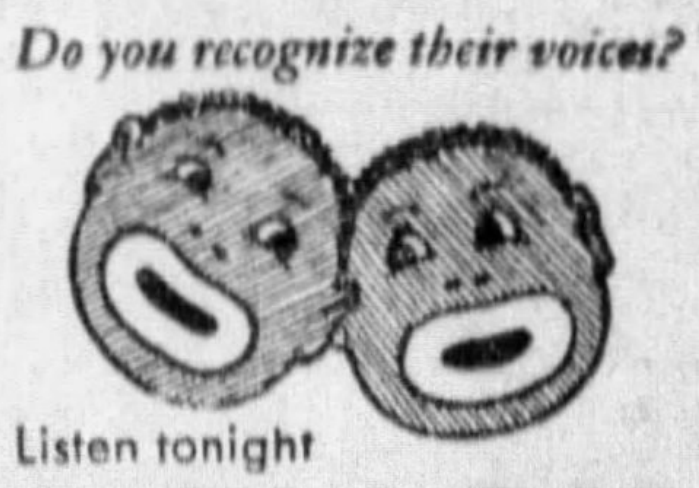
No! They call him the "wildcat"—the Alabama Wildcat. It's the snarling that does it and when he snarls through that wildcat poem I can imagine what it does to the nerves.

Mrs. Fisher says she liked the "Tom Cat." Mrs. William Daniels sends a picture of a Utah wildcat. Our's sounds more ferocious than her's looked.

Mrs. Raymond Miller is almost wild. Her children have been playing wildcat and they go howling and panting around the house.

To satisfy those who like that type of poetry and to keep the terrified globe trotters from tuning out to escape one of those demoniacal howls, he has written another poem.

This one, a parody on Two Alabama Wildcats, is called Two California Goldfish. Now you know the worst a goldfish can do is "swish." There is nothing unnerving about that.



Do you recognize their voices?

LAXATIVE STALE?

Ten Cents will find out.

Don't worry when some old, reliable remedy no longer helps that bilious boy—it's just time for what doctors call a cathartic change.

Laxative staleness can be caused by any laxative a child has taken too long. It can never be cured by larger doses. Do what thousands of parents are doing—make a simple change to Chocolate Cascarets. Children never tire of their honest-to-goodness chocolaty flavor and the system is not upset.

A Chocolate Cascaret usually straightens-out a sluggish child overnight. And there is nothing in this formula to harm or form a habit. As time goes on, Chocolate Cascarets do not lose their effectiveness. One Chocolate Cascaret is always enough for a thorough, muscular movement of the bowels that cleans them thoroughly.

Perhaps you are laxative stale. Take a Chocolate Cascaret tonight, and see! Let it melt in your mouth and enjoy that chocolaty goodness until the last morsel is gone. If your bowels move better tomorrow—if you feel better for days—you will know what has been the matter!

Taste them, try them, and you'll know what started the stampede to the new Chocolate Cascarets. All druggists, 10c, 25c, 50c.

WARNING: A bowel medicine that has been taken even two months, can make child or adult laxative stale. Don't increase the dose of anything you are using, but change to Cascarets.

DOLE ATTACKED BY GOODWILL FOUNDER

Attacking the dole welfare method in the United States on the ground that it "degrades and degenerates," Dr. E. J. Helms, of Boston, founder of Goodwill Industries, paid an official visit yesterday to the local branch of the organization on Twenty-eighth street.

While inspecting clothing already collected in the city-wide "Barrel Drive" of the Goodwill Industries, which closes next Friday, he said:

"Our welfare method has made 4,000,000 paupers—such is the curse of our method of dealing with them. They don't want to go back to work.

"I believe in giving a man a chance to help himself instead of handing him his food and clothing. The Goodwill believes in helping him to learn a trade and training him so that he can take care of himself."

Dr. Helm is making his annual official tour of the 83 Goodwill Industries branches throughout the country.

DENTISTS TOLD TO 'RELAX'

Maybe you thought that aching tooth pained a whole lot more when once you got to the dentist, but Prof. C. A. Whitmer, of the University of Pittsburgh, suggests that it might only have been a shift of the doctor's eye or the way he held his mouth.

Prof. Whitmer outlined many characteristics that a dentist can possess that cause a loss of confidence by the patient in addressing the closing session of the Odontological Society of Western Pennsylvania convention yesterday in the Hotel William Penn. He spoke on "The Value of Psychology in Talking to the Dental Patient."

The Pitt professor said a dentist with an "easy, relaxed manner stimulates a like response in the patient." He warned the dentists against having a facial expression of deep sorrow. A high-pitched voice can be irritating, he said, advising a moderate tone. For the best conversational topic, Whitmer suggested:

"Search out your patient's interests, try to remember his occupation, his likes and dislikes and his level of education. Make them the basis of reference in your conversation."

PEN FUGITIVES' TIME EXTENDED

International News Service.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Nov. 17.—Temporary freedom gained by six convicts in escapes from Rockview Penitentiary today cost them prolonged terms aggregating from 61 to 125 years.

The severest penalties fell on Frank Nadeau and Wayne Daugherty, who dashed to California in a state police car. Nadeau, originally sentenced from Allegheny County for a five to 15-year term, was given an additional 17 to 37 years. Daugherty's original sentence of five to 10 years, was increased by 16 to 32 years.

His companion, Louis Banky, Washington County, was penalized nine and one-half to 17 years in addition to his eight and one-half to 17-year term.

Ray White received the customary escape penalty of three and one-half to seven years in addition to a similar term he is serving for an auto theft.

An additional eight to 16 years was tacked on the original seven to 14-year sentence Alfred Fulmer is serving for an automobile theft.

FUNDS LACKING, SCHOOLS CLOSE

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The public schools of New Beford were closed today until December 1 because the city lacked $45,000 to defray expenses until the end of the fiscal year November 30.

More than 18,000 pupils and 500 teachers will have an enforced holiday until funds from the new budget become available.

For the teachers it will mean a payless holiday because the school committee has decreed they would not to be paid during the layoff.

Plant, Four Homes Destroyed by Fire

POMEROY, O., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Fire destroyed the Coverts Baking and Ice Company and four residences at Middleport late yesterday with a loss estimated by owners of the property as $135,000.

Fire companies from Middleport, Pomeroy, Rutland, Gallipolis and Point Pleasant, W. Va., fought the blaze for three hours before bringing it under control.

Unlicensed Hunter Sentenced to Jail

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—An unemployed miner was arrested for hunting rabbits without a non-resident permit in Somerset County yesterday and sentenced to 43 days in jail.

PLANE SAFETY DEVICE TESTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The pilot of a transport-type plane circling high above Roosevelt Field on Long Island yesterday pulled a lever twice and ejected three men and a woman through doors in the sides of the fuselage.

Sitting calmly in the chairs in which they had been riding, the quartet floated down to the field in safety, though one passenger, Waldo Fraser, of Whittier, Cal., strained his leg slightly when he landed on the top of a grandstand.

The demonstration was the first public showing with living subjects here of a safety device invented by Harry P. Trusty, of Los Angeles, who witnessed the exhibition from the field.

RELIGIOUS MEET ENDS TONIGHT

Problems of religious education in Sunday Schools were being continued today in the closing sessions of a conference at the Second Presbyterian Church under auspices of the National Presbyterian Board and the Pittsburgh Presbytery's committee.

Three national leaders, Miss Florence E. Norton, director of children's work; the Rev. Frank D. Getty, young people's work director; and the Rev. William Ralph Hall, general director of the home and church department, are leading the discussions.

The conference, which opened yesterday afternoon, will be concluded at a meeting tonight.

2 about Cigarettes

There are 6 types of home-grown tobaccos that are best for cigarettes

BRIGHT TOBACCOS
U. S. Types 11, 12, 13, 14.
BURLEY TOBACCO
U. S. Type 31.
SOUTHERN MARYLAND TOBACCO
U. S. Type 32.

U. S. Type 11 is produced in the Piedmont Belt of Virginia and part of North Carolina.

U. S. Type 12 is produced in eastern North Carolina.

U. S. Type 13 grows in South Carolina.

U. S. Type 14 is produced mostly in southern Georgia—a few million pounds in northern Florida and Alabama.

U. S. Type 31 includes what is called White Burley tobacco. It was first produced by George Webb in 1864. It is light in color and body, and is milder than the Burley used for pipes.

U. S. Type 32, Maryland tobacco, is noted for its "burn". In this respect Maryland excels most other tobaccos.

Chesterfield ages these tobaccos for 30 months —2½ years—to make sure that they are milder and taste better.

SUNDAY TICKET WILL BE SOLD BY GERSHWIN

George Gershwin, appearing here with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra Sunday night, will sell at 2 p. m. that day the first concert ticket legally sold on Sunday in the city since 1794. The sale will be at the Syria Mosque boxoffice.

The concert will be the orchestra's first under the new Sunday music act passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature at its last session.

The act permits Sunday symphony concerts with an admission charge to cover expenses if application is made to and approved by the State Department of Public Instruction. The act also calls for the department's advance approval of the program.

Approval has been granted for the Gershwin program, which is to include the composer-pianist's "Rhapsody in Blue," "Concerto in F" and "An American in Paris," Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture and Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony.

PLAN REPAIRS AT BUREAU

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Extensive repairs will be made to the experimental station of the United States Bureau of Mines at Pittsburgh, it was announced today, following an allotment of $200,000 from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public works.

The experimental mine at Bruceton, where have been carried on the numerous tests by scientists in determining mine fire hazards, will be reconditioned. It will be retimbered and the entrance to the mine will practically be rebuilt, it was stated here today. The money is now available and men will be put to work at once.

MUSIC

KREISLER

Syria Mosque

PROGRAM

Sonata, C minor	Greig
Chaconne (For violin alone).	Bach
Rondo	Mozart
Andante cantabile	Tschaikowsky
Humoresque	Tschaikowsky-Kreisler
Hymn to the Sun	Rimsky-Korsakoff-Kreisler
Four Caprices:
1. La Chasse	J. B. Cartier
2. Saltarello	Wieniawski
3. B minor	Paganini
4. A minor	Paganini

The first concert in May Beegle's series at Syria Mosque last night was once again a triumph for herself and for Fritz Kreisler. The return of this eminent and much beloved violinist was the signal for a demonstrative welcome which lasted throughout the evening.

Mr. Lissfelt

Kreisler remains the exponent of the great style in classic playing. His generous countenance, his cozy, friendly personality, and then his playing, immediately brings him in rapport with any public.

The same ease, the same warmth of tone, though diminished in strength these last years, the same worship of purity in style characterize his music, be it Grieg's folk tunes or Bach's austere variations, a Paganini Caprice or a delicious Viennese melody.

The Grieg Sonata lacked somewhat in spirit and we had to wait for the grand chaconne before we were fully aware that Kreisler was soloist. Then with these miniatures, transcriptions by the player, we felt that Kreisler was again at his best.

The four caprices were marvels in their display of all the virtuoso tricks of the violinist, and yet the sincere musician was apparent throughout and the loveliest harmonics kept one breathless.

Carl Lamson was the self-effacing accompanist. As encores came the Londonderry Air, the Liebesleid, and Caprice Viennoise.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Brazilian Exiles Invited to Return

RIO DE JANIERO, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Provisional President Getulio Vargas has opened the way for the return of all of Brazil's numerous and widely scattered exiles.

2 MEN INJURED IN GAS BLAST

Two men were in the McKeesport Hospital today because the bottom fell from the container of gasoline one of them was holding over a stove, causing an explosion and fire at the Garder and Ferguson Service Station, Soles street and Irwin avenue, McKeesport.

The station attendant, Joseph Wodyla, 22, of 633 Soles street, McKeesport, was badly burned on the forehead, back and legs; Andrew Winters, 27, a customer, of 1718 Federal street, McKeesport, was severely burned on the hands and face.

Pastor Arrested For 'Too Loud' Services

LA HABRA, Cal., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—A lusty-lunged clergyman, the Rev. C. F. Chambers, was arrested yesterday on a charge of diturbing the peace on complaint of Mrs. Myra Hibbs, who said the minister made "loud, unusual and unnecessary noises" in conducting his services at the Pentecostal Church. Said the minister:

"Yes, I have been arrested. I do not believe it necessary for me or for members of my flock to whisper when we pray."

His attorney, C. A. Watson, who also is a minister, said he would ask the court to decide the difference between "religious noises" and others.

EASTON BANKER DIES IN CRASH

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Gen. Harry C. Trexler, 79, chairman of the board of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company and a widely known banker of Allentown, Pa., died in a hospital here today of injuries received in an automobile accident.

On his way home from New York City last night, his car sideswiped a large oil truck and trailer parked at the side of the highway, near here. Sitting in the rear seat, he received the full force of the impact, several ribs on his right side, and his right clavicle being fractured.

He was active in Masonic circles for much of his life. In 1895 he joined the Pennsylvania National Guard as a member of Gov. Hasting's staff.

Workers Determined To Get Quota In Drive

Welfare Fund workers reported $60,169 had been collected since yesterday at a meeting today in Kaufmann's auditorium. Total receipts for the first five days of the drive are $1,331,924, representing 7,912 subscribers, the workers were told. The goal of the drive is $2,837,000.

The employes' division reported that in the social agencies' group, the staff of the Conference of Catholic Charities had subscribed 100 per cent, and that the total amount of their subscriptions was $1,923, or more than four times as much as last year. John W. Lawrence, campaign chairman, pointed out the sacrifice this represented in that in common with all employes of all agencies of the Welfare Fund, these workers had had their salaries drastically cut as their work had become heavier, and that they had subscribed on the basis of one week's salary.

Men's teams of the central division, D. M. Craig, chairman, $4,676.

Corporations division, H. S. Wherrett, chairman, $54,487.

Employes' division, James Rae, chairman, $16,447.

Girl Tempts Death In Vain Rescue Try

MT. CARMEL, Pa., Nov. 17.—(AP.)— Twelve-year-old Agnes Kogut is in a serious condition from injuries suffered in a futile attempt to save her father from being struck by a trolley car near Kulpmont. The father, John Kogut, 55, was killed when he slipped between the ties of a bridge. The car dragged his body 20 feet.

The girl waved her arms frantically in an effort to attract the attention of the motorman and was knocked down an embankment.

Senate Chasing Bubbles That Burst Long Ago

—By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER—

Senate has discovered those 1929 water bubbles and will dive after the sunken treasure.

The bankers are standing up very well under adroit questioning. A hollow tree is no information booth. Especially when there is a wolf in it.

All the brokers and bankers did was to stretch a rubber band and sell it for garden hose.

That's good business. The bankers tossed alfalfa while the sun beamed, polished the bee's shining hour and considered the ant until they got formic poisoning.

Now the Senate wants to know how they did it. The bankers are making no post-mortified statements. Why bother digging up the past? The best you can do with old bones is to make 'em into a new skeleton.

KAMONS TRIAL HEARS MERRICK

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—(AP.)— Frank J. Merrick, Cleveland safety director at the time and now Municipal Court judge-elect, testifying in the murder trial of Louis J. Kamons yesterday, said the "root or source" of the flames in the Ellington Apartment fire appeared to be in a barber supply store and beauty shop located in the building.

Ray I. Turk, part owner of the store, now is serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary on a murder conviction growing out of the investigation of the fire which took 12 lives in June, 1932.

The state charges Kamons, convicted Pittsburgh arsonist, conspired with Turk to start the fire so insurance could be collected.

TRISTATE AREA COMBED FOR BANK BANDITS

Trio Eludes Police Net After Stealing $2,000 At Cecil

Throughout the tri-state district police today continued their search for the armed bandit trio that obtained $2,000 in the holdup yesterday of the First National Bank of Cecil, Washington County.

Their description and the Ohio license number of the car in which they escaped after scooping up the cash in pillow cases and forcing the teller and the clerk into the basement was broadcast, but police found no trace of them.

Joseph G. Miscovey, the teller, and Clerk Edmund Poudevigne were alone in the bank when the three entered and ordered them to throw up their hands.

One of the gunmen was recognized as the stranger who, a week ago, had gone to the bank and asked for change of a dollar. Miscovery gave it to him.

After scooping up the cash, the trio marched the two employes through the office of the president, Adam Wagner, who also is a Justice of the Peace, and locked them in the basement.

They were released after attracting the attention of C. A. Wooten, who conducts a barber shop next door. They talked with him through the barrel cellar window.

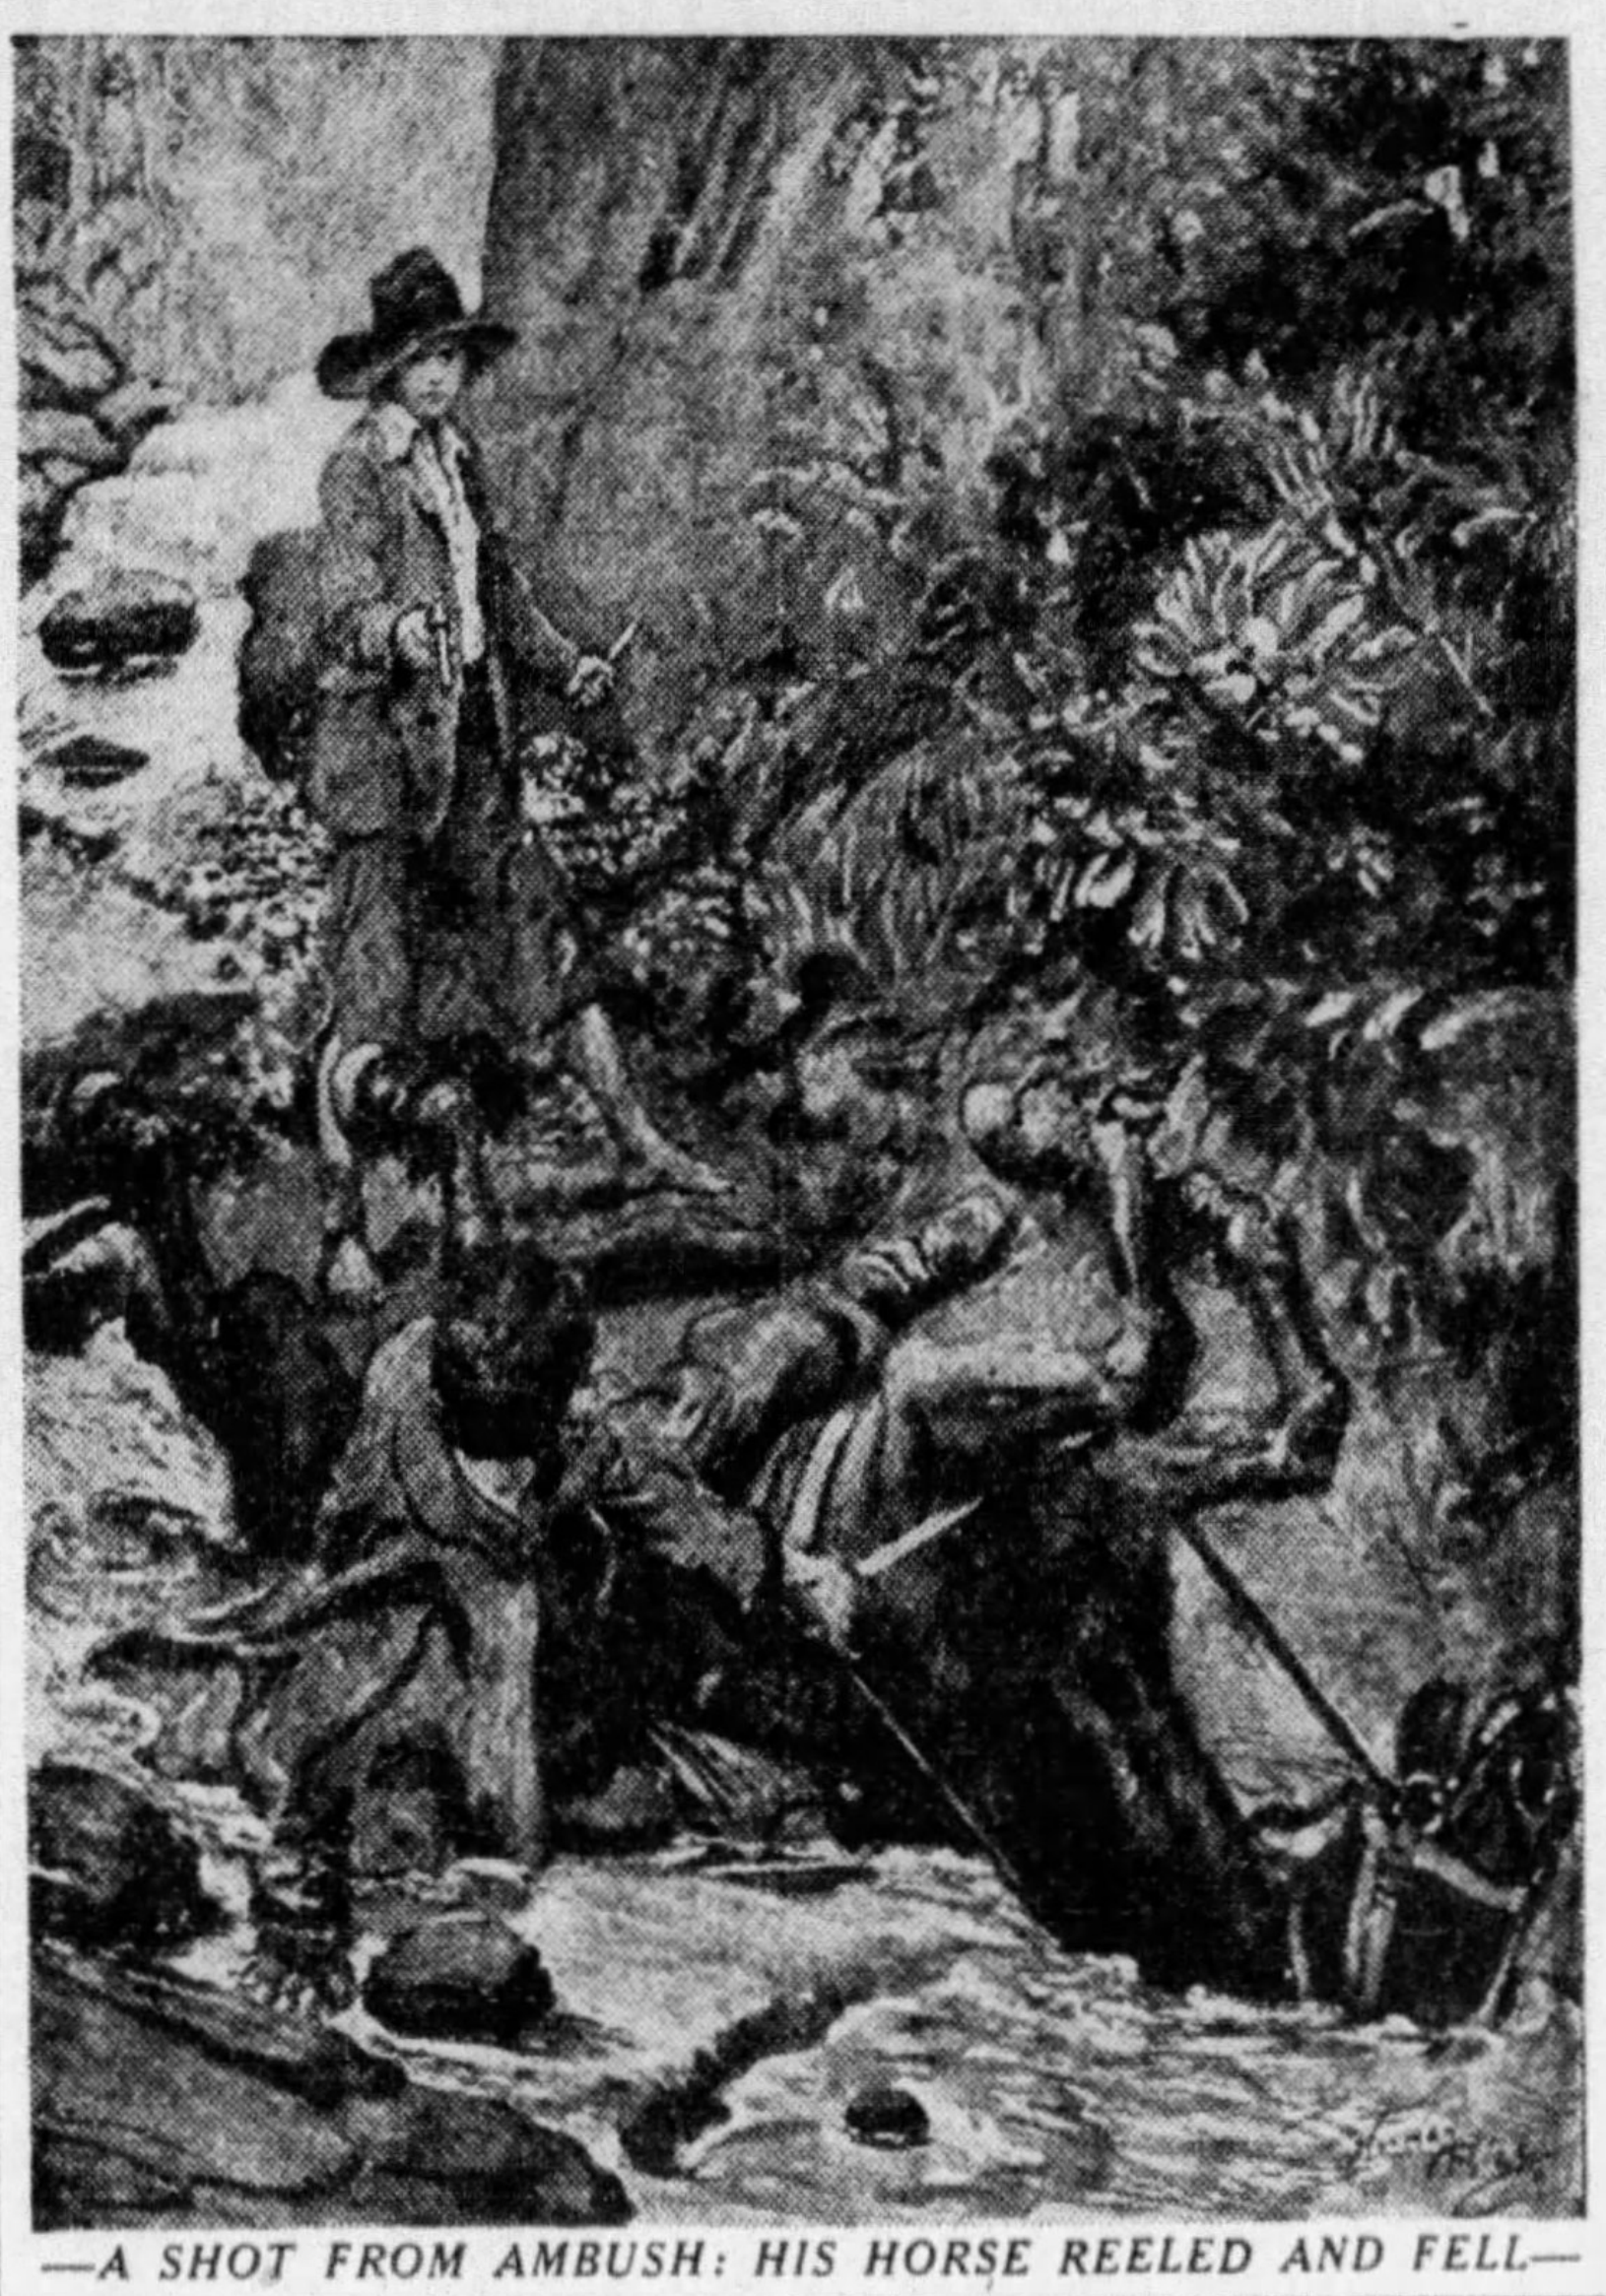
Operator 13 by ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Operator 13 Eludes Her Enemy

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.



—A SHOT FROM AMBUSH: HIS HORSE REELED AND FELL—

Word of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart's rebel cavalry raids into Chambersburg, Pa., had gone forth by Union scout, by courier, by "grapevine," by flag and fire. Mounted troopers from Logan's 12th Illinois horsemen warned Gen. Kenley; Kenley's excited troopers relayed the information to Brooks' with flaming torches telegraphing from hill to hill; Brooks, out of magnetic telegraph communication, read the blazing news and started his wet signal flags flapping under lowering skies until his last relay station electrified Little Mac's signal officers into horrified comprehension.

At Mercersburg Federal Secret Service Operator 90 made contact with Operator 17, who instantly mounted her wiry black horse and started toward Hagerstown, carrying to the Federal cavalry general, Averell, a white Cherokee rose with one paper petal. Federal Operator 90, disguised under the uniform of a private of South Carolina cavalry, deserted at Mercersburg in the fog, galloped to the Maryland border, and thence south along the railroad; flogging and spurring toward army headquarters at Knoxville.

Operator 13, in ragged shirt and breeches, her face and body stained as brown as a colored boy's, her short dark curly hair in the wind, kicked the nervous, high-strung horse she had stolen from Yellow Bob into a dead run with her naked heels, whilst she hung desperately to the halters of the two other stolen horses, Lady Margrave and Skylark, favorite mounts of the great Confederate cavalryman, Gen. J. E. B. Stuart.

Death Behind

And always on her heels thundered death in the human shape of Vespasian Chancellor, Confederate chief of spies, determined to do this dangerous girl to death before she accomplished the destruction of Jeb Stuart and 2,000 youthful riders who were circling a Union army of 100,000 men wild to get at them and tear them to pieces.

The wood-road was soft and moist and spongy; the forest seemed very still except when a wet wind stirred the autumn foliage and set painted maples dripping. Through it, with the rush of a great wind, tore three galloping horses, urged on to frantic flight by a Secret Service operator of the Union Army who rode for her life, and who alternately shivered with fear and giggled hysterically when she realized that she had turned horsethief, and was making off with two of the most celebrated and beautiful horses in the Confederacy.

She galloped due east. She could not help that, although Yellow Bob, the night before, had bragged that the cavalry were going to Gettysburg and then northward.

The dim wood-road seemed to parallel the Cashtown-Gettysburg highway. She hoped it might turn north, but it did not. Fortunately it remained a forest road where, at intervals, rows of walnut and oak logs were piled along the trail awaiting millward transportation.

Deadly Fear

The muggy, close air was saturated with the strong, aromatic odor of freshly cut walnut logs; now and then the girl had a swift glimpse of some deserted lumberman's sagging shack. She saw nobody, but her deadly fear was that she might gallop headlong into a horse-raiding wing of the Confederate cavalry, be recognized and seized along with her stolen horses. And then, the awful Shadow Dance at sunset.

Under her ragged shirt, strapped to her naked body, she carried her long, sharp knife in its velvet sheath. She carried, also, in the holster of Yellow Bob's saddle, a heavy dragoon revolver, capped and loaded. She had had little to eat for a very long time, and her slim stomach seemed to slap against her spine at every stride of her horse and jerk of the led horses' halters.

Gail Loveless, in all her dramatic career as a member of Pauline Cushman's celebrated theatrical company, never had played so exciting a role in any theater as she was playing now, and never had she experienced such thrilling and strangely alternating shocks of fear and delight as this headlong gallop was giving her. To deceive and flout that preposterous yellow nigger, Bob! To fool an entire division of Confederate cavalry and vanish with the general's two favorite horses! To warn Little Mac and start a hundred thousand men in motion! As she rode, these delicious and triumphant thoughts streamed through her mind, while the warm, wet wind rushed past her ears, intoxicating her.

No Thrill There

And there was Capt. Jack Gailliard, too! with his handsome face all bandaged where she had struck him. Was he also a subject for thrilling fear and mirth? As she galloped, her flushed cheeks aglow, she thought of her desperate, swinging blow, and of the heavy revolver butt smashing down into his boyish face. No, that was neither funny nor thrilling. Had it been necessary she would have killed this young man—so close had she beheld death grinning at her in the starlight.

Galloping onward now, but with no glow of victory in her pale, brown cheeks, she began to remember, also, that this same young man had seen her hiding from the hangman, and had let her go. Because he must have seen her; she was sure he had by the expression in his eyes. And yet he had let her go.

Why?

Was it sheer pity, knowing what her fate must have been? Spies do not pity each other to that extent. Yet he had said no word of his discovery to the chief of spies as the lantern flashed along the hayloft flooring.

Why?

Well, then, all the worse for this young man—if he could not command his baser passions. . . . If he must succumb, first to his lust for a poor girl, whom he believed to be a quadroon; and then surrender to his passion for a Yankee spy, who had attempted to destroy the flower of his country's cavalry.

Her heart had begun to beat as fast as the thudding of her horse's feet.

A miserable young man, to let that kind of passion or love, or whatever he dared call it, interfere with his oath of duty to his Confederate government! She despised him. She was not grateful. Let this young man beware of her if ever again he interfered!

Sweet Shame

Then the swift memory of the Boyd garden, of their embrace—his lips on hers—shocked her and left her anguished with its burning sweetness. Breathless a moment, then rigid under a welling rush of anger. Never before had a man aroused such wanton, such indescribable emotion in her virgin mind and body. Never had she imagined herself capable of such shameful response to a man's predatory arms and lips.

Scarcely conscious of what she was about, she checked her horse. God only could know how far she had galloped through the woods in the dim autumn twilight.

Gail Loveless, at 20, became a spy in the Federal service and was designated as Operator 13. In the disguise of a quadroon laundress, she was sent to the headquarters of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, Confederate cavalry leader, who was planning a daring raid into Pennsylvania.

Capt. Gailliard, leader of Stuart's spies, flirted with her, kissed her, fell half in love with her and was ashamed of himself. He and Belle Boyd, most famous Confederate woman spy, were convinced that "Lucille Lyndon," as she called herself, was a genuine colored girl, and harmless. But Vespasian Chancellor, Gailliard's colleague, suspected her. Eventually he exposed her as a spy. She stole Gailliard's horse, struck him in the face with his own pistol and fled.

Barred from flight in any other direction, she boldly joined Stuart's cavalry as it started north on its Pennsylvania raid. She cajoled Yellow Bob, Stuart's groom, into letting her ride one of the General's horses. She stole a farm boy's clothes to improve her disguise. Chancellor's "instinct" led him to a stable where Operator 13 had hidden in a hayloft. Gailliard, with Chancellor, persuaded the latter to go away.

Now Go On With the Story

PLAN BOLSTERS INSTITUTIONS NEEDING AID

Get Clearing House Approval to Float New Issues

Pittsburgh banks are expected soon to join the march to the Reconstruction Finance Company's money windows, with the last of the objectionable stipulations attached to the purchase of preferred bank stocks by the Corporation apparently removed.

Attorneys for a number of institutions are studying the present setup, following Pittsburgh Clearing House approval of the plan to reinforce banks' capital structures through preferred stock sale.

Arthur E. Braun, president of the Farmers' National Bank, said he understood the preferred stock could be sold by liquid banks to the corporation at almost the banks' own terms.

The reasons for the banks' balking at first, according to F. F. Brooks, president of the First National Bank, was that all banks were first asked to increase their capital structure in order that suspicion might not fall on the few weak institutions actually needing aid.

But when the banks not needing help attempted to comply with the request and seek a market for new issues of preferred stock, they found, Brooks says, that they were expected to fulfill embarrassing stipulations set up for the weaker institutions' security.

Brooks cited a few of these requirements calling for RFC representation on the board of directors of institutions issuing the stock; repurchase of the stock by the banks only out of earnings, and downward revision of the major salaries of banks.

Large Pittsburgh institutions are understood to have planned to sell the stock to the RFC as a convenience to that corporation, hold the money and re-purchase without having used it at the end of about six months.

That, of course, wouldn't put the money in circulation, but the larger banks are already highly liquid and few are taking any risks with their money.

It is pretty definite that readjustment of many leading bankers' salaries by the RFC might please lots of depositors, but would embarrass the bankers—hence the objection to that provision.

Approves Reopening Of Tarentum Bank

Complete reopening of the First National Bank and Trust Company of Tarentum, operating on a restricted basis since the bank holiday, was announced today. Plans for the opening have been approved by the United States Comptroller of Currency.

Letters yesterday advised depositors they would be paid 65 per cent of their money if they would sign waivers for the remaining 35 per cent to be placed in a trust fund representing frozen assets which are guaranteed to be liquidated when conditions permit.

Aspinwall Church Holds Anniversary

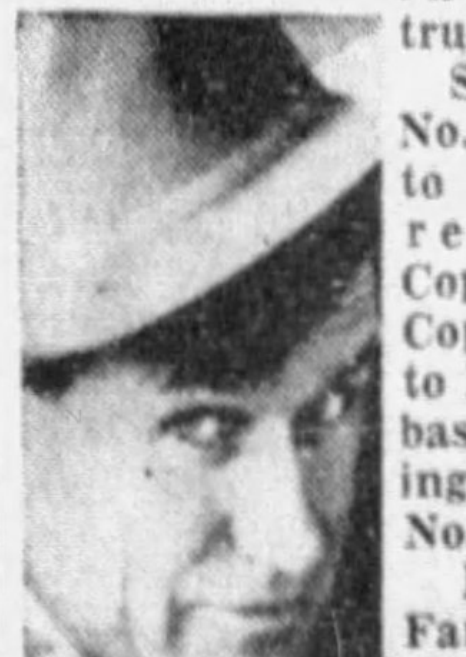
Special services will be held Sunday morning and evening, with the Rev. J. L. Ewing, the first pastor, preaching the morning sermon.

WILL ROGERS SAYS



Will Rogers

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 17.

Well, in one of the papers I read today, it had an awful lot of information if true.

Said Al Smith, No. 99, was to go to the Senate, replacing Dr. Copeland, No. 86. Copeland to go to France as ambassador, replacing Jesse Straus, No. 63.

Postmaster Farley, No. 77, to go in as next Democratic Governor of New York, replacing Lehman, No. 66. Raskob, No. 55, to replace as U. S. Treasurer Mr. Woodin, No. 44.

Even if this is just a rumor it makes good reading and if it's a fact it makes Democratic history. It means the shock troops are going in.

Yours, WILL.

Home Talent Rehearsal Halts Political Meet

Politics and theatricals joined hands last night and everybody had a swell time.

When 100 members of the Fourteenth Ward Democratic Club arrived at the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company Building on Forbes street, Squirrel Hill, for a business meeting, they found members of the Fourteenth Ward League of Women Voters rehearsing for play. So they took seats in the audience and watched a dozen pretty girls going through fancy dance steps in preparation for "Page the Prince," soon to be given in the Taylor Allderdice High School.

George Evans, who retired from the Democratic Council slate in favor of William A. Magee, arrived at 9:30 p. m. to address the political club, but the rehearsal wasn't quite over so he waited a while. Then everybody got together and sang old-time songs, after which the performers went home.

Before the political club adjourned the members adopted a resolution indorsing Mayor-elect McNair's proposed proposal to extend the graded tax to school and county.

GUARD NAMES TO PREVENT FLIGHT

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—A secret indictment reputedly involving additional "big shots" in the liquor racket in Delaware County was returned today by the special federal grand jury.

The indictment was handed up to Federal Judge George A. Welsh, presiding in the Delaware County liquor conspiracy case.

Judge Welsh ordered the indictment impounded. This step was taken, it was believed, to prevent the flight of any of the persons involved.

The special grand jury, the same which indicted State Senator John J. McClure and 95 other persons, has been quietly investigating new angles in the liquor racket uncovered by testimony at the McClure trial.

Chet A. Keyes, special United States attorney, announced the government would rest its case against the Delaware County defendants today. The defense will be given a recess over the weekend to map its battle plans.

Clashes Enliven Trial Of Senator McClure

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Frequent quarrels between counsel enlivened the Delaware County "protection" organization case today, the fortieth of the trial.

Federal Judge George A. Welsh announced that the government is expected to conclude its case today.

Edgar A. Davis, formed Federal prohibition agent and self-styled personal investigator for State Senator John J. McClure, was on the stand for further cross-examination. McClure and 75 other defendants are charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

Davis testified yesterday that the "protection" organization in its heyday collected more than $220,000 in one year from lawbreakers, spending only a small part of the sum to pay police officers to enforce its rule. The government alleges the ring was in operation more than 10 years.

At one time Scott referred to "Mr. Keyes' testimony" and the government prosecutor insisted it was "the government's."

Scott retarted:

"All right, if you want to disown it."

"I don't disown it, but please put it on the record as it is."

BOROUGH ROADS WORK ASSURED

HARRISBURG, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today announced approval of the Highway Department's $1,445,000 program of improving the connecting links of rural roads in the state's 261 boroughs.

The work was authorized by the 1933 regular session of the Legislature and will continue through the boroughs all roads which have been improved as a part of the 20,000-mile township road program launched in 1931.

The recent amendments also permit the department, in improving other roads on the program, to continue them through boroughs. The Governor said:

"This program is most imtant because it will take unemployment relief to the smaller centers of population during the winter."

Iceland Uncertain Of Dry Law Status

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Even after voting repeal of its prohibition law, Iceland was not sure today whether it would be wet or dry.

Comfort? Baths for Paris Subway Riders

PARIS.—Shower baths in the subway stations are going to bring comfort and cleanliness to many workers who ride in it. Bicycle garages, large check rooms and many other conveniences are also being planned by the enterprising city councilors who believe there is a great deal lacking in Paris' underground railway.

Man Captures Snake, Retains It as Pet

PORT CLINTON, O.—(INS.)—Add strange pets! Glen Ellithrope and William Benfer captured a copperhead snake on an Erie Township farm. They effected the seizure without harming the reptile. "Bring 'em Back Alive" Ellithrope decided to keep the snake for a pet.

Rameses III Kidnaped In Grid Game Feud

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Duke University students kidnaped Rameses III, giant ram mascot of the University of North Carolina football team, early today and when students of the state university attempted to recover him a battle broke out between the two groups.

The Duke and North Carolina football teams will meet tomorrow and for the past few days feeling between the two schools has been high.

Rameses III was not recovered.

DAKOTA WHEAT BAN MODIFIED

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—A partial lifting of North Dakota's nearly month-old wheat embargo was in prospect today.

Gov. William Langer, who on October 19 issued a proclamation forbidding shipment of all wheat from the state, prepared a new order, for probable issuance today, to permit movement from North Dakota of durum wheat. Out-state shipments of hard spring wheat still would be banned, however.

Modification of the embargo will follow closely upon rises in price of durum at Duluth, Minn., where the range has been from 85 cents to $1.04½ per bushel, which has made it possible for Canadian shippers to send in their durum despite a 42 cents a bushel tariff.

It was indicated in official circles the Governor's modification plan was due to the situation developing as a result of the Canadian grain movement.

Furrier Pawns Stored Coats, Then Flees

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Any shivers Jack Silver, operator of a fur storage establishment, may have had during the cold wave were mild, police said today, to the positive chills some of his women customers experienced when they called and discovered both their coats and silver gone.

An investigation disclosed, said Lieut. Edward J. Kelly of the detective department, that it was Silver's custom to pawn the coats and then reclaim them as the owners claimed them from time to time.

But, with the advent of near zero temperatures business became rushing—so much so that Silver disappeared yesterday.

Then police began a round of the pawn shops and up until today had discovered 22 of the missing coats.

FAMILY SAVED FROM FIRE BY DOG'S BARK

A family of three, warned by the barking of their dog, escaped onto the icy street early this morning as fire swept the home of H. S. Thompson, 845 Timberland avenue, Overbrook.

Mr. Thompson, his wife, Stella, and their son, Neal, 12, were cared for by neighbors after they had fled, partly clad, from the house—a two-story frame. With them was Teddy, the wire-haired terrier, who barked them awake.

The fire, according to Mr. Thompson, began in the cellar. He said he believed rats gnawing at matches started it, but added that firemen thought paint near the hot water heater exploded from the heat.

Damage was estimated by firemen at approximately $6,000.

patting his wet neck, drawing Lady Margrave and Skylark up beside her and caressing the beautiful creatures—always with a nervous glance flung back over her shoulder lest pursuers already be closing in at her heel. Lest the sunset shadow cast by her own twitching, naked feet, should dance a ghastly shadow-dance under some Rebel gallows.

Suddenly, not far to the southward, a cavalry bugle rang out. White with terror, Operator 13 beat Yellow Bob's big hunter with fist and heel into a gallop once more, and rode for her very life, while the Confederate bugle echoes still vibrated in her startled ears.

Implacable Enemy

Ten minutes behind her galloped the Confederate chief of scouts, Vespasian Chancellor, determined to destroy her, horse and man rushing onward like some huge winged thing swooping through the trees. His lean face had the dark dignity of an eagle's bent on murder; his long gray cloak flew flapping behind him as he crouched forward in his saddle striving to penetrate the wood and gloom ahead with fiercely piercing eyes.

And two miles ahead of him Operator 13, in ragged skirt and breeches, kicked frantically at Yellow Bob's crazed horse, driving him into a dead run, as she hung on desperately to the halters of Lady Margrave and Skylark, galloping gallantly beside her.

It was still deep dusk in the woods, Spectral trees streamed away on either side like speeding phantoms in a dream; a wet wind drove fog into her face, blurring vision and soaking her to her stained brown skin. Now, ahead, a pale watery light flickered through the forest; the road led into a clearing, where it forked; and the girl pulled in her panting horse and looked around, bewildered in the sickly light of daybreak.

One branch of the rough trail curved out southward toward Stonehenge and Fayetteville; and she knew it must be crowded with gray-jacketed horsemen whose wide-winged flankers were sweeping the whole region to the very base of the mountains ahead. She must not ride through Black Gap; she realized that. Must not turn south at all. A gallows death lay that way.

The left-hand trail was rocky and bushy and led upwards along a small stream—the headwaters of the Conewago—toward abandoned lumber camps and scattered shacks of mountaineers near Wolf Hill. Here lay her road to safety—by the grace of God—if, indeed, there were any way out of this Valley of Death for her.

Army Moving

For another instant she sat on her hard-breathing hunter, listening fearfully in the forest silence; and heard, very far away to the southward, a vast and muffled trampling noise of trotting hoofs, where, through the drizzling dawn, 2,000 gray-jacketed riders and their captured horses were passing through Black Gap. She gave one last desperate glance behind her; heard nothing; then swung her horse up the rocky road along the brook, leading the other two horses knee-deep through wet laurel and rhododendron and out between cliffs, and came at last into a wide wood-road once more, where freshly felled trees lay fragrant in the ferns.

Two shoulders of rock almost closed this lumber road, and she was obliged to dismount and lead the three horses through, single file. As she stood a moment to let them drink briefly at the brook, she caught the faint clink of a horseshoe on rock, and turning around, saw Vespasian Chancellor ride up to the forks of the road below, rein in, bend low in his saddle, and peer right and left for further trace of her horses' hoof marks.

With the chill of death itself in her veins she tremblingly unbuckled the holster flap on Yellow Bob's saddle, pulled from it his heavy cavalry revolver; recapped and reloaded it; tied the three horses, and, stooping, crept back to where the hill's massive shoulders narrowed the pass and made of it a rocky getaway thick with ferns and laurel. Into this green, wet ambush she crawled.

Waiting in Ambush

She never had killed anybody or any living creature; never had seen anybody die except on the stage. She remembered that Pauline Cushman had showed her how to expire gracefully and effectively in the last act. She recollected that the leading man had instructed her once how to load, cap, cock and fire a revolver, and she cautiously cocked the heavy weapon in her hand and leveled it through the laurel.

The chief of Confederate spies had walked his panting horse a little way along the southern branch of the wood road, still leaning low in his saddle and scanning the soft, moist soil. Evidently discovering no imprint of horses' hoofs, he straightentd up, turned his horse, and looked up at the rocky trail above. And saw the girl close to him, aiming her pistol.

At the same instant there came a loud explosion; his horse reeled and fell, shot through the head, carrying his rider crashing down among the bushes into the brook below. And here, where the big, bony horse had rolled and lay stone-dead, sprawled grotesquely, damming the bloody waters, the girl found Vespasian Chancellor, one leg pinned under his horse, groping about to free himself, and all covered with blood and mud.

When he had managed to disengage his legs and rise to his knees:

"Sit down on that dead horse," she said harshly, "and don't move a finger or I'll have to kill you, too!"

BAN ON FRIENDS WINS DIVORCE FOR WIFE

A husband's objection to Mrs. Dorothy Kelly, of 1021 School street, Coraopolis, having girl friends and joining girls' clubs though the couple were not living together today resulted in a divorce decree being granted by Judge W. Heber Dithrich.

The husband, John Kelly, of Brooklyn and formerly of Emsworth, was a student at Carnegie Tech when they were secretly married in November, 1930. The wedding was not revealed until the next June, when Mrs. Kelly told her mother, Mrs. Dorothy Porter.

Religious differences were also blamed for the marital difficulties. The divorce petition charged indignities. Mrs. Kelly testified her husband had refused to make a home for her.

MEANS SILENT IN PA. PRISON

The once talkative Gaston B. Means is called "The Silent Man" in the Northeastern Federal Prison at Lewisburg, Pa., it was revealed by Frank Merriman, 30, a cellmate, who today was sentenced here on a two-and-a-half-year-old conviction for forgery.

County Detective Frank Ritz, who returned Merriman here yesterday, said his prisoner revealed how Means was at hard labor with pick and shovel. Merriman and Means, who is serving a sentence resulting from the Lindbergh kidnaping case, were transferered from Leavenworth to Lewisburg eight months ago.

Kerr later explained that last February 6, McCready asked the Cumberland men to do some legal work for him. He paid them, Kerr said, $250, and gave the note. For the work done, Kerr declared, the lawyers were paid enough, without the note.

GORDON'S BANK APPEAL MOVE UNDER FIRE

The authority of Attorney General William A. Schnader's office to act for Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon in appealing the decision of Judge Elder W. Marshall, handed down here Wednesday, declaring the Banking Department's liquidation machinery illegal, will be questioned soon.

Gordon has announced that Schnader will appeal the case as soon as possible.

It is understood he plans to appeal directly to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, as he would ordinarily be entitled to do as a state official.

That course, however, will be closed for him and he will be ordered, some attorneys here think, to take his case to the Superior Court, on the ground that, as receiver for closed banks, he is a court official and not a state administrative officer.

The difference to the lay mind is trivial, but some lawyers stress Judge Marshall's decision on the exceptions taken by depositors of the Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue to the account of Gordon's deputy in charge of the bank, surcharging Gordon, as unprecedented.

In the opinion, Judge Marshall set forth the theory that Gordon is a court official and acted illegally in setting up the machinery now in use to liquidate closed banks in Pennsylvania.

The surcharge, of about $2,000, lays Gordon open to further surcharges in other banks, possibly totalling $1,000,000, if the Marshall verdict is upheld in higher courts. Of the appeal to those courts, Gordon has this to say:

"The centralization and advance payment policies both were instituted only after I had taken them up with the Attorney General's office and had received a decision upholding their legality.

"The Attorney General's office will appeal the case as soon as possible."

CHURCH FIGHT TRIALS PACK COURT

Women told of being struck on the head with hymn books; men of being slapped by members of the opposite sex, while Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff sat in judgment on cross suits brought against one another by factions in the Slavish Lutheran Church, Duquesne. There are 47 defendants on one side and 25 on the other, both charging the other with riot, inciting to riot and assault and battery.

Attorney O. K. Eaton represents the 47 defendants, headed by the Rev. A. D. Dianiska, new pastor of the church. Attorney William M. Ewing is representing 25 defendants headed by the Rev. John Murcek, ousted from the pastorate.

It is charged that he and his followers clashed with the new pastor and his friends in front of and in the church Sunday, July 2.

An injunction suit was won before Judge Thomas M. Marshall several months ago by the Dianiska faction when the Judge decided the Rev. Murcek had been legally superceded as pastor.

Testimony was expected to continue all day before the jury of nine women and three men.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

No Such Girl

A young woman, whose name I shall not divulge, submits the following rules and "specifications" for gals who sigh for the "free, free life," and those who yearn for single blessedness.

* * *

"Develop, very early, an inferiority complex," she begins. "That will be your greatest help. An invaluable asset."

WHAT! YOU EAT PIE ?!?
SURE WHY NOT ?

Be sure that you have been blessed with a pair of sweet old-fashioned parents, whose mid-Victorian ideas are modeled on the views of their own parents.

* * *

Hang around your Ma and Pa and absorb their quaint notions of 30 years ago. This will do wonders for you. Always be the paragon of maidenly propriety of whom they can be proud.

* * *

Eat all the pies and pastries you like—who cares? A flabby, overstuffed figure is no handicap for your chosen path. You don't need landscaping.

* * *

Get a reputation for having a mocking retort, a sneering rejoinder or a sharp come-back for everybody. After all, a reputation is a REPUTATION—even if it's a disagreeable one.

* * *

Develop a violent passion for ARGUMENTS and always be the last one to give in—if ever. When you cannot be the victor, do the next best thing—wear that superior smile. The smile of one who "knows better."

* * *

Never stoop to use make-up; it's vulgar and a waste of time. And the money that other girls squander on clothes, frivolities and beauty lotions, you can save to take care of you in your future single-blessedness.

* * *

If they call you Gandhi's pupil, "The Untouchable"—well, that's a triumph, and you can wave a flag!

* * *

In the presence of men, always talk "intelligently." Or recite long pages of your favorite authors to them. Men love to relax—and this will lull them into a nice little nap.

* * *

Be sure to tell all men the truth, whether they want to hear it or not. Abhor a white lie as nature abhors a vacuum!

I DON'T THINK YOU'RE CLEVER !

* * *

"These formulae," adds the author, "will guide you safely to a free and happy spinsterhood—and a yellowed hope chest."

* * *

Ah no, Miss K———! In these days, there's no such girl!

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

After her formal presentation tea, Alice Brown will go dancing tonight. And she dances beautifully.

Alice, who is the daughter of the McCleane Browns, of Sewickley, is being presented at a tea her mother is giving in the snowbound Allegheny Country Club this afternoon.

Tonight, her grandfather, J. Stuart Brown, is entertaining for her at a dinner-dance in the same clubhouse, one of the gathering places of Sewickley's smart set.

For the tea, Alice has chosen a poinsettia red crepe afternoon gown, most becoming to her brunette coloring. Tall, lithe Alice has bobbed black hair, sparkling eyes and an ivory complexion.

Gown of Red Crepe

Her gown depends on the material and the cut for its beauty. For its only trimming it has rhinestone buttons. The neckline is draped in cowl fashion, and the elbow sleeves have the restrained fullness in vogue this season. Her small hat is of black velvet with small red feathers for accent, and she is carrying an all-white bouquet.

Her mother has chosen a graceful long-sleeved black velvet afternoon dress, with which she is wearing a black velvet hat.

Bouquets Numerous

Alice has asked Elizabeth Craig, a deb of the past winter, to be one of her aides, as well as debs Betsy Liggett, Gwendolen Holmes, Margaretta Oliver, Peggy Mitchell, Barbara Verner and Patricia Witherow.

Aiding Mrs. Brown are Mrs. Ralph S. Richards, Mrs. J. Twing Brooks, Mrs. Percy E. Donner, Mrs J. Frederic Byers, Mrs. Clinton L. Childs, Mrs. Hubert L. Moore, Mrs. William P. Witherow, Mrs. David McG. Witherow, Mrs. J. Stuart Brown, Jr., Mrs. Lucian Patton, Mrs. Leslie M. Johnston and Mrs. Donald C. Bakewell.

Friendly Margaretta Oliver, another one of our petite debs, will make her bow in December. Her parents, the A. K. Olivers, will present her at a small dinner in their home December 27.

The dinner precedes the ball the J. Franke Drakes will give in the Pittsburgh Golf Club to present their daughter Constance.

MRS. GEORGE H. LOVE — MRS. CLARENCE STANLEY

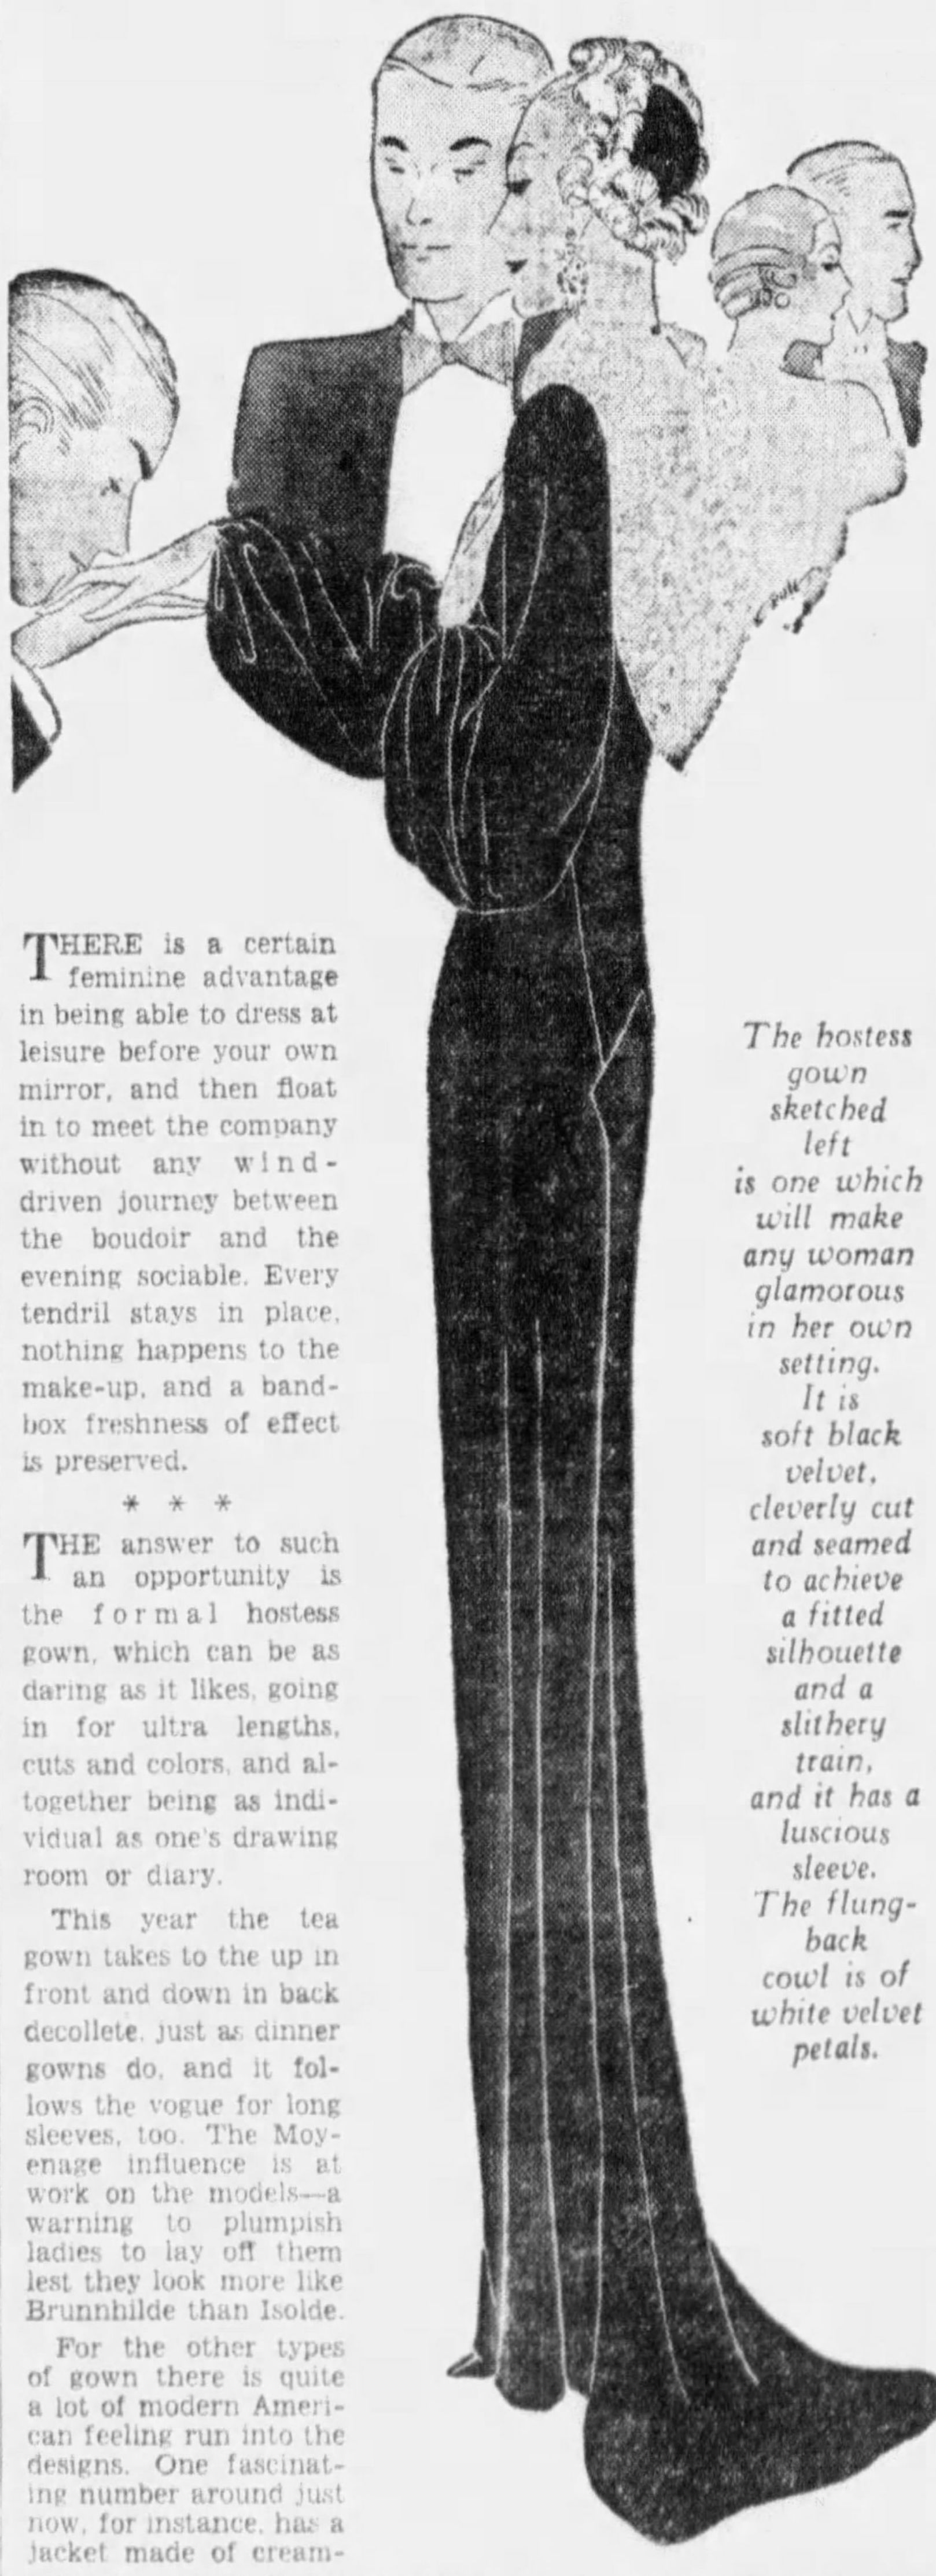
HOSTESS GOWNS ARE PRACTICAL AND ELEGANT

By PRUNELLA WOOD



The hostess gown sketched left is one which will make any woman glamorous in her own setting. It is soft black velvet, cleverly cut and seamed to achieve a fitted silhouette and a slithery train, and it has a luscious sleeve. The flung-back cowl is of white velvet petals.

THERE is a certain feminine advantage in being able to dress at leisure before your own mirror, and then float in to meet the company without any wind-driven journey between the boudoir and the evening sociable. Every tendril stays in place, nothing happens to the make-up, and a bandbox freshness of effect is preserved.

* * *

THE answer to such an opportunity is the formal hostess gown, which can be as daring as it likes, going in for ultra lengths, cuts and colors, and altogether being as individual as one's drawing room or diary.

This year the tea gown takes to the up in front and down in back decollete, just as dinner gowns do, and it follows the vogue for long sleeves, too. The Moyenage influence is at work on the models—a warning to plumpish ladies to lay off them lest they look more like Brunnhilde than Isolde.

For the other types of gown there is quite a lot of modern American feeling run into the designs. One fascinating number around just now, for instance, has a jacket made of cream-colored cotton-ball furniture fringe tucked over a turquoise blue silk gown. Another stunning model goes Chinese in line, but is developed in the French combination of cerise and violet, all in corded silk.

One of the maddest fancies of the moment is to add a tiny skull cap like a tonsure to one's coiffure for the trip from the wardrobe to the dining room below. It stays on all the evening, of course, and acts as a foundation around which the hair may be sculptured in new and interesting effects.

Socialite Colony Sojourning at White Sulphur

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Nov. 17.—The late fall days with invigorating mountain air continue to attract a large colony to this year-round resort, which is celebrating its one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary.

The glint of guns adds to the zest of the hunting season as it did in the days of the buffalo trails when West Virginia was a game paradise for Indian hunting parties and for Daniel Boone and other sportsmen of his decade.

Many fine specimens of deer were taken from the forest during the past week by hunters from West Virginia and adjoining states who came by the hundreds. With the close of the deer season attention is now being turned to the pursuit of rabbit, quail and grouse.

Joining the colony at the Greenbrier this weekend were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Brice P. Disque, of Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y. Gen. Disque was a distinguished leader in the Philippine Insurrection and the World War. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Leamy, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Barton Jones and family, of Lake Forest, Ill., arrived this week and have leased a cottage in Florida Row for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hammons and two children, of Portland, Me., who came this week, are making an indefinite stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Gould Shaw, of Boston, who have occupied a cottage since early summer, will remain until the last of the month before going to New York and then to Bermuda for the winter. During a visit at Upperville, Va., where they went to attend the John Hay Whitney races, Mr. and Mrs. Shaw purchased an estate of 126 acres at Warrenton, Va., which they will make their permanent home when the hunting season starts next fall. The estate includes extensive stables, which will give the owners an opportunity to further develop their interest and enthusiasm in horses and polo. Mr. Shaw, who is a poloist of note, will play with the Warrenton and Middleburg teams.

While walking on the promenade between the Greenbrier and Casino for luncheon yesterday Mrs. Shaw was seen wearing one of the smartest of fall costumes, which was a grass green tweed suit with three-quarter length coat, a small brown fabric hat with brim and a bright yellow wool scarf imprinted with horses, heads.

Mrs. Richard Mitton, of Boston, presented another striking figure in a knit sports dress of scarlet trimmed with white angora, over which she wore a brown coat trimmed with blue fox, topped with a brown felt foldover hat.

Smartly Gowned Audience Stand in Aisles for Kreisler Encore

When, to thunderous applause, Fritz Kreisler played "Liebesfreud" for the second time as an encore last night at Syria Mosque, there were folks standing up to hear him in the parquet circle as well as in the second balcony.

Many of the smart audience turned back from the exits when the great artist yielded graciously to the roar of applause that greeted the first "Liebesfreud," and stood in the aisles when there wasn't an empty seat close by.

Kreisler not only had an entranced audience last night, but an entrancing one to the eye. Everywhere one looked, there were colorfully-clad women.

The 1933 debs like music; the proof—there was quite a representation of them last night.

Sitting in a box with their elders were two of the most attractive buds of the season, pretty, child-like, blonde Margaret Taylor and distinguished-looking Mary Gordon.

Margaret chose a black crepe dinner frock slit down the back and having brief full sleeves of many narrow ruffles of black net. And a narrow net ruffle finished the high neckline.

A smart burnt almond crepe dinner gown with long sleeves draped interestingly at the elbow was the choice of dark-haired Mary Gordon. And with it she wore a charing little net cap having a border of black velvet in front, reminding one of a halo.

Chinchilla, that rare fur, formed the short sleeves of deb Margaret Phillips' black crepe dinner gown. Another deb, Margery Hillman, chose black crepe, too, having narrow bands of ermine across the shoulders. Florence Willock was in copper satin; Vardi Marshall, orange crepe, and debutante Peggy Mitchell, who came with her mother, Mrs. Harry L. Mitchell, wore a to-the-floor wrap of black velvet. Sherley Tunnell, also a deb, chose black, too—black lace and net. Eleanor McKennan and Sally Fields were together.

Post-deb Joan Diehl and Jane Sloan, in street costumes, were greeting friends during intermission. Others in the huge audience were Juliet Hillman, in Chinese blue velvet; Mrs. William Maclay Hall, in a black velvet dinner gown; Mrs. George Pearson, Mrs. Jacob S. Payton, Katharine McCloskey, Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson.

Mrs. Simon T. Patterson had her young daughter, Isabel, with her, and Mrs. John W. Lawrence was in her usual box.

The writer had a glimpse of Patsy Mellon, of Mrs. E. P. Mellon III, Mrs. Herbert DuPuy, Miss Laetitia Hunter, Mrs. Joseph H. Bialas and of Mrs. Brainard West in grape purple velvet, there with her little son.

Petite Rita Borntraeger wore an Alice-in-Wonderland band of rhinestone flowers about her blonde, bobbed hair. Her gown was of rose-red crepe having tiny rhinestone buttons down the back. With Rita was her mother, Mrs. Carl H. Borntraeger.

Mrs. George Singer Ebbert chose a black lace gown, the James Verner Scaifes were there, Mrs. Harold J. Dorrance, Mrs. Ellen Stone Bailey, the T. M. Joneses III, Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins, Miss Helen Rauh, Mrs. John E. Nelson, Katharine Frazer and Harriet Fickes.

Also noticed were the John H. Ricketsons III, Mrs. Hughart Laughlin, Mrs. George A. Benney, Jr., Mrs. Howard Hale McClintic, Mrs. William Reed Thompson, Mrs. Samuel Harden Church, Mrs. Lawrence Knapp and Mrs. John Gibson, Jr.

Mrs. C. M. McNally Entertains for 'New Daughter'

Yesterday afternoon in her home, "Rostrevor," Ben Avon, Mrs. Charles M. McNally entertained in honor of Mrs. Charles M. McNally, Jr.

Mrs. Paul C. Dunlevy, Miss Virginia Coggins and Mrs. John J. Mathison, of Wheeling, W. Va., daughter of the hostess, poured.

Through the Spyglass
Viewing the New

New items are practically tumbling all over themselves these days . . . they come so fast And we are kept busy dusting off our spyglass and hot-footing it up one street and down the next! And maybe this is why you find a new cheese mixed in with today's gift-y items! For information on where to find these new numbers . . . call Grant 6500 and ask for the Spyglass, or send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

* * *

So many initials roaming at large these days that we almost feel like sitting back and remarking about "fools names like their faces" . . . but can't quite screw up our courage to this point with a whole gob of brand new ones staring at us over price tags of only 29c!

And thusly, little children, you may plaster your name all over yourself for all we care . . . because these are quite remarkable initial pins for this price, and we wouldn't blame you if you wore one pinned to your pillow at night!

Gold or silver metal they are . . . about 2½ inches high . . . and dainty enough to escape bulkiness! 29c, but yes!

* * *

We've pulled a Little Jack Horner! Just "put in our thumb and pulled out a plum" . . . two plums, in fact!

Plum No. 1—is the beautiful new fruit cake which a well-known company is offering all done up in a little tin can . . . for 25 cents! A nice size to slice thin for tea.

Plum No. 2—is a glass jar of perfectly golloptious new cheese mix! Cheddar cheese and celery paste, this, and SO good on toast or crackers, or the snootier hor d'oeuvres puffs if you are a snooty person! 50 cents.

* * *

And lest ALL your thoughts turn tummy-wards after this . . . we hasten to yodel off the words about the store, bless them, which flaps ostrich trimming in our faces in true Mae West fashion! Not only do they flap . . . but they boast the lowest price for their ostrich trimming of anyone in town . . . $1.25 the yard! In bright shades . . . light shades . . . and in-betweens! Even the oldest evening frock achieves a new personality with a yard or two of this slung 'round the shoulders!

* * *

A feather in your hat . . . or a hat of feathers! Well . . . maybe it's the same after all. And anyway, we have feather hats on our mind at present and want to share the good news with you that they're preening themselves right under your noses now for $2.95! Which is something!

Coq feather turbans . . . in white, black, green, or red . . . one style serenely wearing the tiara-like circlet of them standing away from the head in MOST flattering fashion . . . oh most! And who wouldn't want to be flattered when only $2.95 was involved?

* * *

This is for gentlemen . . . but you CAN hear about it if you plan giving it to one of the species!

New madder print handkerchiefs . . . huge, colorful squares in Paisley designs, and all the rich colors of original Paisley shawls—THESE are what our little eyes beheld newly arrived in a certain men's department t'other day! $2 each . . . and Mrs. Millionbucks couldn't give a nicer gift! (P. S.—We asked a man, and he said he'd second the motion.)

* * *

So . . . what would you? A new perfume bottle, perhaps? 'Most any of us feminine critters can stand the thoughts of something of the kind . . . and with these jeweled ones bowing for a mere $1.25 . . . well, we wouldn't stand 'round debating the matter!

They're blue, pink, black or smoke-colored glass . . . in smart shapes . . . with antique-gold-metal trappings studded with green, pink, blue or amethyst stones! And look not a penny less than twice their own! Long-stoppered . . . the better to perfume yourselves, my de-ars! And what gifts they make! (They'll hold over ¼ ounce of perfume.)

—DOROTHY RANDALL.

Twentieth Century Club Gives Play by Mrs. Todd

The most ambitious of the three plays, all of which won prizes for Mrs. Kirkland Wiley Todd in the Twentieth Century Club's contest last season, was presented yesterday at the clubhouse. It is "The Challenge," a charming fantasy written in blank verse, representing a conflict between love and wealth.

An old man of wealth is taken by the spirit of his boyhood sweetheart to the bridge of life where together they watch different types of humanity cross, and decide whether each shall find wealth or love of the greater worth.

The cast, directed by the author and Mrs. H. Allen Machesney, read and acted the fantasy with the merit that always characterizes Twentieth Century performances.

The players included Mrs. Will Knox Dunlap as the man, David; Miss Madeleine McClintock as the spirit sweetheart; Mrs. Jacob Simpson Payton, Mrs. S. A. Gilliland, Mrs. Irving Danforth, Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby, Mrs. Ralph Howles, Mrs. Edward Klingelhofer, Miss Jane Sloan, Mrs. T. C. Clifford and Mrs. Ernest N. Calhoun.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

(Owing to the illness of Walter Winchell, this column is being written by Paul Yawitz until Mr. Winchell's recovery.)

A Columnist who can't stand the emotional reactions of a Sec'y writes himself a few notes

Dear P. Y.: The rumor comes from authentic sources that Fifi Dorsay and her Maurice Hill have been secretly hitched for the last two weeks . . . The ceremony is supposed to have taken place en route . . . The office boy who went out to get you a glass of water last Tues. returned casually this morning . . . He brought the water and, not finding you in, left it in the upper left drawer . . . Incidentally, he took a hand full of stamps out "to make room for the glass" . . . He said he isn't exactly satisfied himself with the way he has been handling your errands and is looking for a ghost to help him on the job . . . Could you recommend someone, he wanted me to ask you . . . Jean Harlow has definitely tiffed with her parents, the trouble having been brewing for weeks.

Phil Baker 'phoned from Chicago . . . He wants you to get in touch with Jack Murray, his air author, to get the story about his colored chauffeur . . . I called Murray and he tells it this way — Baker recently bought an expensive motion picture camera and two days later it disappeared . . . A detective learned that the chauffeur was playing the horses and had pawned the camera . . . Confronted with the facts, the thief broke down and confessed . . . "I had to steal the camera to get enough money to take your accordion out of hock before you missed it," he said. The situation was so funny that Baker laughed: "The next thing I'll find out is that he stole the gold out of my mouth" . . . It was the detective's turn to laugh. "You said it, Mr. Baker," he retorted. "The door man at the broadcasting studios told me this morning that the chauffeur had approached him with that $800 gold-bridge you seldom use and wanted to sell it for $5." . . . "And before he entered Baker's employ," Murray added: "This same George worked for Paul Whiteman, who has been missing 20 pounds ever since."

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., bought 12 of those imp puzzles on Fifth Ave. the other afternoon . . . The game is a revival of the old "15 Puzzle" that had both Continents groggy in the last half of the 19th Century . . . A year ago it bobbed up in Cairo and is getting popular all over again . . . Commander Byrd is taking four dozen with him on his expedition to the Pole . . . It would be a dirty trick to play on science, but why not ask the Commander to take the office boy with him, too, and in exchange we'll take one of the puzzles?

The snooty Mrs. Anthony Biddle of Philly does much of her shopping in the 5-and-10 . . . The Bradley-Smithes are increasing the population — by two . . . Customs officials have a new way of discovering whether or not you have valuable gems secreted on your body. They merely ask you to step into another room, and they submit you to a fluoroscope . . . The Georgia MacCauley-Jack Gunterr romance is now a rheumance . . . Say something nice about Paul at the Hollywood. He's the most gracious headwaiter in town . . . Not only do I think so, but so does the boy. He took his family up there last night and mentioned your name . . . Abe Lyman called and wants me to tell you to throw that brown hat of yours away . . . He says it looks "as though it were one of your life-savings" . . . A prominent editor has ordered a 3-installment article from a successful ghost-writer, the idea being to put the finger on the ghost-writing racket . . . But the editor will lift an eyebrow when he learns that the ghost is so busy that he has been compelled to hire another ghost to write it for him.

No one has commented on the fact that all the new bars about town lack the top rail, the reason being that people now sit against them to eat . . . And it's pretty difficult juggling a spoon of soup across an unwieldy mahogany rail . . . The competition among the newer Park Ave. hostesses is hectic . . . In order to keep her guests away from a cocktail party of a rival yesterday afternoon, one ambitious lady promised a parade of models in fashion array . . . It turned out most of them were Sally Rand imitators . . . Ned Wayburn phoned an interesting item . . . He says the shape of your thumb is an accurate index to the shape of your body . . . If you have bulging hips, you will find a corresponding bulge at the knuckle . . . The boy okay'd Mr. Wayburn's information and added that if the nail is dirty, the same is probably true of your face.

Why not suggest that the Mayor's office be guarded more efficiently? . . . To get in officially you must pass through a maze of rooms, foyers, and ante-chambers, all highly policed . . . Yet the windows of his offices almost open on a walk in City Hall Park . . . Paul Farrell, a psychologist, writes to tell you a note that might be discouraging to any lad or lass who contemplates suicide via the jumping route . . . Out of 2,116 cases studied—where there were eye-witnesses to the leap—2,109 made an immediate attempt to regain their perch once they were off . . . Mr. Farrell says that the second you are in the air, you want to have another chance at life . . . He advises people who are thinking of suicide to communicate with him through you, and he will prove to them where they are wrong no matter how unhappy their condition . . . He does not believe in religion, and so none of his arguments are based on it . . . Hal Phyfe, the famous illustrator, startles his friends by appearing at formal parties in Indian moccasins, a suede shirt, and a bandanna tied into a muffler, French fashion . . . Which, at that, is an improvement over the way you appeared at that Radio City broadcast Mon.

Lou Ashendorf volunteers the information "that when a man calls on a girl, he sometimes sends his card in, but that when a girl calls on a fellow she sends her big brother in." Goodman Ace wired several gags this a. m. and also an invitation to dinner . . . The boy wants to know if it's all right for him to go, if you can't make it . . . He has a date with his girl tonight and the stamps he took from your desk will only cover the theater seats . . . I think you should let him go. It will serve Ace right for the gags he sent you.

Your severest critic,
PAUL YAWITZ.

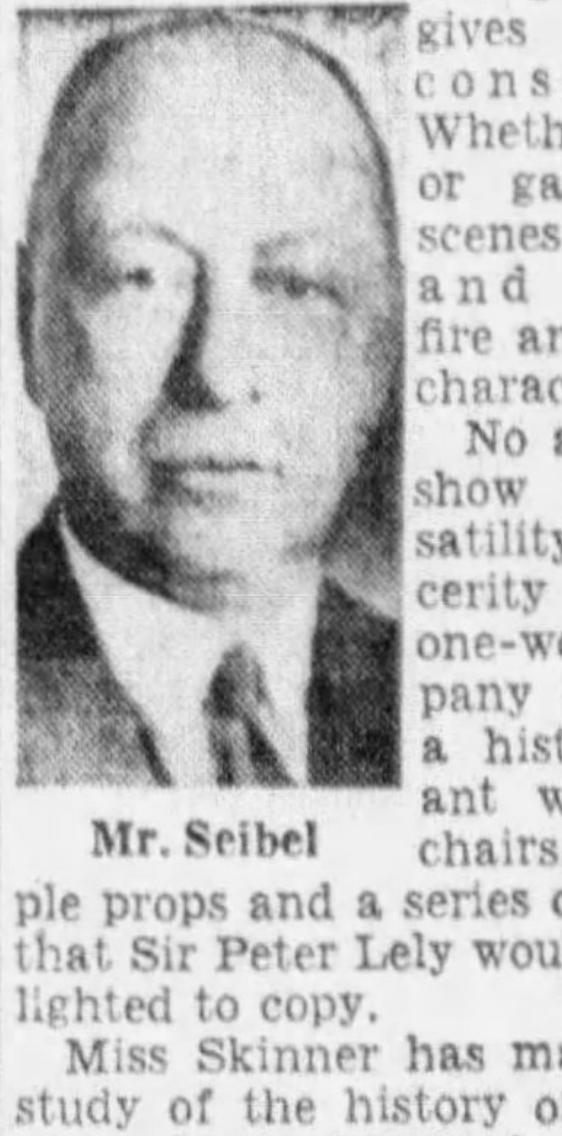
First Word by Baby Is Bad for Film

Baby LeRoy, Hollywood's youngest star, spoke his first word the other day, but he spoke out of turn and ruined a scene of Paramount's "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," in which he is playing with Dorothea Wieck. Baby LeRoy said "mamma" when Miss Wieck made her entrance, in a scene where he was supposed to be perfectly quiet. Cameras and sound devices caught it distinctly, and the ruined scene is to be placed in the files at the Paramount studios library, with a special print made for Baby LeRoy himself.

'Loves of Charles II' Parade Across Nixon Stage With Miss Skinner

By GEORGE SEIBEL

You may regard it as a lecture on history, illustrated by a whole portrait gallery of charming ladies, and delivered by the most charming lecturer since the celebrated Hypatia of Alexandria—that is the entertainment provided at the Nixon Theater by Cornelia Otis Skinner in "The Loves of Charles II."



Mr. Seibel

She begins with a prelude in which his widowed mother in exile speaks to him of his royal dignity—and closes with a scene at the deathbed in which his neglected wife forgives him and consoles him. Whether serious or gay, these scenes have life and dramatic fire and truth of characterization.

No actor could show more versatility and sincerity than this one-woman company putting on a historic pageant with a few chairs, some simple props and a series of costumes that Sir Peter Lely would have delighted to copy.

Miss Skinner has made a close study of the history of the reign of the Merry Monarch. When, as Nell Gwynn, the orange girl who became a great actress and a king's sweetheart, she uses words and phrases that are less than elegant, she uses the very words used by Nell of Old Drury—and omits some that were worse. When she lets Catherine of Braganza promise that "poor Nelly" shall not starve, she is merely repeating the dying request of King Charles.

COMEDY AND TRAGEDY

The characters and episodes verge from low comedy, like that of the Dutch Trollop in Breda, who smokes a pipe and empties her mug of beer or wine, to the pathetic mother and wife of the royal rake. There is a scene in which Barbara Villiers is posing as the Goddess of War for Lely the painter, which is the direct antithesis of the mincing and demure French flirt Louise de Queroalles, and both are etched as by a great artist.

There is never any affort or strain—all has the smooth finish of absolute perfection—with a dramatic variety that never loses its contact with the audience. Cornelia Otis Skinner makes history live by living history.

Scholarship also is revealed in these sketches, for the very variations of accent—whether Dutch or Portuguese, French or Cockney—show the student of language working with the tongue as with a paint-brush.

OTHER LITTLE PORTRAITS

Four other little portraits preceded the "Loves of Charles II." Most, if not all, of these had been seen here before. There is the "Lady Explorer," who has come to America to lecture on her African travels. There is the lady packing her trunks in a Paris hotel, who maltreats the French language with exquisite cruelty. There is the old lady on the hotel porch who indulges her cattish propensities at the expense of the new arrival. And there is a somewhat tragic sketch of the Barbadoes lady who is tainted with the tarbrush and has to keep to her own color.

It is all very beautifully done—all full of life and movement—and you would not think it possible for one little woman to impersonate a whole picture gallery. But Cornelia Otis Skinner does it.

Heiress Gets Film Offer

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 17.—Janet Snowden, oil heiress, likes Hollywood and the films so well that she seeks to become a motion picture actress.

The 19-year-old society girl, who figured in a sensational five-day marriage with Prince di Sirignando Don Francisco Caravita, recently took a test at Warner Brothers, and was offered a contract at $65 a week, the standard wage paid to newcomers.

According to studio attaches, she wasn't favorably impressed with the offer and has engaged an agent to negotiate her screen debut.

A pretty brunet with a nice smile, young Miss Snowden has attracted attention in the various Hollywood late spots since her arrival here a few weeks ago with her companion, Mrs. Edith Crocket. Jack Larue has been her constant swain, although she has been seen on occasions with John Warburton and other escorts.

Despite her wealth, the oil heiress passed up the fashionable Bevery Hills film colony and has taken a modest house in Hollywood.

* * *

If you can believe Joe Reddy, two scenario writers met on the golf course Sunday morning and the conversation went like this:

"Who was that with you at the football game?"

"That was my wife."

"Oh yeah! How did you get away from your girl?"

* * *

Separation rumors to the contrary, Laura La Plante will sail on the twenty-ninth from England and William Seiter plans to be on hand to meet her at the dock. If Bill directs the Moran and Mack picture in the East, he and Laura will remain on Broadway through the Christmas holidays. If film duties call for his presence in Hollywood, he'll try to fly to New York and bring Laura back with him.

If Sally Eilers hand't married Harry Joe Brown, she could have a title for the asking. A New York woman, who read Sally's divorce from Hoot Gibson but who missed the wedding story, writes offering to arrange a union with "a Hapsburg count from an old aristocratic family." His birth certificate, she adds, can be checked by any reliable lawyer.

Comedy Film In Davis

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell dollar-dig with a practiced form that, though unsuccessful in the monetary line, draws in the laughs in "Havana Widows," playgirl picture in the Davis and Sheridan Square.

As two show-tired chorus girls who go to Havana to "take" the ever-present and gullible male of wealth, they are really enjoyable. This in spite of the fact that the plot of the play has become trite through constant, little-varying use.

Doing his usual able bit to help the girls along is Allen Jenkins in the role of a gangster's secretary whose writing ability is limited to his name.

In Havana the "widows" pick as their best victim the portly Deacon Jones, played by Guy Kibbee. They have for their habitually tipsy "that-is-my-client-you're-compromising" lawyer, Frank McHugh, who staggers as Duffy.

Circumstances get twisted in the course of their badger game and instead of the Easy street money they expect, the whole crew lands in jail, where, the judge being thoroughly respectable, they are indignantly ordered out of Havana.

You've seen its type before, you'll see it again, but the stars in "Havana Widows" appease you somewhat by giving you a light, laughable performance.

Good Film in Fulton Is Retained

"The Private Life of Henry VIII" began its second week in the Fulton yesterday. It is a comedy drama dealing with circumstances surrounding four of the six marriages of the English monarch, there being only mention of the first, Catherine of Aragon, and only a grim suggestion of the fate of the second, Ann Boleyn. Charles Laughton plays the king in a manner to evoke the most enthusiastic praise, and the supporting cast is excellent throughout. It is an elaborate and a pleasing production.

Notes About New Bills

"Duck Soup," a musical comedy, with the Four Marx Brothers in the principal roles, is the screen feature in the Penn. In this picture the Marxes go to war. Raquel Torres and Louis Calhern head the supporting cast.

* * *

Robert Armstrong, Helen Mack and Roland Young have the leading roles in "Blind Adventure," screen feature opening today in the Pitt. Princess Yvonne, the "Mystic Wonder Woman," is a stage attraction.

* * *

Lola Bartum, former "Follies" girl, heads the "Burlesk Revue" that will open with a Sunday midnight show in the Variety. Included in the cast are three Oriental dancers, Diana Barton, Joan Maith and Frances McAvoy; four comedians, Harry (Shuffle) Le Van, John Barry, Sammy Clark and Eddie Kaplin.

Digging Spuds Chased Holman to Stage

Odd freaks make actors of some people. Three acres of potatoes made an actor out of that veteran stage and screen trouper, Harry Holman, whose latest appearance is in Columbia's "East of Fifth Avenue."

The tubers entered Holman's life years ago when his father made him dig them up. Halfway through the job, Holman decided there must be an easier way of earning a living than digging it out of the soil with a potato fork. He ran away from home, joined a traveling medicine show and was off on his theatrical career.

Weird Movie In Warner

By MILDRED FILLMORE

A diverting idea that is an absolute novelty on the screen is unfolded in "The Invisible Man," now showing in the Warner. Adapted from the story by H. G. Wells, it discloses a scientist who finds a chemical way to make himself invisible. But it also makes him crazy, and his madness prevents him ever finding the antidote that will restore him after he has transformed himself into a transparent state.

It is more eerie than "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Frankenstein" put together, but the audience is treated to some comedy as this prankish madman plays tricks that are amusing while he practices destruction while training to be the boss of the world. He kills on the one hand and is mischievous on the other. Naturally, the countryside is in an uproar until he is finally tracked down.

Trick photography makes the illusion thorough, and one gets quite a thrill at seeing the man become invisible gradually as he divests himself of his clothing, with nothing but his voice to give evidence that he has not disappeared altogether.

Hepburn Figure Help In Landing Job

Katharine Hepburn, who plays the role of Jo in "Little Women," one of the most immaculate and idealistic characters ever presented on the screen, originally got into films because of her sinuous figure. RKO signed her after watching her leap about a New York stage in "The Warrior's Husband" attired in a few pieces of tin.

Stanley Film Stars New Actress

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The extreme pleasure that comes but once in a decade, that of a surprising performance by an actress you never heard of, Margaret Sullavan, plus the pathetic story of a betrayed girl, made into a gripping human-interest picture, is in store for those who see "Only Yesterday" in the Stanley.

It is a story that begins back in the days when the soldier boys were going to war. Really, by use of one of those inverted endings, it begins quite a while after the boys have come home from the war, at the time of the Wall street crash, but that is a dramatic expedient that makes its romantic origins and eventual off-shoots all the more sharply defined.

"Only Yesterday" has its beginning after one has seen a good portion of the ending, and has become filled with the idea that John Boles, a victim of the orgy of speculation, just "can't take it," as the saying is.

And there it leaves him, temporarily, while a flashback takes spectators to a farewell ball given to departing troops. A charming little girl introduces herself to Lieut. Boles, and informs him that she has been assigned to entertain him. This adorable young woman is Margaret Sullavan, as promising a young actress as it has been your good fortune to see in many days.

Her happy dream is dashed when she goes to greet him on the return of the soldiers at the close of the war, expecting marriage that there was no time for when the young officer was sent away in advance of the time expected. He salutes her casually, and she overhears him asking friends who she is. Crushed, she turns away. He is the father of her child!

That is the setting that develops into a novel treatment of a type of story that was standard from "East Lynne" to "Way Down East."

You'll rave about Miss Sullavan, and you'll say that John Boles does the best work he has done since "Back Street." And for good measure, there's additional charm in the person of Billie Burke.

Plays and Players :: By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Fortune Gallo, who founded the San Carlo Grand Opera Company more than 20 years ago, still is the impresario of the organization, which will begin a week in the Nixon Monday night with the presentation of "Aida." Bianca Saroya will sing the titular role. This will be the first visit in several years of this popular company, that used to come to Pittsburgh annually. Indeed it is its first tour in some time, having only recently been revived by Mr. Gallo after an interim of a few seasons. Among its artists are several who have been members of the Metropolitan, Chicago and Philadelphia opera companies, including Aroldo Lindi, protege of Arturo Toscanini, who will sing opposite the American dramatic soprano, Mme. (all opera prima donne are madames) Saroya, in "Aida." The boxoffice sale of seats for this engagement opened in the Nixon yesterday.

Interest of adult audiences in a charming fairy story, "Alice in Wonderland," is indicated in the fact that it will be presented at five of the eight performances of Eva LeGallienne's Civic Repertory Theater Company in the Nixon the week of December 4. The dramatized version of the Lewis Carroll childhood classic will be given Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. "Romeo and Juliet" will be the bill Thursday and Friday nights and Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" will be presented Satruday night.

The Guthrie McClintic production of the new Owen Davis play, "Jezebel," which has been delayed by the illness of Tallulah Bankhead, is expected to make its appearance December 12. Miss Bankhead recently underwent an operation and is said to be progressing nicely.

Lives and Lines

GEORGE IS an actor. He is not a great actor. Never has been and never will be. He is, however, that most unusual of all mortals. He knows that John Barrymore and George Arliss are greater artists than he. It's a strange actor who will admit such a thing.

As a matter of fact, George has never kidded himself about the stage. He entered it as a youth because he thought it would be a pleasant way of earning a living.

And it is too—sometimes. The artist who doesn't take his work too seriously, manages, I think, to have a pretty good time out of life. There are rehearsals... of course, and heartaches and panderings to the wishes of so many managers who know so little.

But all in all, it's far from the worst existence in the world. If the gods lean toward you just a trifle, you find the years passing pleasantly enough. And since that is just about the most that any of us can ask from life, I think the level-headed actor is pretty lucky.

Let me see. Where was I? Oh, yes——

About 20 years ago George was married. He married a girl who was not in show business and he was extremely devoted to her. Six years after the marriage a baby girl was born. And George was just about the happiest father who ever handed out the cigars.

He lived only for his wife and little daughter. He was content to play small roles in large productions. His name was never in lights; his face was never on the billboards. But George didn't care about these things. He was earning a living for those he loved. And they meant more to him than all the fame in the world.

Funny, isn't it, to talk about an actor in that fashion? There is so much in the papers about the wild life these stage people live. Stories about actors like George never get into the papers.

The beginning of this year found George living in a modest house in Brooklyn with his wife and daughter. The girl was growing rapidly now. She was a beautiful child of 14 and was already in her second term at high school.

Then George fell into a lucky break. A lucky break, that is, for him. He had landed a small part in a mystery melodrama—and the thing had turned into a solid hit.

George's role was that of a doctor. He was on the stage for no more than two minutes. He would enter the scene and one of the characters would point to the dead man.

George would do as directed. He would give his opinion. He would leave the scene. His work was over. He would remove his makeup, murmur a pleasant good night and go to his modest little home in Brooklyn.

Provided with a regular income, George had managed to save a little money. His wife had new clothing. His daughter was doing well in school. He had a steady job. Things were going well.

Too well, perhaps. A few months ago his daughter was taken ill with a cold. Her mother ministered to her, but the cold lingered. A doctor was called. The cold hung grimly on.

George became worried. He called in another doctor. And still another. They were unable to stop the ailment. It developed into pneumonia.

The little money that George had saved had been put away with a definite objective in view. A little home in the country was George's aim. A pretty little home with plenty of soil to till. And then, goodby to the stage.

With the kid's illness, however, the money took wings. There were two nurses at home now—one by day and one by night. There were specialists to pay. And large drug bills to meet.

Still, George worked on in his play. He had to. If that job went now, he would be sunk completely. So, with the thought of that child lying desperately ill at home, he had to walk on the stage at each performance and enact the role of a doctor.

There was a matinee on a Wednesday. He played his part and then rushed to the subway. The child had been very sick when he left. He had phoned twice during the performance. There had been no change in her condition.

He entered his home in Brooklyn. He heard his wife crying. A chill racked his body. He looked pleadingly at the nurse.

"The child?" he murmured.

"Dead," was the brief response . . .

George worked the show that night. They could have done without him. Easily. When he returned to the theater, they asked him to go home. He refused. He appeared to be in something of a daze.

He slapped on his make-up methodically. There were no tears in his eyes. The others tried to comfort him. But he seemed not to hear them.

George stepped on the stage just as he had been doing for months. The familiar line was tossed to him.

"There's the body, doctor. Examine it."

The horror of the line was obvious to the entire company. George swayed slightly. His fists clenched. Then he shook himself—and went through his part as though nothing had happened.

The audience went home that night thoroughly satisfied. And the customers never knew that they had witnessed a drama within a drama. . . .

FIFI'S ROMANCE 'ON AGAIN'

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 17.—AP.)—The "on again, off again" romance of Fifi d'Orsay, film actress, and Maurice E. Hill, son of a Chicago building supply manufacturer, was "on" again today. The couple has filed a notice of intention to wed and may be married within two more days.

Although Miss d'Orsay once said she would marry Hill only in the event he continued his study of medicine and became a doctor, she apparently changed her mind, for Hill is in Hollywood with the announced purpose of finding a place for himself in the films.

Fifi yesterday said:

"We have to wait three days before we can get married. But we have waited seven months, so I guess a few more days won't make any difference."

Fifi told reporters she had picked "an especially nice husband," because she planned to be married "for a long, long time."

BURGLAR GANG SUSPECT HELD

Guns offered for sale in a Jeannette speakeasy led to the arrest of a Turtle Creek man suspected of being a leader in an alleged burglar gang which has been operating in the Monongahela Valley for several months, police said today.

Donald Pollice, 32, of 267 Braddock avenue, East Pittsburgh, the suspect, was held for court at a hearing last night before Justice of the Peace M. T. Gorham, of East Pittsburgh.

Police said Pollice was arrested after the guns, alleged to have been stolen from an East Pittsburgh hardware store, were offered for sale to a hunter at a figure far below their value.

The hunter informed police, who raided the speakeasy and confiscated two rifles.

New Film Scheme May Erase Age From Actress

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Your favorite movie actress may look 10 years younger the next time you see her on the screen.

If she is made up to look her youngest and Robert Edmond Jones' "three color film process" works out as anticipated, Marie Dressler, "the grand old gal" of the movies, for instance, will seem a woman in her late forties.

Jones, stage color and light expert and Harvard University graduate, came here from New York to conduct a month's test of a new film process that is to be put into effect for the first time in the near future.

ARRESTS FACE LYNCHERS

BALTIMORE, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The state of Maryland may seek murder indictments against nine persons for the lynching of George Armwood, Negro, at Princess Anne on October 18, as indicated in the request of Attorney General William Lane, Jr., for their arrests.

The Attorney General announced last night he had forwarded to State's Attorney John B. Robins at Princess Anne information identifying "by name, address and occupation nine persons who participated in the crime" and describing "the part each took," adding that:

"To kill by lynching is to commit murder. The leading of the crowd to the jail, the assault upon it and any effort to break into it, or inciting the mob to do so, and the taking of the Negro out of the jail are all a part of the same crime."

Lane declined to reveal the names until Somerset County authorities had had an opportunity to make the arrests.

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing, rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

DEVIL'S ISLAND EXILE TRAP OF INNOCENT GIRL

By EDWARD HUNTER
International News Service.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—The plight of an innocent 22-year-old, blue-eyed French girl, a lonely, penniless exile on Devil's Island, was revealed to International News Service today.

Daughter of the last woman convict sentenced to life imprisonment in the notorious French penal colony in the South Atlantic, she is known only as Vivienne. Both her parents are dead, and although innocent of any crime, she is forced by lack of funds to spend her days on the dread island in the tropics.

Vivienne's strange existence was brought to light by Irene Peyron, Salvation Army worker who has come to be known as the "Angel of Devil's Island." Just back in Paris after a new investigation of conditions in the penal colony, she described Vivienne as the most tragic of all the inmates.

The girl, she revealed, was the offspring of a released convict and the last woman to be sentenced to the island, the practice of sending women prisoners to Devil's Island being abandoned 20 years ago. She said:

"When Vivienne came of age she discovered that although she had done no wrong, she was virtually sentenced to life imprisonment in the penal colony.

"She was given a little schooling until she was 13. But there was no one to feed, clothe or house her when her parents died, much less care whether she ever accumulated the comparative fortune needed to pay her passage to France.

"At length she obtained a job as a servant. This has given her new life and new hope."

According to Miss Peyron, man made Devil's Island the scene of torture and suffering it is today. She said:

"It was meant to be a paradise, from the double viewpoint of beauty and climate. It reminded me of Monte Carlo. The islands and the mainland could have been a world-famous and prosperous tourist resort. But man has made of it a devil's island.

"Sentence there is torture—mental barbarity. There they have all the penalties of prison life with what is much worse in addition—the prospect that it will never end. There is no hope. Only water and the thick foliage and the marshland, and the vampire bats come at night and drink the blood of sleeping men."

Cranberries Recommended To Promote Health

Modern science has revealed nutritive quality of this traditional Thanksgiving delicacy which contains sugars, acids, pectin, fat, protein, ash and fiber.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City,
United States Senator From New York,

History tells us that when the Pilgrims landed in Massachusetts they found the cranberries growing wild. They used the fruit either fresh or dried. It was a favorite dish, but not because our forefathers were aware of the nutritional value!

It remained for modern scientists to discover the value of the cranberry in the diet. Within recent years many intensive studies of its food value have been made. The reports published are interesting and illuminating.

The cranberry is among the last of the berries to mature. It grows in marshy land and care is essential to produce successful crops. The cranberry plant has a slender trailing stem and evergreen leaves. Its flowers are a pale rose color.

The berry is of a bright scarlet color. There are many varieties of the cultivated cranberry, but only two types are important. These are the large, or American berry, and the small berry, known also as the "mossberry" or "moorberry."

The cranberry is most extensively cultivated in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Washington. It is said that in Massachusetts alone, 14,000 acres of land are used for the growing of cranberries. The season starts in early September and lasts until spring.

NUTRITIOUS FOOD

In addition to its agreeable taste and attractive color, the cranberry is a nutritious and wholesome food. It contains over 11 per cent of dry matter which includes sugars, acids, pectin, fat, protein, ash and fiber. The sugar content of the berry is relatively low and the acids high. The unusual amount of pectin found in the berry causes it to jelly readily.

It is interesting to note that the pulp and juice of the cranberry become firm with a sugar content of 45 per cent while with other fruits more sugar is required. Its ash content is alkaline in reaction. This aids the body in preventing acidity. Many important minerals are found in the berry. Lime, phosphorus and potash are found in fair amounts. The quantities of iodine and manganese found in the berry are unusually high. The iodine content is richer than that of most other fruits and vegetables. It is comparable to that found in certain fish and other sea food chiefly important for its iodine supply.

AIDES GROWTH

Vitamins are food substances essential for normal growth of the body. They also protect the body against colds and infections. Vitamin C is found in appreciable amounts in the cranberry. This vitamin promotes the normal growth of the body. It aids in developing strong teeth and a strong bony structure. This vitamin is often destroyed by cooking. Vitamin A is found in small but important amounts. It is known as the anti-infective vitamin. It helps the body overcome colds and infections.

The cranberry is a food worthy of wide recognition. It should be included in the diet because it stimulates appetite, aids digestion and is a rich source of valuable elements.

RAILWAY FIGHTS BUS CHANGES

Hearings on applications to the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission by the Brentwood Motor Coach Company for major changes in route and schedule were held here yesterday by Examiner William E. Best.

Its application for permission to use an optional route via the Fair Haven-Provost road going to and from Brentwood with no change in schedule was not opposed.

Another request, however, for permission to begin direct service from Brentwood to Pittsburgh through Brentwood Villa and Brentwood Grove was called into question severely by attorneys for the Pittsburgh Railways Company. The coach company called several residents of the district in an effort to prove that such direct service was needed by the public.

CHOOSE COFFEE BY taste ...NOT PRICE

High price coffee does not always mean high quality coffee, neither does low price coffee always mean low quality coffee. However, A&P performs a feat of modern magic by combining the high quality with the low price. The famous A&P Trio, Eight O'Clock, Red Circle and Bokar are coffees of the very highest quality which together outsell any other nine coffees on the market. Match the quality of A&P Coffees with that of the Coffee you are now using—forget the price and compare quality against quality and we'll wager you'll find one of the A&P Coffee trio just suited to your idea of what really is good coffee. ¶ A&P Coffees are brought to you—direct from the plantation—at one small profit. Try them all and choose the one you like best.

REALLY fresh COFFEE

IS GROUND BEFORE YOUR EYES

by real freshness in coffee, we mean Natural freshness not "preserved" freshness. And this is assured when freshly roasted Coffee beans are ground to order before your eyes. Nature's seal, the coffee bean itself, is the best guardian of coffee flavor; when this seal is broken for you by grinding, at the moment you buy, you know you are getting all the rich, full coffee flavor. That is the reason A & P coffee is ground when you buy it.

People Do Not Get Jealous Because of Adoration

"What," I asks, "will we do for better people?"

Is Jealousy a "natural instinct"?

Is it something you just can't help, if you love a person?

Let's think of it. And so—

Dear Elsie:

Will you please help me? I am very unhappy, and I don't know what to do. If things go on this way I am afraid my marriage is going to go on the rocks, and that would break my heart.

I wish you would talk to my husband through your column. He reads it, and if you will say something about our problem, maybe it will make him see just how things are.

He makes me miserable by paying attention to other women when we go out. When I reproach him about it he just gets angry, and accuses me of "being jealous." Of course I am! How can you help being jealous, when you love someone? It's just a natural instinct.

My mother's life was made miserable by the same problem, and I get shaky when I see my own life going that way. She always told me that even when she and my father were first married he wanted to dance with other girls. She insisted that he dance with no one but her. I think she was absolutely right! Don't you? But he never would see it, and so they quarreled every little while.

LIKE HER FATHER

She always told me that men were unreliable, and that you have to watch them closely. My father always made her miserable by stopping on the street to talk to some woman or walk to her door with her, even when she was a neighbor and everyone who knew us could see him.

And now my husband is beginning to be just like him. When I try to show him how wrong he is, he just shouts at me that I am jealous.

Please help me show my husband that it is perfectly natural to be jealous, when you love a man, if he acts like my husband does. If things keep on this way I don't know what will happen. I am terrified. Leta.

Frightened? And well you may be, sister. But not for the reason you think.

SELFISHNESS

Jealousy a "sign of love;" a "natural instinct?" Hooey! Jealousy isn't any more natural or loving than murder. Jealousy is simply the cowardly, cruel, savage in you, running amuck.

You're not jealous of your husband because you adore him. You're jealous because you're afraid some other woman may prove more attractive—afraid he may not give you every particle of his attention.

Selfishness, fear and stupidity—these are the things which wrecked your mother's home; and they are the things which are wrecking your home.

Why on earth shouldn't your father have admired other attractive human beings, male or female? Why shouldn't he have been courteous, sociable? If such natural, human acts made your mother miserable, she deserved to be miserable. And if these things make you miserable, you've wished it on yourself.

Men aren't any more "unreliable" than women. A jealous woman is as vicious and vulgar as an unfaithful man. You and your mother were infinitely worse "home wreckers" than your father or your husband.

If you want to save your home, get busy on yourself, Leta. For, as things now stand, you're a 100 per cent domestic menace

'Conspirators' Act to Thwart Avis Arlen

Lillian smiled reassuringly at the startled faces of Noel and Mary, as with one voice they asked her what she meant by advising that "the guard be changed" upon Avis Arlen every 15 minutes after her reaching the farm house upon the day of the wedding.

"Don't be frightened," she adjured them. "I don't mean that she's going to throw any bombs, or slip poison into Mary's coffee, or drop a crowbar on the wedding cake. In all probability she'll be as smooth and sweet as custard pie, and perfectly hamless withal.

"But, on the other hand, there's no use forgetting that the lady thinks—without any reason, of course—that she's entitled to have a grouch over this wedding; and though she hasn't brains enough to make any real trouble, she has just enough low cunning to try to make you two uncomfortable if she can.

"We'll all be on the watch, though, and her claws will be drawn before she has a chance to unsheath them. With which Hibernianism, "she laughed merrily, "I would like to call Mrs. Graham to the chair while we go into a committee of the whole to tackle this bridesmaid business."

"I shall be glad to take the chair," I said sincerely, "for I haven't an idea in my head as to what is best to do. Suppose you tell us first, Mary, what you want us to do. Of course Noel can't help very much in this particular case."

"I should say not!" Noel burst forth, with all his aversion to Avis Arlen breaking through his husky voice.

FAVORS CAROLYN

"But Mrs. Underwood and I are very much at your service; so tell us what you want."

"I want to give Carolyn a break, for one thing,' Mary said. "She's such a brick that if this Arlen pain-in-the-neck is going to prance down the stairs ahead of me, Carol's going to have a chance to descend, too. But," anxiously, "that will mean two more outfits, and you've already done so much for me—you and Uncle Dicky."

"Will you please put that part of it out of your head, now?" I said severely. "And see that you do not refer to it again. The two outfits are already as good as ordered. The next thing is whether we can get them in time or not."

"In 24 hours and in these slack times," Lillian said judicially, "the establishment that furnished the wedding dress could do something much more difficult than that. But they'll have to have hold of Miss Arlen early. They can fit Marion and Carolyn without seeing them as they have their measurements, but that girl has the general contour of a bony horse. She'll take a deal of fitting. Let me go into the silence for a minute."

She chuckled, and then put her elbows on her knees and cupped her chin on her hands in the fashion so familiar to me. The rest of us kept absolute silence until she dropped her hands and sprang to her feet.

"Coming up for air," she intoned, as if she were announcing a railroad station. "And I have ze gr-rand idea. It's name is Helena Brixton."

LILLIAN CONFIDENT

"But," Mary interposed, "won't she be sore because we didn't ask Carolyn to be a bridesmaid earlier?"

"Of course, she will at first," Lillian answered calmly "but I've explained things to Helena Brixton, and brought her out of grouches, before you and Noel were born, and I don't believe my hand, or rather my tongue, has lost its cunning.

"Helena'll understand after I get through with her. She'll meet Miss Arlen tomorrow, and will tip the wink to the modiste to finish the Arlen's dress last, so that she won't be able to get it until day after tomorrow, the morning of the wedding.

"Like it?" Mary was almost incoherent with joyous relief. "It's perfect!"

"Thanks for all the broccoli," Lillian said with her gamin grin. "Then suppose we go on to the next question. What's to be the color of these bridesmaids' gowns?"

Across Mary's face flashed a determined look.

"Something that will tone in with Marion's gown and be becoming to Carolyn," she said. "Maybe I'm a meanie, but I can't help being glad that anything that will suit Carolyn and Marion won't be so good at all for dear little Avis."

Road Back to Normalcy From Riches Hard One, Says Fay King

FAY-KING

By FAY KING

The speed with which some girls go from cafeterias to caviar is amazing.

But in many cases the trip back from champagne to sandwiches is just as swift.

Lately I heard that one such charmer who surprised me by sipping champagne with her breakfast is back to good old coffee again!

We've seen humble brunettes become blazing blondes choked in chinchilla. Seen them leap from only a 'phone book to collections of rare first editions. Heard them talk as if life had never been without butlers, chauffeurs and personal maids.

Seems that nothing is so simple as adapting one's self to things one was never accustomed to.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Preventing a Grand Slam Bid

When a player is preparing to make a bid of seven in a suit and hears the opponent on his right double a contract of six, he cannot be greatly blamed for preferring the greater safety of a contract which appears certain to be made and redoubling it rather than venturing upon what must now appear to have the possibilities of being a losing contract.

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

            ♠ J 8
            ♡ A Q J 6
            ◇ A K 10 6 5 4
            ♣ 7
♠ Q 10 6    |  North  |   ♠ 9 3 2
♡ 10 7 5 4  |West East|   ♡ 9 3 2
◇ J 7       |  South  |   ◇ 8 3
♣ Q J 10 2                ♣ 9 6 5 4 3
            ♠ A K 7 5 4
            ♡ K 8
            ◇ Q 9 2
            ♣ A K 8
```

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 NT	Pass	6 ◇	Double
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

If South instead of his unconventional bid of four clubs had bid four notrump, it is probable that he would have prevented East from making the sacrificial Double and thus saved points for himself and his partner. Had South bid four notrump over three diamonds, then North would certainly have responded with five notrump as he would have construed South's bid to imply support for the diamond suit, and South, with the heart King and his remaining strength, would have bid the Grand Slam with assurance.

However, with the bidding as it actually occurred, East, doing a quick bit of mental arithmetic, decided that a Small Slam vulnerable and redoubled, even though an overtrick were made, would be less expensive than an undoubled vulnerable Grand Slam. Thus, with a perfectly trickless hand, he doubled the Small Slam contract. South now elected to redouble, taking the additional assurance of safety of the contract rather than the 520 points additional which the Grand Slam bonus would have netted him.

Today's Question

The bidding:

South	North
1 NT	2 NT
3 NT	Pass

You, West, hold:

♠ A J 9 7 4 ♡ 9 4 ◇ J 2 ♣ Q J 9 7

What do you lead?

Answer: The spade seven. The old fourth-best of your longest and strongest suit, even away from a tenace holding, should still be preferred when your suit is of five-card length and you have hope of regaining the lead. A spade Opening offers hope of taking three, four or conceivably five tricks in that suit if your partner holds one honor, depending upon the rank of his honor. The club holding, although a possible Opening, is too dangerous, particularly with the alternative five-card-suit Opening available.

SPIDER WEB PATTERN 509

This Quilt Is Quick to Make

We all have admired the beauty of a spider-web in the garden but probably never thought it would be possible to combine lots of them into a quilt. The ingenious quiltmaker of old, realizing their beauty, made them of patches of gay material and joined them into this Spider Web quilt. Aside from its pictorial quality, it is unusually easy to make. Like the Pineapple design, it can be done by starting at the center and joining on the patches, around and around till the block is complete, or those who prefer, can make it by forming the patches into four squares and joining these to make the block. The small illustration above shows how few and simple the pattern pieces are.

Pattern 509 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Laryngitis Is Common in Fall

This is the time of the year when colds and inflammations of the upper air passages are exceedingly common. Perhaps no disorder is more annoying than a sudden inflammation of the larynx or pharynx.

Dr. Copeland

Acute laryngitis, as its name implies, is an acute inflammation of the larynx and vocal cords. It appears suddenly, with a dryness and tickling in the throat. At times the victim complains of pain when swallowing. The voice becomes husky and speaking is difficult and tiring. Cough is not present at the beginning, but it soon develops and leads to expectoration of large amounts of mucus.

This annoying affliction usually follows exposure to sudden changes of temperature, climatic changes, or the inhalation of irritating smoke, vapors or dust. It is a common complaint of singers and public speakers who overuse their voices.

Acute laryngitis is best treated by complete rest. Every effort should be made to avoid conversation, cold air and irritating smoke. The room should be kept at an even temperature and if possible the air should be moist. This is easily accomplished by keeping an open pan of water over the radiator or stove.

Like laryngitis, pharyngitis may follow a sudden change in temperature or exposure to cold and dampness. It is usually traceable to neglect of nasal catarrh or a head cold. It is an inflammation of the lining of the upper part of the throat.

The throat feels sore, dry and stiff. As a rule, the glands of the neck become swollen and painful to touch. Occasionally the tonsils are involved, and the symptoms are then more marked.

Fortunately, the discomfort lasts only a day or two and then passes away. Recovery can be hastened by complete rest in bed and the use of an atomizer for the inflamed throat. Bear in mind that when the inflammation persists it is probably due to continued irritation from chronic nasal catarrh or sinus infection.

In such cases permanent cure can only be brought about by the removal of the underlying cause. Nasal infections, sinus disorders and diseased tonsils should never be neglected. They are a constant source of irritation and a menace to health.

The Tea Set

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it improper to have an antique tea set on a coffee table in our living room? We have no tea wagon for our dining room, and we have a percolator set on the buffet. We intend to use this tea set. M.

I don't believe that you will find it convenient to keep your tea set on the coffee table in your living room. It would, I believe, be very much in the way on a table that finds so many other uses for itself. Even if you already keep your percolator set on your buffet, it would, I am sure you will find, be convenient also to keep your tea set on the buffet.

Notes of Sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending a few words of sympathy to a family where the wife and mother has passed away, should one send the father and daughter each separate word of sympathy, or should one address the envelope like this:

Mr. John Doe
Miss Alice Doe
Miss Ruth Doe

I have never met the daughters E.

The note of sympathy should be addressed to the father, who is the chief mourner, and in it we would send, too, our sympathy to the daughters.

Household Hints

The stove should be a "cooking center." Near it should be grouped frying pans and other utensils that are put on the stove to heat before food is placed in them; pan covers, forks, spoons and ladles used in cooking; and salt and pepper. Many utensils can be hung on the wall, especially if a sheet of zinc or composition material is tacked to the wall over the plaster. Narrow shelf can hold the rest.

To line a mold with jelly, place one or two tablespoons of jelly in the mold, and when this cools and begins to thicken slightly tilt the mold gently so that the jelly runs all over the sides and bottom, forming a thin coating of jelly. When this is set, place in pistachio nuts, fruit, angelica, etc., to form a pattern, and cover with another layer of cool jelly; allow to set and then pour in the bulk of the mixture.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A sweet whisper in the ear is a new earring with a tiny silver bell. It unscrews, so that one can insert a tiny scrap of perfume-soaked cotton. This novelty comes in various metals.

A new partnership is that of fur with fine lace. In a lovely dinner ensemble, black Chantilly lace makes the frock, and it is worn with a jacket featuring a high collar, fitted epaulettes and a fitted waistline, all emphasized with bands of Persian lamb.

Never too many shoes in the wardrobe, since the more shoes one has, the less likely they are to wear out. A most useful shoe is in brown patent, a one-button pump with cutouts at the side fastening.

ERMUDA ROUTE FIRST IN OCEAN AIR SERVICE

By ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT
Aviation Editor of the Sun-Telegraph.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 17.—Once gain the daring stunts and heroic chievements of yesterday prom- e to become every-day perform- nce of tomorrow in aviation's re- arkable progress.

From the staid and conservative ociety of British aircraft con- tructors comes the formal an- ouncement that regular air serv- e between the United States and ermuda will be started next year nd that this service is to become he first link in a regular trans- tlantic schedule between Europe nd America.

This service is to be operated intly by the Imperial Airways, reat Britain's far-flung system airlines, and Pan-American irways, this country's real "all- merican" airline system, with in- rnational networks of air trans- ort companies.

LAN NORTHERN LINK

A little later, the announcement clares, the "route further north, ing by way of Canada," will be dertaken. Weath conditions ere must dictate progress made, d apparently the two routes are supply alternate summer-win- r lines.

Already considerable headway s been made in negotiations for utes and arrangements with the nadian and Newfoundland gov- nments.

Recent scientific surveys of the rthern route, and a mapping ght by Col. Charles A. Lind- rgh and his wife, have added nsiderable data to available in- mation. In the South, the route obably will be America to Ber- da, Azores, Spain or Portugal.

Flying boats of great speed and y-load capacities will be used. hile England has some fine fly- boats, American equipment eady on hand is capable of fly- the necessary laps, and sea- anes nearing completion in this untry—now being finished on e Pacific Coast and on the east- n seaboard—can boast even eater performance.

Thus the pioneer ocean flights only a few years ago, flights en criticized as "foolhardy," ere stunts" and a "detriment aviation," are bearing fruit.

In the race for supremacy in e cross-Atlantic service will be nd other nations.

The French already have flown e South Atlantic and a few eks ago completed test flights th seaplanes. With all of the ench commercial lines now rged into the one company, ir-France," with government pport behind it, the French are owing renewed vigor in pushing e European air mail service into uth America by way of South rica and Natal.

RMANS MAKE TESTS

The Germans, also, are hard at rk on the problem of ocean hts. Successful tests involving ueling in mid-ocean on the con- rted liner Westfalen were re- rted several weeks ago.

The ship has been turned into ocean airdrome. With radio rection and modern navigation struments available to pilots, the anes take off from the western of Africa, or Portugal, or ores, and fly directly toward the ating airdrome.

Interesting experiments with a ide belt of canvas trailing be- nd the ship for a landing ramp" also have been reported connection with these mid- cean operations.

When two organizations like the mperial Airways and the Pan- merican Airways get together, sults should not be long in oming.

The two companies have a great cord of achievement to their redit. London to Capetown. Lon- on to India and London to Aus- ralia; and then, New York to uba, Central America and around he rim of South America, is some- hing to be proud of.

Col. Lindbergh's findings, when made public, will add to the gen- ral picture, and it should not be long before New York and London will be on regular schedules of a world-wide system of air transport —all because a few "fool-hardy pioneers" had the courage and bility to pioneer new skyways.

Wilkinsburg Plans Public Incinerator

A committee from Wilkinsburg council met with advocates of a public incinerator to discuss the project that will cost $100,000.

In the opinion of those advocating the incinerator it would save the borough $10,000 annually. Formerly the removal of garbage cost the borough from $43,000 to $47,000 a year, but under a new contract it will cost but $22,000.

Warm and Satisfying 'Heavy' Dishes Are Welcome Now

Today Prudence Penny gives you some main course dishes which will make your dinners just heavy enough for these bitter days. Beef surprise, Italian pulpetts, roast wild duck and Swiss carrot and potato soup have a "filling" quality that is welcome while the mercury hovers low.

Then, too, the judges have given prizes to side dishes and desserts that are equally useable. Housewives appreciate the help given them by the daily prize winners.

One of the hundreds who have written in expressing her appreciation is Dorothy M. Davis, of 1309½ Kenneth avenue, New Kensington. She says:

"Your contest is a clever idea and I want to thank you for the many good recipes I have been able to obtain through it and through your own menu suggestions."

Just as she won one of the ten $1 prizes awarded daily, so may you. Or perhaps your recipe will even get the $5 prize. Mail all your best recipes at once to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, and within a few days they may bring you a material reward.

EXPECT 15,000 IN PARADE

At least 15,000 persons will take part in the Christmas spectacle November 25, which will officially usher in the Yuletide season in Pittsburgh, Frank W. Shea, director of the parade, predicted today. The spectacle will be sponsored by the Pittsburgh Civic Parade Committee.

Among organizations to compete for awards are the Swift Mission Brigade Band of 40 pieces, the Brentwood Drum and Bugle Corps of 35 members,,and the Sec Hawkins Club with a 40-piece band and 140 marchers. Although a long list of contestants for prizes in the costume event, for which the firstaward will be $25, has been enrolled, Director Shea announced positions in the parade will be held open for any man, woman or child in the city or suburban districts.

The feature of the event, which has been designed to revive the old-fashioned Christmas spirit here, will be "Santa Claus," who will officially be welcomed to Pittsburgh by Mayor John S. Herron on the steps of City Hall.

STRESSES NEED OF CANAL

Pittsburgh will decline into a minor industrial section if it does not soon awaken to the importance of its waterways, Leon H. Gavin, of Oil City, told the Propeller Club of Pittsburgh at a luncheon in the Roosevelt Hotel. The city must seek an outlet to the Great Lakes and a nearer route to tidewater, via the Allegheny River and French Creek, he declared. He continued:

"Only an improved river and canal will permit the recovery of vast virgin resources in the Allegheny Valley, among which are millions of tons of ore and coal. With the building of flood control reservoirs, as contemplated by the government, there will be an abundance of water for the needs of the canal and navigation on the Allegheny River.

"Millions in Pennsylvania taxpayers' money is going into the construction of reservoirs and improvement of waterways in the central and western sections of the United States, but not one dollar is being spent in Pennsylvania. The Allegheny Valley is the Ruhr of America."

GOVERNMENT RULING

ends confusion on bran products

TO PROTECT the buying public, the United States Food and Drug Administration has advised that every package of cereal labeled "Bran" state on the label exactly what it contains. If less than 50% of the cereal is actually bran, the definite percentage should be printed plainly on the carton. If other parts of wheat are included, a qualifying phrase explaining this should be added.

• • •

Before this ruling, even part-bran products were sometimes mistakenly referred to as "Bran." It was not easy for the purchaser to distinguish between a cereal that was entirely bran, or all bran with flavoring, and another that was mostly wheat. The disappointment that resulted from this confusion was due to the fact that part-bran products contain only a percentage of the "bulk" in all-bran products.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is labeled "ALL-BRAN Deliciously Flavored with Malt, Sugar and Salt," a statement which describes the product fairly and honestly. This delicious cereal contains nothing but all bran with the necessary quantity of flavoring—just enough to give it that rich, nut-sweet taste!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has won millions of friends because it corrects most types of common constipation safely and pleasantly. It furnishes a generous amount of "bulk"—needed to gently exercise the intestines, and to promote normal elimination.

Laboratory research has shown that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is also rich in vitamin B and iron.

For most kinds of common constipation, two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are enough. In chronic cases, two tablespoonfuls with each meal.

However, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is not a "cure-all." There are types of internal disorders causing constipation which should be treated only on a physician's advice.

But if you can eat lettuce, spinach and other "bulky" vegetables—you can also eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to advantage—for its "bulk" is much the same as that in leafy vegetables.

When you buy a bran cereal for the relief of constipation, read the wording on the package. The facts are there! Make sure by asking for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—the most popular cereal of its type in the world—because it furnishes "bulk" in concentrated form for satisfactory results. At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

STOCKS YIELD LITTLE UNDER SELLING

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Stocks and shares were inclined to take a breathing spell today, after their sharp spurt of yesterday, but only small portions of the advance generally were yielded under profit-taking sorties.

Although the price of domestic gold was again unchanged, the British pound rallied about 5 cents to $5.31 and French francs recovered .05 of a cent at 6.45 cents. Both, however, gave up most of their gains later. Gold mining shares were a trifle heavy, and a few of the alcohols slipped, but most other equities held to a fractional range. Grains and cotton were a bit easier, as were some of the other commodities. United States government bonds were slightly lower in quiet trading.

While rumors of an embargo on the export of capital, nearby dollar stabilization and a possible statement from the President on "sound" money were widely discussed in Wall street, many stock market operators were inclined to pursue a cautious policy in view of the somewhat confused monetary outlook.

Foreign exchange bankers, although not officially notified by the government that heavy transfers of capital to London through purchases of foreign securities must be stopped, indicated that they had been warned, unofficially, that every exchange transaction would be more closely scrutinized than heretofore and that only obvious commercial dealings would be permitted. Without the issuance of any official embargo, it was said, the tightening of exchange restrictions would do much to stem the capital flight.

Financial circles had understood that, owing to the leave of absence taken by Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, the monetary statement which the Secretary had announced he would make late this week would be made by the President. Official quarters at Washington, however, reported they knew nothing of any forthcoming executive statement.

In the face of recent heavy liquidation of government bonds, financial quarters were rather surprised to note, in the report of the Federal Reserve System for the week ended Wednesday, that the reserve banks had purchased only $1,500,000 of additional federal obligations during the period. It had been generally believed that the system had been supporting the market. The low total of the reserve's purchases, however, was said to indicate considerable public investment buying at the low levels.

A decline in freight car loadings for the week ended November 11, of 30,109 from the preceding week was a little more than seasonal, but was not altogether unexpected by followers of rail equities. Total loadings for the week amounted to 577,676, which exceeded the same 1932 week by 40,939.

WHEAT TAKES SHARP DIP

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Influenced by a sharp drop in sterling, grain prices underwent early setbacks today. Strength of securities was virtually ignored.

Opening at ⅞ decline to ⅜ advance, wheat later receded all around. Corn started unchanged to ½ lower, and subsequently showed a general decline.

Rallies later both in wheat and corn carried prices at times to above yesterday's finish. Helping the wheat market recovery were trade reports that dry subsoil conditions in the domestic Northwest and in parts of Canada were worse than was the case at this time last year.

Corn buying was promoted as the result of an authoritative summary emphasizing that the total corn supply at present approximated but 2,450,000,000 bushels, compared with 2,900,000,000 in November, 1932. In addition to this tremendous shrinkage, it was asserted the use of corn would be larger because of acute shortage of other feed grains this year. Oats followed corn. Provisions lacked support.

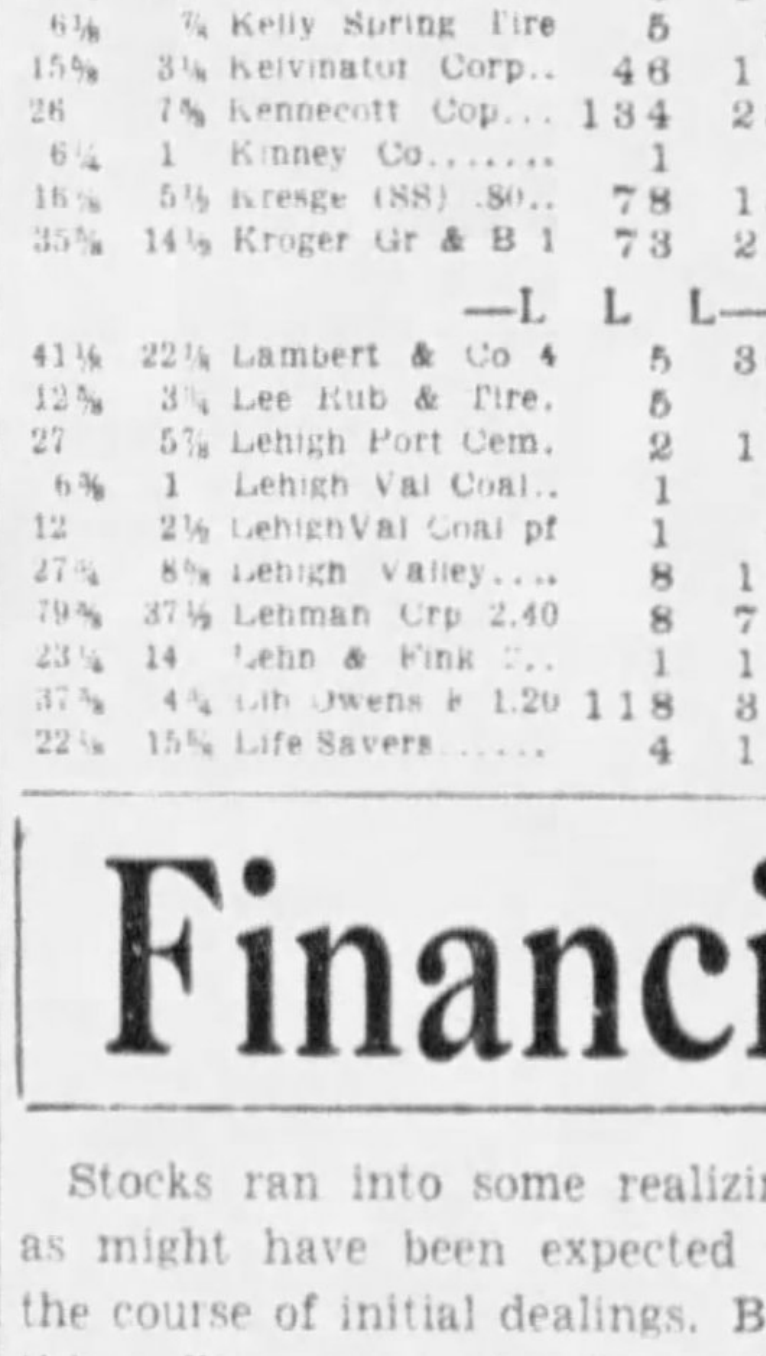
Big Oils in Forefront As Stocks Push Forward



Stocks ran into some realizing as might have been expected in the course of initial dealings. But this selling was absorbed quite readily and the main trend was again definitely in the direction of higher levels once it was out of the way. Buying of the follow through type came into the market on a broad front making for considerable activity and lifting several active issues to new highs for the year. Among the prominent description which moved into new high territory were Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of Kansas, Socony-Vacuum, Atlantic Refining, Du Pont, Continental Can, Freeport-Texas, Texas Gulf Sulphur, and Mathieson Alkali.

Metal shares ran counter to the general trend of the market through the forenoon. Shares of the gold mining companies, together with those of the silver producers were generally easier, slipping down in some instances for sizeable recessions. Laggardly action here was perhaps accounted for so far as the gold shares were concerned by the decision of the administration to hold its buying price at $33.56 an ounce for the fourth consecutive day. Silver stocks presumably were influenced largely by the slowing down of the pace of speculative activity for the rise in silver futures recently.

The fall in new capital issues in October to a record low since compilation of monthly figures was begun by Dow-Jones, calls attention again to the effect of the securities act and monetary uncertainties on new financing. Since Congress passed the measure, capital financing has dwindled steadily, and the October volume of $5,383,310 was the lowest since September, 1932. Normally rising business would have witnessed some resumption of capital financing, but with the securities act in effect, this has not been the case. Stock financing accounted for all the activity in the capital market last month.

The report of a tighter restriction on the export of capital could not be confirmed at the New York Federal Reserve Bank, which is exercising the control, in effect since the banking holiday last March. Ever since then the Federal Reserve has been refusing permits for the free export of capital, but it has been possible to get it out of the country through purchasing foreign securities, operations in the commodity markets and other methods. Wall street was uncertain what action might be taken to tighten the control, but one report was that international security transactions would be more closely scrutinized.

Utility shares apparently hold little attraction for the average trader. Aside from Consolidated Gas which started the day with an overnight gain of about a point only to lose it later it later, power and light shares did not participate to any extent in the forenoon advance. On the contrary a few of the prominent descriptions in that group slipped into new low ground for the year, namely North American Company and United Corporation preferred. Selling was not especially marked in volume, however, and it was interesting to observe that weakness where it developed was not pronounced in a few of the holding company issues, Electric Bond & Share on the curb suffering a sharp setback.

From a technical standpoint the market is viewed as behaving encouragingly. Wednesday's dip, it was pointed out, did not develop volume on the selling side. Rather the sharp reaction at that time is now regarded as having been in the nature of a "shakeout" move such as has been characteristic of the current "bull" market since the middle of 1932. Moves of that type, it is argued, have usually preceded important forward movements. A move in the rails through last week's tops confirming as it would the action of industrials would go far toward consolidating bullish opinion in market circles.

UNITED AIR LINES

Air transportation is proving to be a very potent aid to business, says W. A. Patterson, vice president of United Air Lines, in an article entitled "How Business Is Using the Airways" in the current issue of the Executives' Service Bulletin, published by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. "A recent check of our passengers showed that 60 per cent of them were presidents, vice presidents and sales managers of corporations, 20 per cent were engineers, statisticians and executives of corporations, and the remainder were miscellaneous travelers," says the article.

CHAIN STORE SALES UP

Twenty-one chain store companies and two mail order companies had total October sales of $220,656,490, an increase of 4.9 per cent from 1932, says a compilation by Merrill, Lynch & Co. All groups except the grocery division participated in the upturn.

COCOA BEAN IMPORTS

Imports of cocoa beans during the first nine months of the year amounted to 402,898,216 pounds compared with 346,702,730 in the same period of last year.

ARMSTRONG UP ON LOCAL BOARD

Trading volume expanded on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today as the local list responded to the sudden upturn on the "big board" late yesterday. Armstrong Cork was one of the strong features of the local list with several hundred shares changing hands on an upturn of more than a point during the early trading. Fuels continued to hold back and failed to reflect the resumption of activity noted in the general utility lists yesterday. Lone Star was handled in small volume around $6, the level at which it has been selling for the past 10 days.

Pittsburgh Brewing preferred was steady to firm but turnover in the issue was comparatively light. The low priced brewing group also showed a steady tone. Shamrock Oil moved ahead fractionally and Carnegie Metals held around yesterday's closing figure.

COTTON PRICES RULE STEADY

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 6 points lower under liquidation, which was offset by buying for trade interests. December, 10.17; January, 10.24; March, 10.39; May, 10.54; July, 10.67; October, 10.87.

There was also some southern selling on the setbacks and the market at the end of the first half hour was ruling around 10.13 cents for December and 10.50 cents for May, or about 5 to 6 points net lower.

Overnight reports from the South said that the recent advance had slowed up the acceptance of the government 10 per cent offers, but that the basis remained firm.

The market sagged off slightly later in the morning. There appeared to be a little more southern selling, accompanied by reports that recent advances had brought out rather freer spot offerings in some sections of the South. Commission houses were moderate buyers, and after showing net losses of about 6 to 10 points, with December selling at 10.11c and May at 10.47c, prices held fairly steady around midday.

Production for the first 10 months of this year totals 75,521,718 square feet as compared with 41,140,208 square feet produced in the first 10 months of 1932.

Sears, Roebuck's Sales Take Jump

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Sales of Sears, Roebuck & Co. for seven days, ended November 13, showed an increase of 40 per cent over the same week last year. The company's Southern territory continued to make the best gains, with the Middle West next.

DIFFICULTIES IN 'MANAGED' MONEY TOLD

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics New York University.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—It is high time to recognize that such things as "managed currency" and "commodity dollars" have no necessary connection with inflation. Both the advocates and opponents of inflation should see that these particular schemes of currency tinkering are illogical and impracticable.

Inflation and "reflation" mean putting prices up by putting dollars down. We will not discuss them here.

But the idea of a "managed currency" is to keep prices steady and prevent rises or check declines, by adjusting the purchasing power of money.

'ADJUSTABLE' DOLLAR

One of the most touted schemes for "managing" currency is the "compensated dollar." This means an adjustable dollar, the amount of gold in it being changed according to some "index" of commodity prices.

If the price "average" falls, the amount of gold in the standard dollar would be reduced, the notion being this would make people willing to pay more dollars for commodities and thus put prices up.

This is the so-called "commodity dollar."

REASONS FOR FAILURE

The reason why such a scheme cannot work are as follows:

1—A price "average" is an abstract, mythical thing, not a single price may equal the average. More than that, you can get the same average with individual prices varying in all sorts of ways.

For example, if wheat is 1, cotton 0 and steel 2, we get an average of 3. But 2, 4, 3, or 6, 2, 1, or 3, 3, 3, all give the same average!

What good, then could a commodity standard, or price average, be to the producer or the buyer of any commodity? And how could it assure stability for any particular commodity?

CAN'T DETERMINE PRICES

2—The scheme assumes that the number of dollars printed or the amount of gold behind each dollar can determine prices. This is obviously not true.

One of the most important factors in determining prices is the velocity of money circulation. This depends upon the activity of business and the volume of buying and selling which goes on.

The amount of bank deposits and the volume of checks drawn is a great factor. How then can we know how a mere change in the quantity of money or in the gold content of the dollar will affect prices?

STANDARDS NEEDED

3—Standard prices are the measure of values. Standard dollars act much as standard bushels do in measuring the quantity of wheat. We measure the quantity with bushels, and the value with dollars.

Now would anyone believe that we can stabilize wheat supplies by changing the content of the bushel? If we have too much wheat, can we reduce the supply by making the bushels basket bigger?

In the same way, we cannot change values by changing the size of the dollar, and we cannot stabilize prices by making dollars larger or smaller.

TIDE COMPARISON

Suppose we were to say that the rise and fall of the ocean tides do great harm, and that anyhow we don't want to see them any more.

But as long as we measure the water level from the bottom, we can't help seeing the tide cycles. So we pull up the pile with its fixed marks, and put in its place a float. On the float we write "normal water level" or "mean tide."

Then we could always say that the water level is "stable," because our "standard" would vary with the tide! Would that be sensible? Would there be any real standard?

Of course, gold is not absolutely fixed in value. Nothing is. Values are bound to fluctuate. They move according to the law of supply and demand as tides move, according to the laws of gravity, inertia, etc.

But is there any measure of value that is more stable than is the value of gold?

PREDICTS MOVE FOR SILVER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—To other American monetary developments there was added today a prediction by Senator Pittman (Dem.), Nevada, long an advocate of silver remonetization, that President Roosevelt "will take the iniattive in the restoration of silver."

He has under consideration now various plans to accomplish this, said Pittman, in a speech for the monetary conference called today by Senators Thomas (Dem.), Oklahoma, and Smith (Dem.), Socialist. Pitman continued:

"One plan that I have submitted to him for his consideration is the opening of the mints of the United States to the coinage of silver produced in the United States."

From the White House, though, there had come no indication that Mr. Roosevelt favored this plan above the many others that he is studying. But persons familiar with the President's program expressed a belief that eventually, at least, he would try to do something more concrete for silver.

Annalist Business Index Again Lower

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The Annalist, index of business activity, shows a further decline of 3.7 points, the preliminary index for October being 72.7 as against 76.4 in September, 83.6 in August, and 89.5 in July, the year's high. The most important factor in the decline was a drop in automobile production. Next in importance were sags in cotton consumption, steel ingot and pig iron production indices.

B. & O. to Furlough 2,000 Men for Week

BALTIMORE, Nov. 17.—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has issued orders to furlough approximately 2,000 employes for a period of seven days. The furloughs, officials said, will become effective November 20, and are made in accordance with budget requirements of the company.

Bank Acceptance Volume Increased

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The American Acceptance Council announced today that the volume of outstanding bankers acceptances at the end of October amounted to $736,790,945, an increase of $21,642,261 over the preceding month and of $38,170,578 over the same month last year.

PRICE OF GOLD UNCHANGED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—For the fourth successive day, the administration held the price of domestic newly mined gold at an unchanged level today, an action which many interpreted as increasing evidence of an effort to steady the wildly fluctuating dollar.

The quotation announced, $33.56 an ounce, was well below the world price of the precious metal, which ranged upward from $33.84 at the opening exchange rate of $5.28 to the pound at London.

The dollar at this figure was 20 cents stronger than at yesterday's London close, but it quickly weakened and ran down to $5.40 before another recovery set in.

Rumors flew thick and fast, prominent among them a report, later denied in government quarters here, that the administration was preparing to clap an embargo on export of capital and the offering of dollars on foreign exchange, on the strength of which the dollar underwent a spectacular recovery late yesterday in New York.

Whether the government is buying or not buying gold abroad at present, officials as usual would not say.

The purpose behind the domestic and foreign purchases is to increase the price of gold in the expectation of influencing commodity prices upward.

O. M. W Sprague, special financial advisor to the Treasury, declined to comment today on reports that when he called on President Roosevelt yesterday he carried his resignation with him, but was persuaded by the Chief executive to withhold it.

More Buying Power Need of Auto Trade; Prices to Jump

—By B. C. FORBES—

DETROIT, Nov. 17.—Prices of automobiles are to be raised.

Mr. Forbes

Manufacturers explain that costs have increased so much under NRA that such a step has become unavoidable.

HIGHER PRICES naturally are calculated to have a bad effect on sales — unless and until the nation's purchasing power substantially improves.

But even so, the 1934 outlook is generally regarded as reasonably promising, provided Washington does not too seriously upset sentiment and disturb economic and financial and employment conditions.

MORE NEW cars will be needed next year, executives explain.

A larger number of "old buses" will stop short, never to go again. Many of the owners simply have to find some kind of car to enable them to keep going—their whole mode of life is built on an automobile (personal transportation) basis.

Already the country's total of wheezy, dilapidated, almost worn out vehicles has been drastically reduced, therefore, hunters for used cars will find only a limited selection.

Then, too, many individuals and families farther up the financial, the social scale, have run their present cars far longer than customary, far longer than they relish. Their urge to acquire more presentable cars will steadily increase.

Furthermore, there are business concerns, ranging all along the line from small retailers to gigantic corporations, who have patched and painted and repaired their delivery wagons and trucks all through the red-ink years; but they will be compelled, willy-nilly, to purchase better equipment during the coming 12 months.

FRANKLY, THE boomlet which set in this summer has largely petered out for most manufacturers. A quite pronounced lull has set in.

This is partly, though not wholly, due to the relaxing of efforts to push sales of 1933 makes toward the tail-end of the year. Yet, one or two companies that have continued to advertise and sell very aggressively have sold and are still selling a surprising number of cars. Their "unseasonal" drive has proved distinctly profitable.

But broadly speaking, sales steam has dropped and so have sales.

BE PREPARED for automobile surprises and sensations within the next few weeks.

Big doings will shortly begin to pop.

Leading makers raise their eyebrows, smile confidently, and declare enthusiastically "wait and see."

The lower and lowest priced fields promise the most spectacular eye-opening innovations. Instead of "all three" the public will have four, probably five presented spiritedly for their consideration.

A brand new low priced car by a brand new maker of motor cars will be among the 1934 exhibits. Sponsored by an old established company of enviable reputation in its own allied fields, the newcomer's appearance is awaited with very keen interest.

HOW SUBSTANTIAL improvement has been in the automotive industry this year is reflected vividly by the sales of leading makers.

WHILE THE motor manufacturers contemplate letting their code expire on December 31, as announced exclusively in this column yesterday, the retail code is not included in the discussion.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Raw sugar was quiet early today. Futures opened at 2 points higher for December, but unchanged to 1 point lower for later deliveries. Later the whole list eased under a renewal of liquidation and selling by producing interests with December reacting from 1.20 to 1.16 and May from 1.33 to 1.29 with the market at midday ruling around the lows and from 3 to 5 points below the previous close.

In refined only moderate inquiry was reported and this was limited to nearby requirements.

Reserve Denies Dollar Rumor From Paris

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(INS.)—Reports from Paris that George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, had told French financial leaders that the United States soon would fix a stable and permanent price for gold on the American market caused a flurry in Wall street today, but were promptly denied by the reserve bank.

The bank officially stated that Gov. Harrison had not informed Paris that the price of gold would be stabilized or issued any statement concerning the matter.

FINANCE SCANS TREASURY CHANGES

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The leave of absence for Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, accompanied by the resignation of Under Secretary Acheson, has caused vast speculation concerning its probable bearing on monetary policy.

Mr. Rukeyser

Though it is difficult to psycho-analyze public men, several objective facts stand out. First, there is no question of the fact that Woodin has been troubled with his health. Secondly, in private conversations to this writer recently and earlier in the administration, Woodin has professed unstinted admiration of President Roosevelt both as a man and as a leader. His public statement of support of the President's monetary views is entirely in line with his earlier conversations.

Unquestionably, there were intangible assets for the somewhat heterodox administration to have in the Treasury post a man like Woodin, who had always been identified with big business. In the pre-election campaign, the support of Woodin and a few other business leaders helped to creat the impression that Roosevelt was safe for business.

The truth is that for several generations the Woodin family has been identified with wealth and with economy orthodox, centering around belief in the gold standard. Naturally the new policies were somewhat of a shock to the traditional views of such a man, yet, attracted by the Roosevelt personality, Woodin has gone along, in the belief that the extraordinary economic disturbances required extraordinary economic medicine. Woodin has repeatedly gone out of his way to make his adherence to the President's program known.

Incidentally, the changes in the Treasury will be construed in business and financial quarters as weakening the right wing among the presidential official family. Now the youthful Lewis Douglas, director of the budget and foe of inflationary ideas, is the undisputed head of this bloc.

MORE RESERVE CREDIT OUT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—(AP.)—The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended November 15, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,577,000,000, an increase of $13,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $372,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1932.

On November 15 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,564,000,000, an increase of $22,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $67,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $2,000,000 in unexpended capital funds, nonmember deposits, etc., offset in part by an increase of $27,000,000 in Treasury currency, adjusted, and a decrease of $19,000,000 in money in circulation.

The system's holdings of discounted bills, of United States Treasury notes, and of Treasury certificates and bills show little change for the week, while holdings of bills bought in open market increased $8,000,000, and of United States bonds $2,000,000.

Trade	*66.8	68.4	67.4	51.9	73.9	96.0	114.2

*Preliminary.

FURTHER RECESSION in business activity in this district took place last week. The recession was apparent in all factors of the index with the exception of electric power output and coal production.

This was the third successive weekly decline in activity. These changes are shown by the weekly index of business activity in the Pittsburgh district as prepared by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Pittsburgh.

For the week ended November 11, the index stood at 55.7. This index is a preliminary figure, subject to revision. It compared with an adjusted index of 56.5 in the previous week and with an index of 58.2 in the week ended October 28.

* * *

Shows Big Drop From Year's High

THE CURRENT INDEX of 55.7 compares with a high for the recovery of 78.1 in the week ended August 19. It is 22.4 points below this high but it is 16.2 points above the depression low of 39.5 reached at the end of the bank holiday. It is higher than the level of 45.8 a year ago but it is lower than the level of 61.3 two years ago.

The greatest factor in the decline during the week was in rail shipments. The index for this type of activity dropped to 46.8 from 49.8 in the previous week. Trade activity slumped to 66.8 from 68.4 in the previous week. The decline in iron and steel production to 41.7 from 42.9 was smaller than in preceding weeks.

* * *

Electric Power Records Increase

THE PRINCIPAL INCREASE for the week was recorded in electric power output, which advanced to 69.5 from 63.9 in the previous week. The only other factor in the index to show a gain was coal output, which showed a relatively small advance to 65.9 from 65.8.

Ever since the week ended August 19, the general trend of business activity, as shown by the index, has been downward, with a few brief periods of revival. The index is corrected for trend and seasonal variations so that compensation has been made for the decline which usually takes place in the latter months of the year.

CAR LOADINGS OFF 30,109

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Loading of revenue freight cars during the week ended November 11, totaled 577,676 cars, a decrease of 30,109 cars compared to the week preceding, but an increase of 40,989 cars over the corresponding week in 1932, according to the American Railway Association.

Lumber Bookings Double Year Ago

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Lumber orders booked at the mills last week were the heaviest for any week since May, 1930, and more than double those for the same week of 1932, reports the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

N. Y. Reserve Bank's Discount Unchanged

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The New York Federal Reserve Bank announced no change in its 2 per cent rediscount rate.

Exchange Asks Outside Advice on Rules

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—The New York Stock Exchange has decided to give non-member partners in exchange firms an opportunity to contribute suggestions and advice as to how the organization should be run, it was disclosed in Wall street today.

Heretofore governed with absolute authority by top executives and committees selected from the membership, the exchange now has invited a special group of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms to advise regularly with its all-powerful law committee. The new body is composed of both members and non-members, but all are partners in leading stock exchange firms.

In Wall street the modification of the exchange's traditional policy of having its elected officers and committees run the business without benefit of advice from non-officer members or partners in exchange firms is viewed as in line with the recent trend toward a more assertive interest in exchange policies on the part of the general run of firm partners.

TOWN GETS P. O. WITHOUT BID

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—In these days of quick changes in government building programs, Larchmont, N. Y.—allotted $100,000 for a new postoffice building by Secretary Ickes last week—could not remember today why it was favored.

It was said there that no one had asked for a new postoffice, but Treasury records showed that in 1930 Congress allotted funds for such a structure on the recommendation of the Treasury.

The allotment was made under the old $700,000,000 public building program, but no money ever was actually appropriated.

The recommendation to Congress was made as a result of a Treasury survey to determine where new postoffices were needed.

Some of the projects on the 1930 congressional list were sent to Secretary Ickes for approval as part of the government's present public building program, with the recommendation of the Treasury that the buildings be constructed.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

NEBRASKA'S TASK AS TOUGH AS PITT'S

All the dope heard by local football fans this week has had to do with the tough job that Pitt will be up against tomorrow in the game with Nebraska at the Stadium. That's only half of the story, just one side of the argument. How about the job that Nebraska will be up against at the same time? That's not going to be any soft touch, either. Admittedly, a Nebraska team that has not been beaten nor tied, and that has had only one touchdown scored against it in six games, must be respected very highly. But, while comparisons are impossible because the rivals have not met the same opponent in any instance, there is just as much respect due the Panthers.

Bob Timmons

Only in a defensive sense, in holding the Blue and Gold to three scoreless ties in Lincoln, have the Huskers shone against Pitt. They haven't scored a point against the Panthers in the last three meetings, and they have made only a single touchdown in their last five games with the locals. Pitt's defense is as strong as ever, and its attack has improved just as much as that of Nebraska. So there is nothing to indicate that the Panthers won't have at least an even chance to win tomorrow, possibly a little better than even.

PANTHER ENDS TO BE SEVERELY TESTED

The battle will be particularly trying on the Pitt ends. Joe Skladany, the district's ranking candidate for all-America end honors, and Bob Timmons, who has been promoted to a regular terminal post in place of Harvey Rooker, will be thoroughly tested. The duties of an end against Nebraska, on defense at least, never were so heavy as this year. Formerly, all that the Huskers did was to attempt to powerhouse their way through the line, and a wingman needed only a good pair of legs and an otherwise rugged physique.

Tomorrow, however, Skladany and Timmons probably will find themselves on the spot. The pesky habit Nebraska has developed of tossing lateral passes at any and all times makes the end's job very worrisome. If Skladany or Timmons tries to pin George Sauer or one of Nebraska's fast halfbacks into a corner, that star fullback may be found tossing the ball laterally to another Scarlet and Cream gridder, who may be a center, a guard or a tackle. Coach Dana Bible doesn't care who carries the ball, so long as the player goes forward as far as possible. Bible not only has developed the Sauer-Masterson-Kilbourne combination into one of the most dangerous threats in the West, but he also has trained his guards and tackles to be on the alert for a laterally thrown ball. The system promises wide open football tomorrow.

RUMORED NOTRE DAME MAY KEEP ANDERSON

In the thick of the numerous guesses as to who is going to succeed Hunk Anderson as head coach at Notre Dame next year, comes the rumor that that successor may be none other than Mr. Anderson himself. It may be significant that the reports of a coaching change for 1934 have come from every part of the map except the one place that ought to now a little about it—South Bend. Notre Dame authorities appear to be not at all disturbed over the miserable grid season, or what caused the plunge from the heights to the depths, viewing the change calmly as the fortunes of war, and taking the sensible attitude that there are at least one or two more important things in the world than football records. Uppermost in their minds is the fact of which many outsiders have lost sight, that Notre Dame, like any other college, is an institution of learning and not a breeding place for football [illegible].

Hunk Anderson

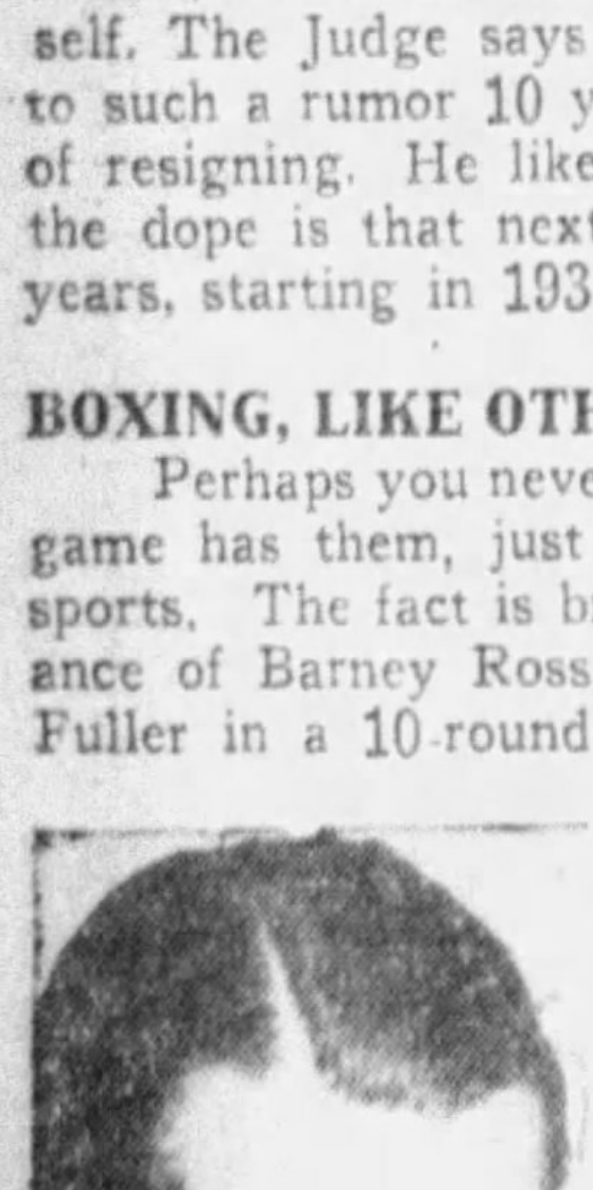
In this connection it has been suggested that the South Bend school is in a position to make a very influential gesture toward de-emphasis of the game by retaining Anderson as coach. The national custom of firing coaches because their teams ran into losing streaks has been largely the cause of evils that have brought charges of overemphasis. Many coaches have countenanced, if not encouraged, the proselyting and subsidizing of promising young players because they had to produce winning teams or lose their jobs. It is pointed out that a college of Notre Dame's standing could set an example toward smashing that custom by retaining a coach who has [illegible]ing against his record except a losing streak, and no one [illegible] South Bend school has intimated that that isn't just [illegible] will be done.

LANDIS DENIES HE INTENDS TO RESIGN

Those major league magnates who doubted the report that Commissioner K. M. Landis intended to withdraw from his high baseball office at the expiration of his term, if not before, are borne out by a direct statement from Landis himself. The Judge says he will give the same answer he made to such a rumor 10 years ago, and that is he has no thought of resigning. He likes baseball too well to give it up. And the dope is that next month he will be re-elected for seven years, starting in 1935.

BOXING, LIKE OTHER SPORTS, HAS SCOUTS

Perhaps you never heard of scouts in boxing, but the glove game has them, just as well as baseball, football and other sports. The fact is brought to mind by the scheduled appearance of Barney Ross, lightweight champion, against Sammy Fuller in a 10-round bout at Chicago tonight in defense of the junior welterweight title. Just how Ross ever won the 140-pound crown from Tony Canzoneri, or how Canzoneri himself ever won it from Jack (Kid) Berg, when the holder was required to enter the ring at the lightweight limit of 135, five pounds under his junior welterweight rights, isn't clear to some boxing followers, but that's neither here nor there.



Barney Ross

The point is that Ross is a product of the scouting system. Chicago claims to have one of the best Queensberry scouts in the business in Joey Medill, former lightweight boxer. Medill is now in the tailoring trade, but on the side he hunts fighters for the firm of Sam Pian and Art Winch. He attends the shows at the smaller clubs, and if he takes a liking to a performer he makes contact with the boy and then arranges for him to visit the Pian-Winch gym. The boxer is asked to don the gloves for a sparring session, and if the co-managers decide he has the makings of a good fighter they sign him to a contract. Otherwise, they drop him immediately and tell him they think he has no future in the ring. Ross was one of Medill's finds, and others were Solly Schuman, Al Greenfield and Davey Day. A pretty good collection for a single scout. The latest pick-up, Day, will be on the same card with Ross tonight in a six-round preliminary with Paul Dazzo.

SPRINT FINISH SCHEDULED IN ICE RACE

A spectacular finish is assured for the seven-day ice-skating race to be held in Duquesne Garden begining at 11:15 tomorrow night and continuing through Saturday night of the next week under the six-day bicycle racing rules laid down for the event.

Only the skaters even in the matter of laps will figure in the final hour of racing, which will be a continuous sprint for position. The daily sprint periods will be calculated in this final reckoning, points being awarded the first four teams in each dash.

RACE IN RELAYS

The skaters will compete in relays. There will be two contestants on each team and they will alternate on the ice for three-hour periods. Masseurs will be provided to ease aching bones and muscles during the rest sessions.

At least 10 teams made up of skaters who have competed in other grinds will face the starter's gun, and several teams of local skaters also will compete. Bobby McLean, for years the world champion skater, will act as manager and will not race, but will appear in special exhibitions, along with Evertt McGowan and Miss Grace Labeaux, spinning marvel of the ice. A Spark Plug act will contribute the comedy feature.

ENTRIES CLOSE TOMORROW

Entries for the marathon will be received by McLean until noon tomorrow at the Garden. The start of the race will be broadcast by WWSW.

Joe E. Brown, movie comedian, will act as starter for the race. It was announced today that no tickets will be sold for Sunday's session, but that all patrons of Saturday will receive free tickets for Sunday.

'GATORS CANCEL GRID GAMES

MEADVILLE, Pa., Nov. 17—(AP.)—Football has reached the end of its string in Meadville due to the premature and prolonged advent of winter.

With Montgomery Field covered with a dozen inches of snow and with temperatures not far removed from zero, Allegheny College authorities yesterday canceled the game tomorrow with Bethany College and also the game with Thiel next Tuesday. The latter game had been postponed from its previous date of last Saturday because of the weather. Both games were to have been played here.

Termination of the season leaves the 'Gators with a rather unusual record, without so much as having scored a point in losing five consecutive games.

Local Jewish War Vets Lodge Olympic Protest

Pittsburgh Post No. 49, Jewish War Veterans of the United States, through its senior vice-commander, Harry H. Schaffer, will file a formal protest against staging the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin with Daniel Ferris, national secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, upon his arrival here tomorrow for the annual meeting in the William Penn Hotel. The protest follows:

> "National Amateur Athletic Union,
> William Penn Hotel,
> Pittsburgh, Pa.
>
> "Gentlemen:
>
> "The Jewish War Veterans, Pittsburgh Post No. 49, believes that in view of the fact that Germany has not kept its promises made to Gen. Sherrill and other members of the International Olympic Committee last May that the American Olympic Committee should exert every effort to have the 1935 Olympics transferred from Berlin.
>
> "Last May Germany promised that the Jewish athletes would not be barred from participation in the International Olympics to be held in Berlin in 1936.
>
> "Since then none of the laws restricting Jewish athletes from competition in athletics has been withdrawn. This, combined with the fact that the reign of terrorism then inaugurated has not abated, but exists now in even greater measure, makes it impossible to conduct a sportsmanlike competition such as the world Olympics in Germany.
>
> "The Jewish War Veterans therefore respectfully request that the National Amateur Athletic Union go on record advocating that the American Olympic Committee should do everything in their power to have these games transferred to another country, even to the extent of withdrawing from the competition if this transfer is not brought about.
>
> "We hope that you will take favorable action on our request.
>
> "Very truly yours,
> "JEWISH WAR VETERANS OF THE U. S. A.
> "(Signed) HARRY H. SCHAFFER, > Senior Vice Commander."
> Pittsburgh Post No. 49.

The American Jewish Congress also has filed a formal protest against the staging of the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin.

PROTESTS FILED

WASHINGTON, Nov 17.—(INS.)—Protests against holding the Olympic Games in Berlin in 1936 because of exclusion of Jewish athletes will be presented at the meeting of the American Olympic Association here next week.

Advices received today said that protests would be brought here by many district delegates.

The quadrennial meeting will be presided over by President Avery Brundage of the American Olympic Association. Other issues to be considered include a uniform law governing amateurs and adoption of a policy toward use of the metric system.

Names in News

FRANK BURNELL, 81, who conceived the idea of the daily racing form and founded that publication 38 years ago, and a pioneer figure in baseball, died yesterday at Magnolia Springs, Ala.

JOSEPH E. WIDENER, operator of the Hialeah Park race track, in Florida, today said that all horses in the winter meeting there will be given saliva, respiratory and other tests before each race in furtherance of turfmen's efforts to co-operate with the federal government in stamping out the use of narcotics at race tracks.

HORACE DODGE, Detroit speedboat pilot, today announced his withdrawal from all racing activities and from the American Powerboat Association as a result of the association's refusal to permit the use of superchargers in the Gold Cup races.

HIDEO NISHIMURA, young Keio University student, today won the national singles tennis championship of Japan, defeating JIRO FUJIKURA in the final round, 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

At least three of Navy's football first-stringers—GORDON CHUNG-HOON, halfback, DAVE MILLER, end, and ROBERT K. JOHNSTON, guard—will be unable to play in the Princeton game.

The departure today for the winter golfing wars of BILL SCHWARTZ, St. Louis pro, is of prime interest to 125 of his friends, who have $950 invested in the pro, who sold "shares" in himself to finance a trip to tournaments in California, Mexico, Arizona, Texas, South Carolina and Georgia.

Present Football Rules Satisfactory To Sutherland

Joining in football's latest debate—the argument flaming over possible changes to bolster the offense—Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, has declared for leaving the rules alone.

The present rules, including the "dead ball" regulation, were made to protect the player, says the silent Scot, and should be left that way.

TARTANS LEAVE FOR CAPITAL

Carnegie Tech's football squad, on the road for the third consecutive week-end, left shortly after noon today, bound for Washington, D. C., and the game tomorrow with Georgetown University's warriors. As the Tartans were leaving Pittsburgh, Head Coach Howard Harpster was bemoaning the apparent impossibility of getting his boys into a serious frame of mind over tomorrow's tussle.

The players know that Carnegie ran roughshod over Georgetown last year, in one of the easiest victories any Tartan eleven ever won. They know Georgetown's record for this season, and cannot see why they should have much difficulty with the Hoyas. Not since the departure for Cincinnati for the Xavier game earlier in the season have the boys left in such a holiday spirit, and the young Plaid mentor fears that they may be due for a sad awakening.

Georgetown will be set for tomorrow's game, and Carnegie will not. Last year's debacle was a bitter pill for the proud Hoyas, for it was their worst defeat in 58 years. Coach Johnny Haggerty has pointed for the Carnegie game all season, and to add to his psychological advantage, he has just been signed to a new contract, and doubtless he will call upon his players to help justify the college's confidence in him.

Harpster, under the circumstances, is seriously considering starting a team, largely composed of boys who have seen little previous varsity service. He believes these lads might rise to the occasion where the regulars wouldn't.

GRID FRAY OFF

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 17.—The football game scheduled here today between South Brownsville and Scottdale High schools was canceled because of inclement weather. Grid schedules of both schools are now closed for the season.

'HARP' OPPOSES CHANGES IN GRID RULES

By Howard Harpster

Carnegie Tech Football Coach; All-America Quarterback, 1928.

About this time each fall stories appear from all sections of the country in which well-known football coaches are quoted as being dissatisfied with the football rules and suggesting changes.

Being one of the newer and younger coaches, my opinion probably will carry little or no weight, but I can't refrain from saying that the idea of changing the rules every time one turns around is ridiculous and harmful. No matter whether or not the present rules meet with the approval of the coaches of Siwash, Wa Wa or Upton, the rules are quite plain and as fair for one section or school as for another.

COACHES URGE CHANGES

The main trouble, I believe, is that a few of the coaches believe their systems of offense might be improved by adding or changing a rule or two. This is taken up by all users of said offense and the first thing we know there is quite a demand for the change. Others want different changes made and soon everyone has a rule or two he is attempting to have changed.

The game now has so many rules and approved rulings that even the officials who are paid quite well for their services have become confused in certain instances and have made mistakes in their interpretations and rulings. Knowing this, instead of leaving the rules as they are and giving the players, public, coaches and even officials a chance to catch up to them, the movement already is on foot to make more changes and to further confuse the issue.

The most general cry is that the defense is too strong for the offense. This is hardly the case because there are no more tie games being played this season than in former years. If there are practically the same number of winners each Saturday as before, then winners must be scoring points each week, and, in order to score points, the offense necessarily would have to be stronger than the defense.

OFFENSE HAS EDGE

The offense knows in advance where the ball is to be carried, who is to carry it and when. It also knows when a forward pass is to be attempted and where it is to be thrown. These things, of course, are very important to the defending team also, but it must wait until the play develops before its players know what is to take place. This certainly is a big advantage for the offensive team.

I can't understand why anyone should advocate a change in the fumble rule which would allow the defending team to pick up a fumbled ball and advance it. In the first place, every time a fumble is made and recovered by the opponent, you can figure that not only has the ball gone to the opposition but that the fumbling team has lost at least 40 hard-earned yards, for if the ball had not been fumbled the opponent

MATMEN OPEN NEXT WEEK

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Wrestling will be revived in Pittsburgh next Thursday night, when the newly-organized Olympic A. C., stages its first show in Motor Square Garden, it was announced today.

Dave L. Thompson, successful promoter of wrestling shows in the South, has come here from Knoxville, Tenn., to launch the enterprise and plans to make his home here if he succeeds in putting over the sport where other promoters have failed.

Promoter Thompson resided here from 1912 to 1916, when he was a steel buyer for Canadian interests. Associated with him in the club is Frank (Bull) Brown, well-known local baseball umpire and boxing judge, who has been installed as president of the club to meet the State Athletic Commission's requirements for local representation in the promotion of wrestling.

Matchmaker Bus Vogel has completed the best balanced card yet offered at the Moose Temple as the billing for next Monday night's boxing show with the signing of Johnny Durso and Charley Blozevich to box the second six-rounder. He has Mose Butch against Charley Burns and Anson Green against Billy Holt in two 10-rounders, and Jack Dalcherone against Whiz Lazor in the opener.

PIRATES, REDS SWING DEAL IN TEXAS

By CHARLES J DOYLE

Secondbaseman Tony Piet and Outfielder Adam Comorosky, of the Pirates, were traded early today to the Cincinnati Reds for Pitcher Charles Frederick (Red) Lucas and Outfielder Walter (Wally) Roettger as a high spot of the minor league baseball meeting at Galveston, Texas. Pirate President William E. Benswanger confirmed the deal this morning in a telegram to Vice President Samuel E. Watters. The swap was made on an even basis with no money involved.

Manager George Gibson, of the Buccos, assisted Benswanger in closing the deal with the new owners of the Cincinnati club. Larry MacPhail, who is expected soon to succeed Sidney Weil as president of the Reds, represented Cincinnati in the transaction.

The immediate reaction of Pirate fans to the big trade showed a division of opinion as to which team received the better of the deal.

The Pirates need a dependable pitcher to become favorite for the 1934 flag fight, but it developed today that Lucas was not the pitcher sought in the early dickering between Sidney Weil, retiring Cincinnati president, and the Pittsburgh officials.

SOUGHT JOHNSON

When quizzed on the matter today, Vice President Watters would not admit the identity of the hurler first sought by Gibson and Benswanger, but it is known that Gibby wanted to land Silas Johnson last summer. Johnson is much younger than Lucas and he had more natural "stuff." When the new owners of the Reds took over the club they apparently refused to discuss a trade that would send Johnson away from their club. Johnson is regarded as one of the greatest young righthanders in baseball.

Tony Piet did not hear of the deal that sends him away until notified by The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. The swift infielder was shocked upon hearing the announcement. He said.

"It is a big surprise to me as I had no intimation that Gibby was trying to trade me. But now that I am traded there is nothing I can do but accept the fates of the game. I will hustle for the Reds like I have always hustled. And I recall that other Pirates were able to succeed after being swapped from Pittsburgh. I regret to leave the team, but it's O. K. with me."

ROETTGER SLOW

Most of the fans who discussed the trade appeared to think that Lucas would prove a consistent winner for the Pirates, but they did not expect a lot of help from Roettger. The big outfielder has been painfully slow since he sustained a broken leg several years ago. He has not stolen a single base in the past two seasons. Wally batted only .239 last season in 84 games. His mark for his seven years in the majors is .287.

Lucas, who like Roettger is aged 31, won 10 and lost 16 games for the last-place Reds of this year. Red, however, has won 110 games as against 103 defeats over a 10-year period in the majors. Most

Two smooth-working football teams, one a champion of its section for the eighth time in 10 years, the other making its first appearance in the post-season playoff, clashed at Forbes Field this afternoon for the city scholastic title.

South Hills High School, coached by Ed Mazeski, is the Section II representative for the eighth time, having won the crown in 1924, 1925, 1926, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1933, while Peabody is the Section I champion for the first time since the league was organized into two sections in 1924.

CHAMP IN 1931

The only year in which South Hills was the winner in the post-season game, however, was in 1931 when the Tunnelites upset the dope by defeating Schenley in the Pitt Stadium.

South Hills was striving to make it three championships in succession for Section II today. The Section I champions had things their own way for eight successive years until South Hills broke the string in 1931. Perry High School, which won the title last season, made it two straight for Section II by defeating Westinghouse at Peabody Field in 1932.

Both tetams took the field this afternoon with star performers unable to participate. Jimmy Willis, star tackle and captain of the Peabody eleven, has been ruled ineligible because he slugged a Schenley player in the final game of the season, while Bill Devlin, star fullback of the South Hills team, will be unable to play as a result of an operation for appendicitis.

STEELE AT TACKLE

Coach Meyers announced today that Steele would take Willis' place in the Peabody line, while Coach Mazeski planned to use either Miller or Moore at fullback for South Hills.

The battle brought together two teams that were not figured to be championship contenders in the pre-season doping of the City League races. Both, however, put on pressure with each game and came through with flying colors.

Peabody's big achievement was the defeat of South High School, picked to win the title, while South Hills not only held Perry, defending champion, to a stalemate, but swamped Carrick to eliminate its most dangerous rival.

Compartive scores mean little in football, but the figures compiled by the two teams indicate they are evenly matched. Carrick held Peabody to a draw, yet lost to South Hills, 28-0. South Hills lost to Westinghouse, a team Peabody defeated during the regular season.

ROBERTS VS. FOWLE

Two brilliant halfbacks, both chosen on the All-City League team, announced yesterday by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will be pitted against each other this afternoon.

Abner Roberts, brilliant Negro halfback of the Peabody eleven, likely will bear the brunt of the East Enders' attack, while the hopes of the South Hills for a victory rest on the shoulders of George (Whitey) Fowle. Both are all-round football stars and will bear watching in the title game.

OREGON STATE WITHIN RULES

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Oregon State can go right ahead, as far as the rules are concerned, and heave their six-foot six-inch center, Clyde Devine, right up into the air to block any field goal or point after touchdown tries Fordham may make in their intersectional game at the Polo Ground tomorrow.

Bill Langford, secretary of the National Rules Committee, settled that as the experts about town scratched their heads and examined pictures of the play made in the Oregon game, only contest the Beavers have lost.

According to Coach Lon Stiner, two big tackles each take a leg on Devine just as the opposition starts a place kick play and hoist him into the air. He has blocked one kick in three tries, one got by him, and an end blocked the other while he was up there waiting.

There's nothing in the rules to bar that kind of defensive move.

By HOWARD JONES

Member, All-America Board of Football. (Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

Howard Jones

I recently have read articles by Glenn S. (Pop) Warner and Jimmy Phelan, University of Washington coach, in which they are somewhat concerned with the balance between offensive and defensive football. They are of the opinion that the pendulum has swung over in favor of defensive football, and I am inclined to agree with them. At least it is a mater for thought and consideration.

I have witnessed a number of college hockey games in the past few years and cannot say that I get a great thrill out of the game, simply because of the lack of scoring.

Basketball creates a great thrill because of the excitement attached to scoring.

Others have expressed it, and I, too, have the same thought that the success or failure of a football team should be based upon its offensive rather than its defensive strength, and it is true that nearly every coach spends more time on offensive work. In offensive football a player is restricted. He cannot use his hands or arms in blocking, whereas in defensive football he can use his hands and arms as long as he does not strike a blow with them on the opponent's neck, face or head.

I certainly believe the Rules Committee has done a fine piece of work in the past few years in eliminating dangerous elements in football. I hope the dead ball rule is in the game to stay, and I believe the clipping rule should remain as it is, with better observance of this rule by players. Furthermore, I cannot see any reason for changing the fumble rule, as it would practically do away with the so-called lateral or backward pass.

If it is true that defensive football is taking the punch out of offensive football, and there is more or less a consensus of opinion on this point, the simplest method of changing this situation would be to allow the offensive team five downs to make 10 yards within a restricted area — say between the 20-yard stripe and the goal line.

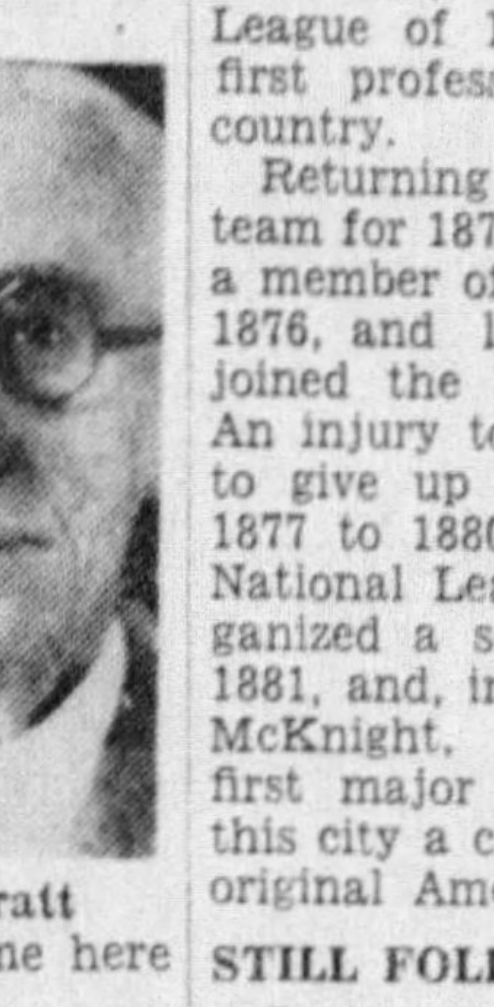
Pratt, Baseball Pioneer, 85 Years Old Sunday

Fourscore and five, the oldest baseball man in Pittsburgh and one of the oldest in the entire country, but still as young in spirit as in the days when he started out as a professional pitcher 67 years ago. There you have A. G. (Uncle Al) Pratt, diamond pioneer and Civil War veteran, who celebrates his eighty-fifth birthday anniversary today at his home, 706 Summerlea street.



Al Pratt

Uncle Al was a big-timer in baseball before the days of King Kelly, John Clarkson, Al Spalding, Cap Anson, Buck Ewing and other once famous stars whose names are associated with the early days of the sport. He was a professional before the time of the renowned Cincinnati Reds of 1869-70. He was one of the men to bring professional baseball into Pittsburgh and helped to blaze the trail for the game here and elsewhere.

BORN ON NORTH SIDE

Born on the present North Side in 1848, Pratt served in the Union Army as one of its youngest members, and started pitching professional ball in 1866 at the age of 18. That engagement was with Pittsburgh's first professional club, the Enterprise team, which played its games at old Union Park, in what then was Allegheny, 21 years before this city entered the National League.

The young pitcher remained with Enterprise in 1867, managed a club in Portsmouth, O., the following season, and from 1869 to 1872, inclusive, was the star boxman of the Forest City team of Cleveland, in the Professional League of Baseball Players, the first professional league in the country.

Returning to the Enterprise team for 1873-74-75, Pratt became a member of the Xanthas here in 1876, and later in that season joined the Cincinnati Nationals. An injury to his arm forced him to give up pitching, and from 1877 to 1880, inclusive, he was a National League umpire. He organized a semi-pro club here in 1881, and, in 1882, with J. Denny McKnight, gave Pittsburgh its first major league club, making this city a charter member of the original American Association.

STILL FOLLOWS GAME

Pratt managed the club in 1882-83, retiring from baseball in 1884 to go into the sporting goods business here. His only connection with baseball after that was to assist J. Palmer O'Neil in the handling of the business affairs of the local National League club during the war with the Brotherhood, or Players' League, in 1890.

Uncle Al has seen generations of players come and go, but he still is a close follower of the national sport, for which, in its organized professional state, he helped to lay the cornerstone. He is one of only five surviving members of his G. A. R. post, which originally numbered 275.

Arnold Injured When Car Upsets

TAFT, Cal., Nov. 17.—(AP.)—Billy Arnold, of Los Angeles, winner of the 1930 Indianapolis automobile speed racing classic, suffered a slight concussion of the brain and several fractured ribs late last night when his motor car turned over on a highway near here as he headed into a ditch to avoid a collision.

DUKES PONDER BID TO GAME IN ST. LOUIS

Elmer Layden, athletic director and head football coach at Duquesne, today denied a report from St. Louis that the Dukes had accepted an invitation to meet the combined seniors of Missouri, St. Louis and Washington Universities there in a charity game on Sunday, December 3.

Layden said that Father Charles Maxwell, who sponsors an annual football game for the benefit of the St. Louis Boys' Club, a nonsectarian character-building organization, had come here to invite tre Dukes last Thursday.

Layden today said he gave Father Maxwell no definite answer, and that while a game between the Dukes and the varsity of any one of the three schools might be arranged, a game against an all-star team would not be sanctioned.

J. W. Murray, sharing in the work of selecting and lining up suitable opponents for a proposed national college football championship game in Chicago, was here today to sound out [illegible] in regard to its attitude toward participation in the game. [illegible] was informed that the Panthers were not interested in any p[illegible]n battle this year.

WHICH IS THE BETTER CIGAR?

BAYUK PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES
BAYUK PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES

The one was made to give smokers the best 10c value in America—and it did. For years it was the largest-selling 10c brand.

The other is identically the same Bayuk "Phillies"—in tobacco—in size—in shape. Its only difference is in the price. Formerly 10c—today 5c.

This explains why more men are smoking Bayuk "Phillies" today than any other cigar. They know they're getting a proven 10c value at just half the former price.

We do know this—that never in history has one cigar so completely met the taste demands of discriminating smokers as the Bayuk "Phillies" you buy today.

Bayuk's Guarantee

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (Familiarly known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Havana and Domestic long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

By JESS CARVER

An undefeated and untied band of husky footballers from the University of Nebraska worked out in the Stadium this afternoon in preparation for their game here tomorrow with Pitt's Panthers.

The Huskers, who stopped off in Chicago for a brief drill yesterday, arrived here this morning, and Dana X. Bible, their coach, took them to the local battle scene for another workout shortly after noon. Frigid weather is no novelty to the stalwarts from Nebraska's wind-swept plains, and the manner in which the invaders handled the pigskin in the snow and ice boded no good for Pitt tomorrow.

John W. Murray, whose duty it is to line up teams for an all-star game in Chicago on December 9, accompanied the Huskers here from Chicago. He sounded out Pitt today and found the Panthers not interested in the fray. The Big Six champions probably will get the bid should they win over the Panthers.

Unless both elevens suffer attacks of logo of the bogo or heebie geebies between now and tomorrow, they should serve up a right nifty ball game. If ever two elevens appeared evenly matched, the Panthers and Huskers do. They have speed, weight and experience and, above all, certainly the will to win, if not even the necessity of doing same.

Here is Nebraska, unbeaten and untied, with another Big Six title already safely tucked away and with the right close-up glimpse of the Rose Bowl game ahead. Pitt, which should be up with the unbeaten ones of the nation, needs to beat Nebraska to fully make up for the loss to Minnesota. Had Notre Dame not fallen so flat this year, the Panthers' triumph over the Irish would have partially assuaged the smart of the loss to the Gophers, but while many of the major league football teams have been going along in second or neutral, the Irish have been staggering along in reverse, so victories scored over them this year do not mean so very much.

Of the eleven young men who squared off against Pitt at Lincoln a year ago, six will be in the starting lineup tomorrow and a couple more will be on the bench. Bishop and DeBus, at the guards; Gail O'Brien, at right tackle, and Masterson, Miller, Sauer in the backfield.

There'll be some preliminary fireworks of high order tomorrow morning as the Pitt and Tech freshmen elevens clash in the Tartan Bowl. This game will get under way at 11 o'clock.

While the varsity is meeting the Huskers here, the Pitt B eleven will tackle West Virginia University's B squad at Morgantown in a preliminary tussle to the Mountaineer-W. Va. Wesleyan clash.

Coach Carl Olsen, Pathner track mentor, announced yesterday that the Pitt cross-country team would take part in the annual I. C. A. A. A. A. championship meet over the [illegible]n Courtland Park course in New York November 20.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE PRAIRIE SCHOONER—During the Galveston Flood, the freighter "Eaton Hall," of London registry, was anchored in Galveston Bay. The huge tidal wave lifted the vessel and carried it two miles inland across the prairie. When the wave receded, smaller vessels were washed back into the bay, but the "Eaton Hall," being too heavy, was left high and dry on the prairie, where she was a landmark for many years before she finally was dismantled. An attempt to refloat the ship by digging a channel to the sea had to be abandoned because the cost of the channel would have exceeded the value of the ship. THE KING PENGUIN—The King Penguin of the Antarctic, living where there is no nest material, builds no nest, but carries its solitary egg on the back of its feet, covering it with a loose fold of feathery skin. Here it hatches and the young penguin then is carried in the same fashion through babyhood. The two parents relieve one another during this curious incubation and tend and guard their charge with great care.

LATERAL PASS PLAY OF MANY POSSIBILITIES

Pitt over Nebraska.
Carnegie Tech over Georgetown.
Dartmouth over Cornell.
Fordham over Oregon State.
Brown over Harvard.
Penn over Penn State.

Small scores again were noticeable in a great many of the important games last Saturday, in spite of the fact that at this stage of the season all teams have perfected their offense about to the limit.

Pop Warner

The lateral pass has been used more this year than ever before, and coaches gradually are finding ways in which this Rugby feature can be utilized to advantage. We have seen considerable lateral passing after the completion of a forward pass. Such plays are very spectacular, and geenrally result in long gains when properly worked.

We also have seen some lateral passing by a ball carrier after he has crossed the line of scrimmage. After the catcher of a punt has drawn in the opposing ends to stop his progress, we have seen him lateral the ball to another back, but this play has not yet been developed to anywhere near its possibilities.

END IN TOUGH SPOT

Most lateral passes take place behind the line of scrimmage. With defensive ends playing in as close as most of them now do, the lateral pass method of outflanking the defense is becoming much more common. The most common method is to start a play inside the end and then pass to a back going outside. This puts a defensive end in a pretty tough spot.

However, the most successful laterals have proved to be those developing from a fake line plunge. On these plays the fullback drives into the line and passes the ball to another player close behind the line, who laterals to a back running wide, or a quarterback handling the ball fakes a pass to a line plunger, and then laterals to a wide running back.

SUPPORTS HANLEY

The suggestion which was made by Dick Hanley last year to allow forward passing anywhere behind the line would not help forward passing so much as it would help running plays and lateral passing.

Any change which will give offensive football a little much-needed help is worthy of consideration.

LIGHT SOCCER CARD LISTED TOMORROW

By TOM BIRKS

Only two soccer games are listed for tomorrow afternoon. The Union Swith and Signal eleven goes to Warrington Park to meet Beltzhoover, and the Aliquippa team appears at Lawrenceville against the Dunwicks.

The light schedule tomorrow is due to the many cup ties listed for Sunday, when the National open and West Penn senior and junior games will be disposed of.

A number of outstanding games of the inter-league type will be played in the senior tourney on Sunday, the best of which appears to be the Old Carnegie-Gallatin battle scheduled for the Monongahela River grounds at Gallatin.

Both Gallatin and Joe Luxbacker's eleven play the same hustling type of soccer. This will be the first time this season that Cherry, Robson and Luxbacker have been extended. Beating Gallatin at Gallatin in cup tie soccer is a touch assignment. Harry Sickles and his comrades play a hard game, with only one object in mind, that of getting goals.

Clan Douglas goes to South Park to meet Curry, and it is hard to see the weakened Clansmen getting any place in that particular game. Last year Douglas would have been an even favorite to win, but that was last year. Adam Miller has had a tough time putting a team on the field in the Central League games, and with Moremen on the sidelines, Curry should win easily.

In the national open, Heidelberg goes to Morgan. These teams met and played a 1-1 tie game last Sunday in the Keystone League.

PIRATES, REDS SWING DEAL

Red doesn't have quite as much stuff as he had in 1929, when he won 19 games for the Reds, but he is a smart performer. Moreover, he is an excellent batter. He hit close to .300 last season.

Piet came to the Pirates in the latter part of the 1931 season. He has compiled a batting average here of approximately .300 and has been a great baseerunner, but his fielding at times left something [illegible] desired.

[illegible]norosky has been a Bucco off [illegible] since 1926, but he has [illegible]er been a big success as a regular, barring the 1930 season when he hit .313 in 152 games.

MAGNATES HAVE BIG DAY

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 17.—(AP.—The major and minor league baseball magnates spent a busy day here yesterday exchanging players and adopting agreements. The final business scheduled today was the acceptance of Dan Hill, of Asheville, N. C., as a member of the executive committee. The following decisions and transactions were announced:

Harold Meyer, vice president and general manager of the Wilkes-Barre club, had a two-year suspension lifted, but was fined an additional $500 for alleged violation of a salary contract with Pitcher John Milligan.

Art Shires, Jim Lindsay, Gordon Slade and Charles Wilson, each fined $200 for alleged salary violation in the American Association, won their appeals and were ordered not to pay the fines.

The Reds engineered two trades, giving the Pirates Lucas and Roettger for Comorosky and Piet, of the Pirates, and sending George Grantham to the Giants for Glenn Spencer.

The Chicago Cubs, Los Angeles and San Francisco Seals were involved in a three-way deal. The Cubs got Second Baseman Augie Galan, the Seals got Pitcher Leroy Hermann, Win Ballou and Catcher Hugh McQuillan and Los Angeles received Catcher William Campbell.

Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, announced today that Frank Snyder has been re-engaged as coach of the club for 1934.

PHILS BUY RUBLE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov 17.—(INS.)—William A. Ruble former outfielder of the Detroit Tigers, has been purchased by the Philadelphia Phillies from the Minneapolis Club.

LACROSSE CLUB AWARDED CITY

Pittsburgh has been awarded a franchise in the National Professional Lacrosse League and the fast Indian sport will be introduced at Motor Square Garden within a few weeks.

Announcement to this effect was made today by C. C. MacDonald, lessee of the Garden, who received word of the award of the franchise from President H. D. Taber.

The local team will be known as the Yellow Jackets and will be coached by Sid Sutherland. It will be made up of players of the Montreal Canadiens team, twice winner of the league title.

PRESENT RULES SUIT 'HARP'

couldn't have got it before it had been kicked 40 yards down the field. Also, when the ball changes hands it takes the scoring opportunity away from one team and gives it to the other. This certainly is enough punishment for a fumble without allowing the opposition to advance the fumble for a touchdown.

Consider this picture: A well-drilled, powerful football team has the ball on its opponent's 5-yard line and is ready to score. The ball is snapped and the line opens up a huge hole for the ball-carrier. The other offensive backs have started on their assignments and are running with their backs to the ball-carrier. The runner is alone and starts with the ball for the opening in the line. It is a perfect play. Every man has carried out his duties 100 per cent and a touchdown is about to be scored, but the runner fumbles the ball. An end of the defending team who was entirely out of the play happens along, scoops up the ball and runs 95 yards for a touchdown.

Is that justice? Should a whole team be penalized to such an extent just because one of its members made a mistake? I believe that the defending team recieved enough reward when it recovered the fumble and kept the opponent from scoring without giving it a 95-yard run for an unearned score.

If they change the fumble rule, the above illustration will be an actuality many times each week, and football will become once more pretty much a game of luck.

Y. M. H. A. FIVE WINS

The Y. M. H. A. basketball team opened its season last night by defeating the Gulf quinet, 34 to 24. The Y. M. H. A. Reserves won, defeating Homestead Y, 20-14.

SPORT VIGNETTES

One local athletic leader is not going to attend the A. A. U. convention which opens at the William Penn Hotel Sunday because he doesn't know what this metric system they're going to discuss is about . . . The Army-Navy football game will be played Saturday of next week at Philadelphia, thereby getting it out of the way before Thanksgiving Day, which is unusual . . . And Navy tomorrow gets a going-over from the rejuvenated Princeton Tigers while the Army has a setup in Pennsylvania Military College . . . Last year's Princeton-Navy game resulted in a scoreless tie, but this is another year and another Princeton team.

The coming of Nebraska for its game with Pitt at the Stadium tomorrow recalls the sensation the Cornhuskers created when they first played Pitt at Forbes Field, in 1921 . . . They were a [illegible] of giants who left expressions of awe in their wake wherever they were seen in a body . . . And they won, 10-0, when Swanson, the end, [illegible] a forward pass out of the reach of Tommy Davies along the [illegible] in midfield and sprinted for a [illegible] just before the half ended, to which there was added a field goal . . . [illegible] the Huskers are said to be not as heavy or as rangy as other teams which have come out of Lincoln.

An old rivalry will be resumed at Philadelphia tomorrow when Penn State meets Penn, with the teams better matched than in some seasons, with Penn's de-emphasizing beginning to show results . . . State began to trim its sails before Penn . . . Among the touchdowns in Nebraska's record this fall is one of the cheapest on the books, scored against Oklahoma a few weeks ago . . . Bernie Masterson, Husker quarterback, kicked off over the goal line against a strong wind which kept the ball from going out of the end zone . . . Oklahoma let the ball go and Boswell, Nebraska halfback, fell on it for a touchdown for his team.

You can tell we're near the end of the football season when next week finds an [illegible] marathon on the Duquesne [illegible] the wrestlers opening [illegible] Motor Square Garden, a boxing show at the [illegible] and a [illegible] tournament [illegible] on the South Side . . . Everything of an indoor sport nature included except pinochle. — HARRY KECK.

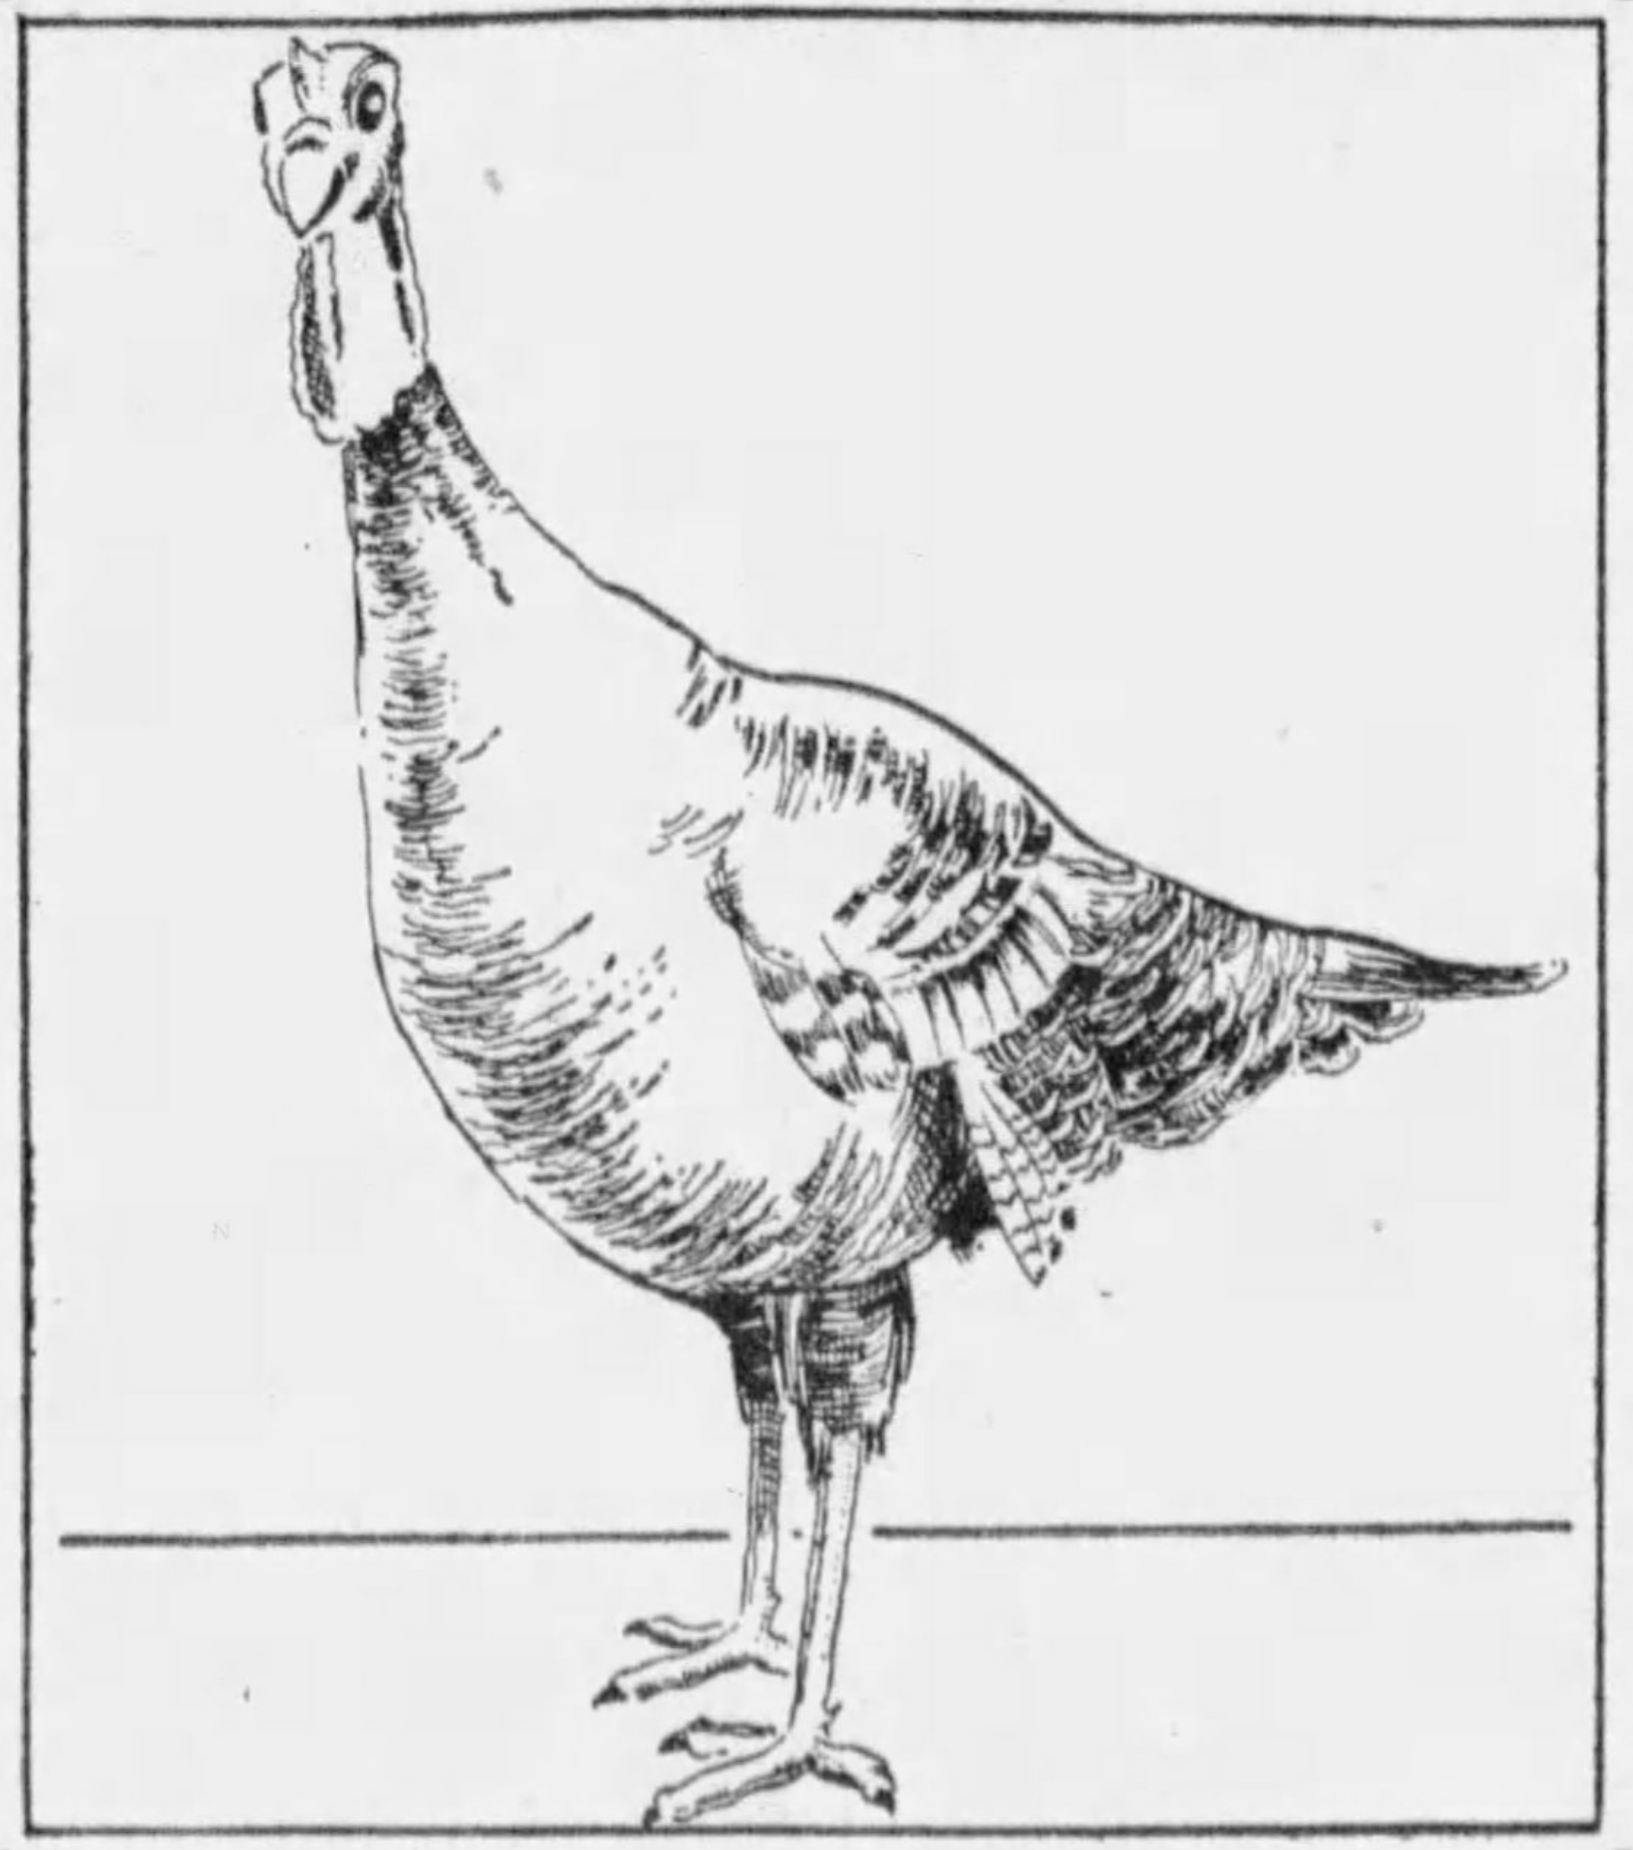
To Be Awarded to Boys and Girls of School Age for the Best Sets of

THANKSGIVING COLOR PICTURES

—PICTURE No. 5



HOW TO DO IT

Color this picture with crayon or water color, but do not send it in until the complete series of 12 has been printed. There will be one picture in the Sun-Telegraph every day. No. 6 will appear tomorrow. This is a fine opportunity for all school classes to participate.

Read These Simple Rules

1—Anyone in the Pittsburgh area can enter this contest except professional artists and employees of the Sun-Telegraph and their families.

2—You are to color the drawings as nearly as possible to their natural colors. Use crayon or water colors.

3—The decision of the judges will be final.

4—Neatness and form of presentation will be the basis for judging the entries.

5—It is not necessary to buy a paper to enter the contest. You may trace these drawings from papers on file at the public libraries or at the Sun-Telegraph office.

6—You may enter as many sets of pictures as you wish; the more you enter the better your chance to win.

7—One picture will be published each day starting Monday, November 13.

8—Do not send any drawings to this office until you have a complete set of twelve pictures.

9—Contest starts November 13 and closes midnight Monday, November 27.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XXXIV

They were small and exquisitely tended hands, the nails rosy filberts, Nollie noticed.

And Rhoda's eyes were wonderfully made up, so that in the shaded lamplight of the living-room they seemed larger and deeper.

Her gown had come from Paris, and was beautiful.

It was in gleaming gold, fitting her long, sinuous body.

The neck was square cut, and there was a gold rope girdle round her waist, and the wide skirt touched the floor behind and at the sides, and was just short enough in front to display a tiny pair of sandals.

Golden, too, were they, and beautifully cut. Rhoda had slim, small feet. Nollie had noticed them as she came down the staircase.

"It's I, Tony," she repeated as she came forward towards him with both hands outstretched.

"Why, Rhoda—how on earth did you get here?" The young man drew a surprised breath as she took his hands in hers. "Where did you spring from?"

TONY SURPRISED

She gave a low, sweet laugh in keeping with her medieval gown. "Why Jinny Judson asked me here!" And her eyes feasted on him.

He released her hand. Rhoda still clung to the other.

"Well, I'm blessed! You're a—a regular jack-in-the-box, Rhoda!"

"Is THAT all you've got to say when you and I encounter each other hundreds of miles from home? Aren't you the least weeny bit thrilled to see me?"

This very archly, and with a pout. The penciled brows were raised reproachfully.

"Of course, I'm pleased—but it's a great surprise. I thought—you told me, didn't you?—you were going to East Hampton?"

She shrugged her shoulders in the well-cut gown. She pouted again. She said, daringly, quite ignoring Nollie: "I intended to go there, but you and I meet here instead—don't you think it's the hand of fate, Tony?"

He did not answer that. He drew his hand away, quite gently and politely, turning to Nollie.

* * *

"You two have met, of course?" he said pleasantly.

Rhoda contrived to keep the sweet smile on her face. "Why, of course, Mrs. Judson's secretary and I have met—or should I say, lady-companion? I don't quite know what it IS you do, so won't you enlighten me, Miss Day? I think Jinny said you were housekeeper-companion?"

* * *

It was a queer evening for Nollie. When Tony's eyes met hers across the dinner-table, there was a warm, but at the same time a puzzled, look in them.

OPPORTUNITY LOST

Why hadn't she been franker with him? Nollie was sure that thought was revolving in his mind. She told herself, over and over, that she'd been an idiot.

She had let him think that she was other than she was. And now Rhoda Vane, in a few patronizing words, had ripped the veil away, and Tony saw her as a poseur.

She'd meant to let him know this afternoon . . . to have a long, confidential talk with him by the lake side.

But the rain had circumvented that. She couldn't reach him.

What was it that the arrogant Rhoda Vane had asked her if she was? Housekeeper-companion.

And Nollie had answered, cheeks aflame, because of having deceived Tony so: "I am acting as Mrs. Judson's secretary."

Well, there was nothing in the world to be ashamed of there. Wouldn't a man's natural thought be—"all credit to her?"

But she had posed as something else. She had meant to explain it all away . . . but fate had taken the opportunity from her.

"Yes and no."

"Well, I was just thinking of past performances on the Riviera."

IN RHODA'S FAVOR

Now Rhoda wasn't really "quick in the uptake" and she fell into the trap.

"You mean those charades we had that night at the Eden Roc?"

"No — not exactly. I was thinking of the Marquis de Vintalmo's yacht."

"And what happened on the sea-going chariot?" asked Tony affably and innocently. "Wasn't the behavior quite saint-like aboard?"

"I'm sure there was nothing out of the ordinary," said Rhoda, the blush fading. "We drank champagne and danced, and every now and then we'd pop overboard and take a dip in the Mediterranean."

And when Nollie heard him use that word — colleen — to someone other than herself, a stab went through her heart.

Colleen! A lovely word — in her private thought it had been a sweet term of endearment.

Now he was using it to Rhoda Vane, and Rhoda was lowering and raising her eyes to his . . . employing every fascinating trick on Tony.

"She wants him. She admires him. She'll use every wile to get him. And—and she has money."

A fear that was like an agony consumed Nollie.

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Mrs. Judson returns and ask Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie. Nollie and the widow leave for the ranch after inviting Rhoda. Nollie is surprised when she meets Tony near the ranch. Tony is pleased when she tells him she is not Mrs. Judson. Rhoda visits the ranch and it develops that she knows Tony.

Now Go On

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

If a woman hates white hair, there's no reason why she should endure it. Hair dyeing goes on all the time at a lively pace. But she should know exactly what she's in for. Hair grows, as a rule, at the rate of six inches a year. In two months gray hairs close to the scalp will be there to the length of one inch. Therefore, at least six times a year there must be a touch up. To dye this new growth without redyeing the darkened shafts is some trick. Experts know how to do it, but the amateur all too often makes a mess of it, fares forth cursed with locks of several shades, striped or plaided.

Let a young girl discover a pimple on her face and she will start to tease it. She finds that pressing out the contents of a pustule is an engrossing and fascinating pastime. She is taking a chance of producing scars, especially if she is tormented with those small blind boils that never come to a head. If she must indulge, the needle that she uses should be passed through a flame to sterilize it. Fingers should be covered with gauze, pressure gentle and the wound laved afterwards with a solution of boric acid. Careless treatment spreads infection.

The vinegar rinse makes the hair soft and silky because it chases out soap scum. It should not be left in the hair, but flooded away with clear water. Add two tablespoons of ordinary cider vinegar to a bowl of tepid water. Pour over the head with a cup. If lemons are used instead, the juice of two will suffice for the same amount of water.

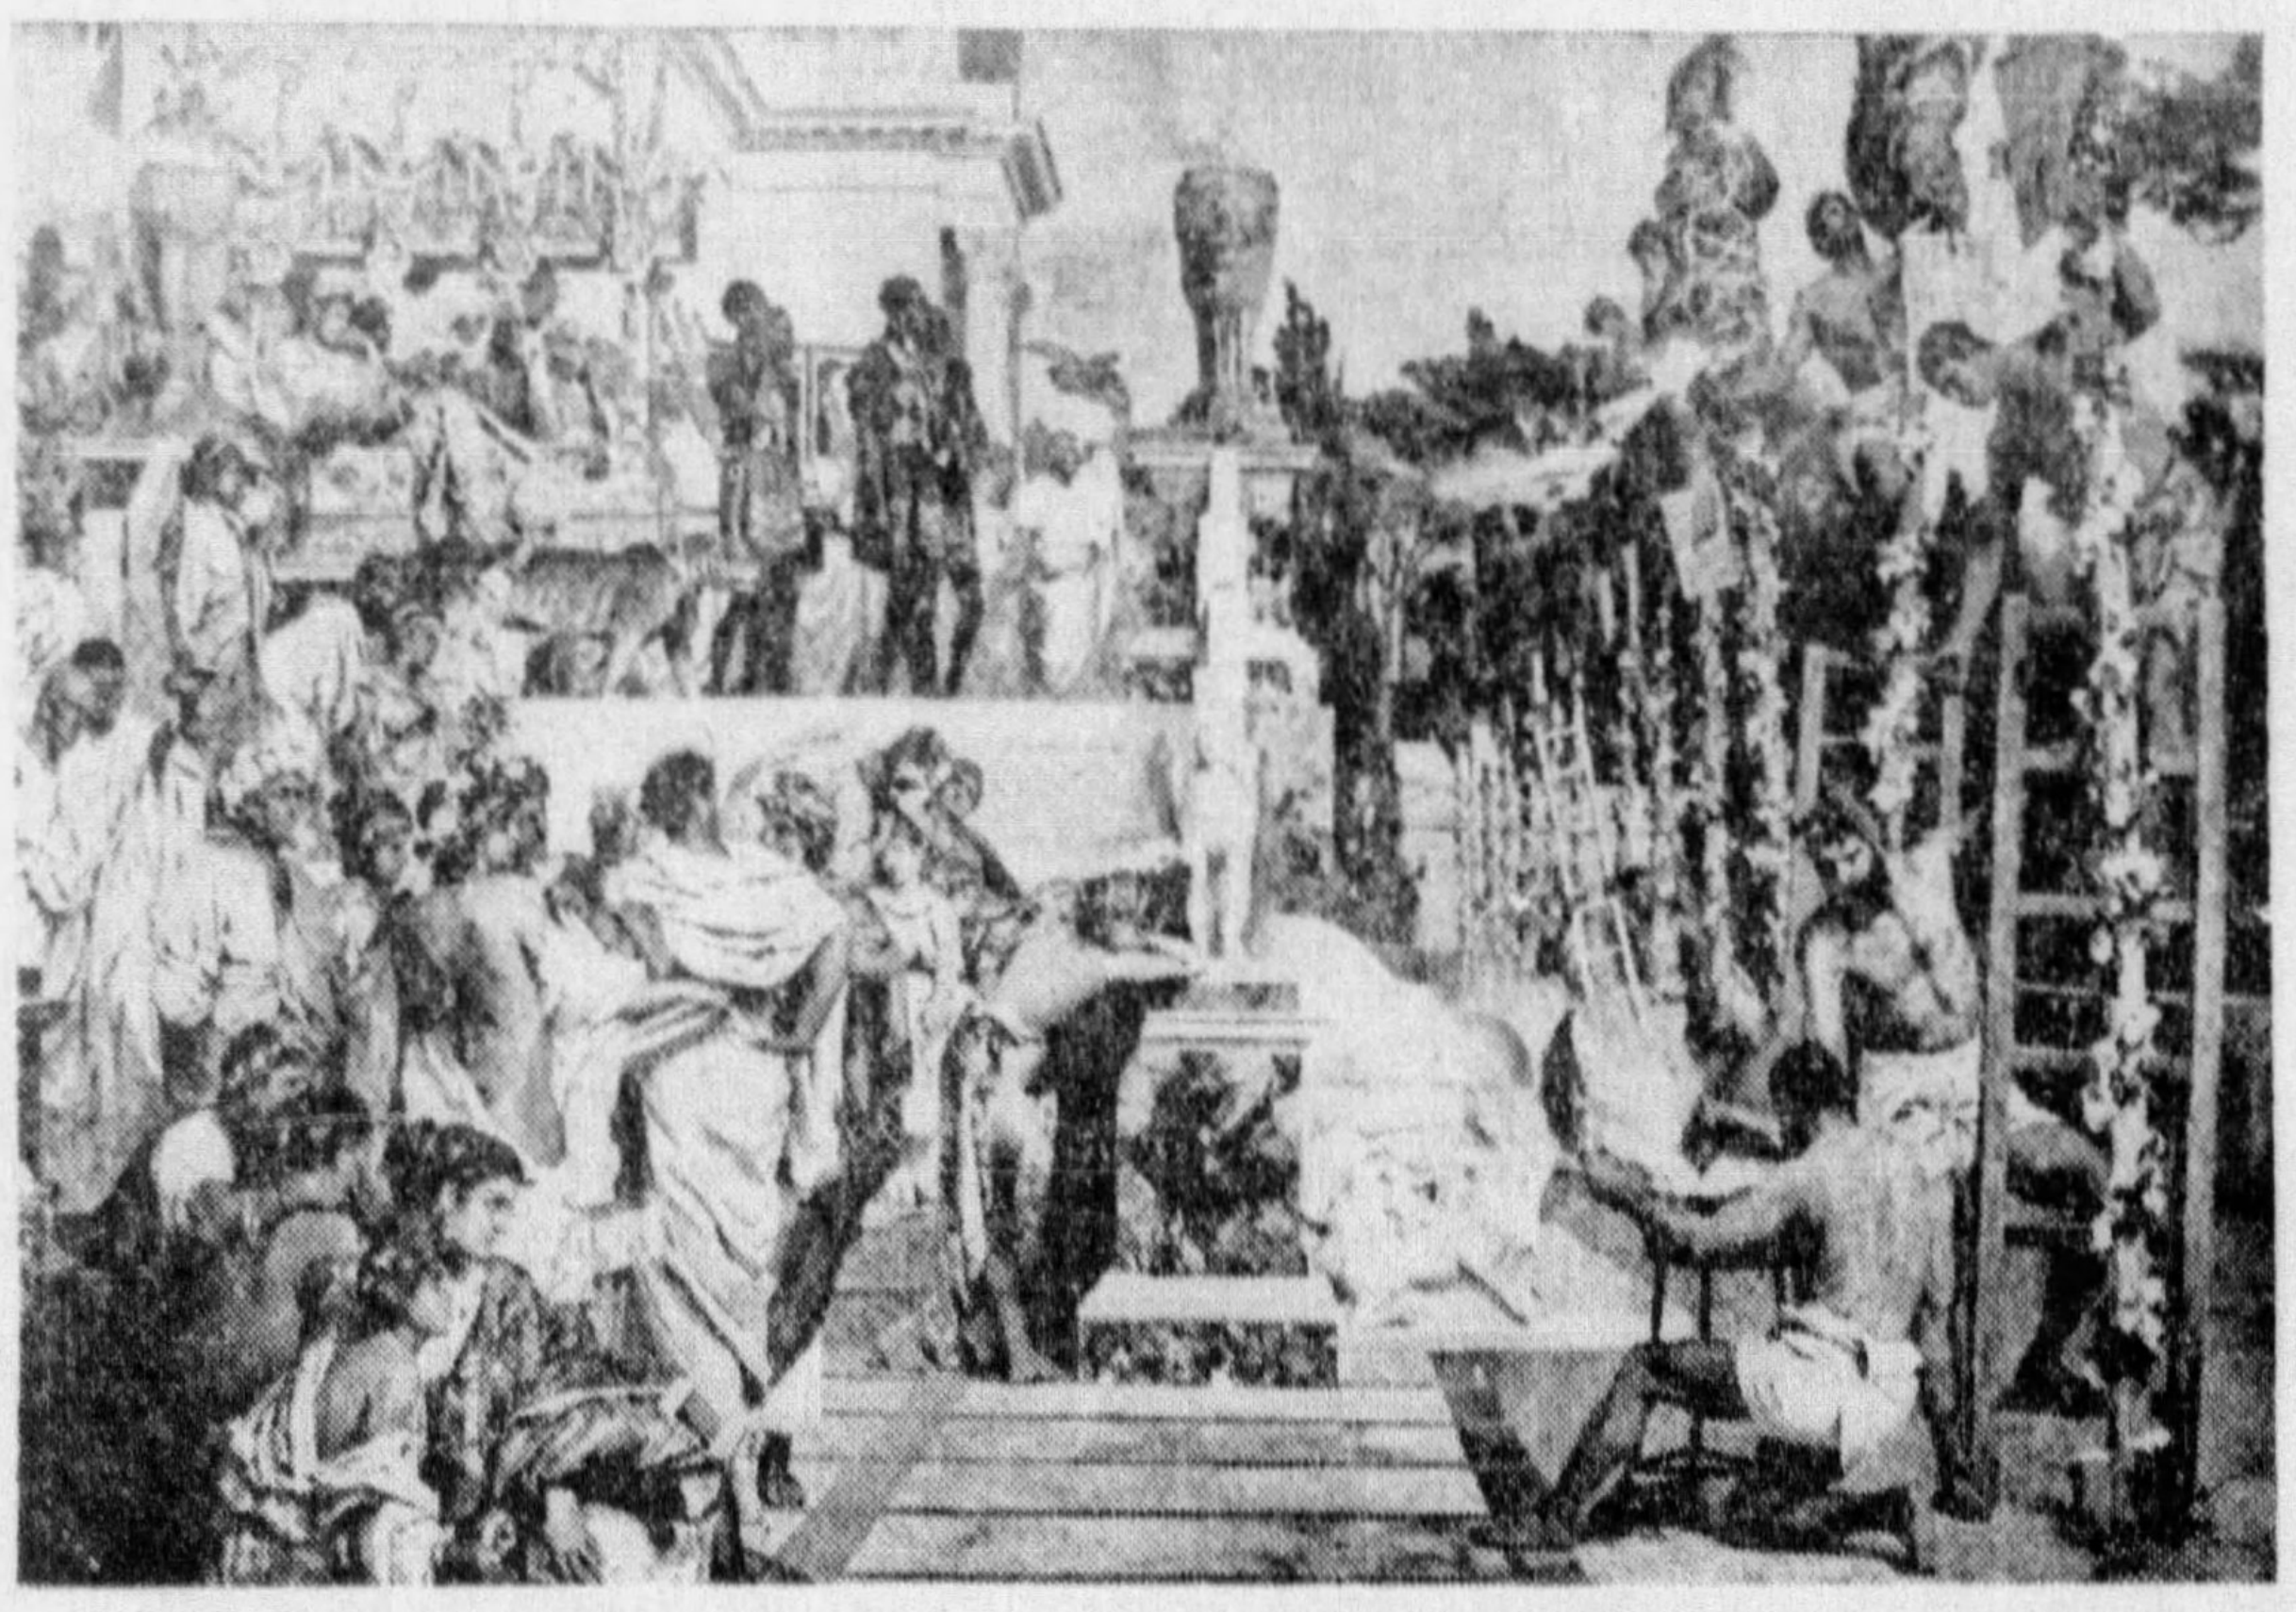
DEATH WARRANT READ TO MAJ. ANDRE (1780)

John Andre (1751-1780) English major, negotiated with the American Gen. Benedict Arnold, to deliver West Point, with its stores of gunpowder, to the British. Andre was captured in disguise, court-martialled and hanged as a spy at Tappan. He died with utmost courage. Thus Gen. Arnold's betrayal was unveiled in time to be frustrated but he himself escaped to the British. He died in 1801 in remorse, despised by both countries. Andre's body was transferred to England (1821) and buried near his monument in Westminster Abbey. (United States History)



NERO AND HIS COURT ENJOYING THE "LIVING TORCHES"

Nero (54-68 A. D.) adopted son and successor of Claudius I, plunged into debauchery and tyranny soon after assuming the throne. He had murdered Britannicus, son of Claudius, and, among others, his own mother, Agrippina (59 A. D.). Upon this feat the Roman Senate congratulated him in lowest servility.

A great fire almost consumed Rome in 64 A. D. The blame is laid upon Nero. He accused and persecuted furiously the Christians, the mysterious sect which, like the Jews in medieval times received the blame for every unexplainable calamity. Nero used the devilish invention, "The Living Torches," to entertain his courtiers and the mob.

Rome was rebuilt. A military revolt ended Nero's tyranny; he fled and, about to be captured, committed suicide. (World History)

COLLOID CHEMISTRY BASIC FOR SCIENCE, INDUSTRY

Molecular dispersion of material yields solutions; that of aggregates of molecules—not bigger than 1/125,000 of an inch—produces colloid suspension or colloidal state of matter. E. g.: Smoke, fog, foams, muddy water, milk, etc.

Colloid particles have electric charge (+ or —); they are not retained by ordinary filters; by meeting particles of opposite electricity or salt solutions they coagulate and settle ("salting out" soap; formation of river deltas at meeting sea; purification of water by Fe and Al salts; also in processes of dyeing, tanning, sugar, paper, rubber, glass, cement, ceramic, etc., industries; metallurgy, agriculture, geology, cooking).

1. The colloid mill disintegrates solids. 2. Electric arc between metal rods under water disperses metal as smoke. 3. (right) Light beams passing through colloid suspension show luminous path "Tyndall effect." 4. The ultra microscope makes visible particles of 1/125,000,000 of an inch diameter. 5. COMBINED GRAIN HARVESTING AND THRESHING MACHINE (Gen. Science)

Drawn by a tractor, it cuts and threshes the grain. The cutting is done by the header comprising the reciprocating sickle (similar to the cutter bar of the haymower (Pict. Ed., Nov. 10), and a revolving reel, the bats of which push the grain against the sickle. An elevator lifts the cut grain into the threshing unit where grain and straw are separated by violent rubbing between stationary and revolving teeth on the threshing cylinder. It is cleaned of impurities by airblasts and conveyed into the bin. This can be emptied into a wagon drawn alongside or into sacks. The straw may be scattered or dumped into piles on the ground. Two men operate tractor and combine, harvesting 20-60 acres a day, according to the size of the machine.

Master Tricks!

It is assumed that all the boys and girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity have been following the adventures of "Inspector Day" in his hunt for "The Duke." Will this master detective apprehend this master criminal and how will he do it? Speeches Should Be Spoken, Not Read

They had a pretty fierce election in New York City this time. There was so much reform it took six candidates to handle it.

We ain't saying the talking wasn't up to Copenhagen nose powder. The arguments were good. The speaking was fairly legible.

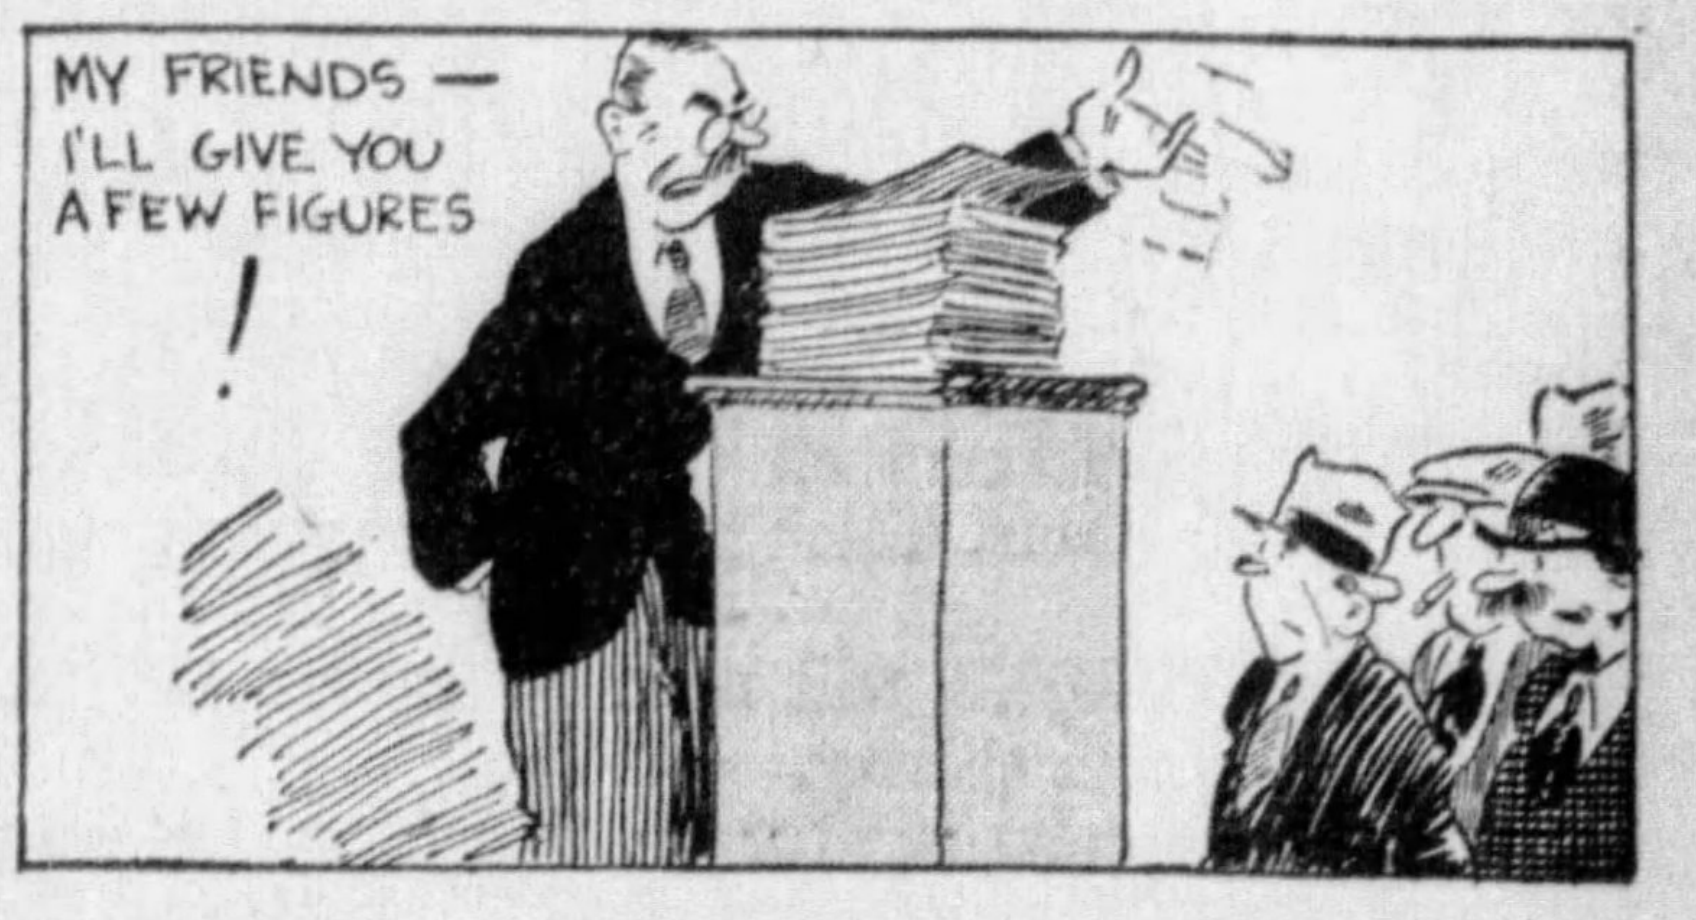
But everything was read from a paper. The candidates stood up there like frozen sentinels and read what was written.

All of them looked like the old lady's description of the new minister who read his sermons. "He looked like a crow in the cornfield. A dab up. And a dab down."

That's where the new kind of orators are different from Calhoun and Webster. Those boys didn't write any speeches in advance.

They thought of things as they went along and were always three stations ahead of their stopping-off place.

Can you imagine Daniel Webster holding a paper in his hand when he spoke? He went through so many gyrations folks would have thought he was trying to flag a train. He waved his arms, waggled his head, hopped all over the rostrum and didn't think he ever won an argument until his coat split up the back.



MY FRIENDS — I'LL GIVE YOU A FEW FIGURES !

Calhoun started in slow because he was speaking from memory without details and figures. But when he warmed up and shed his mittens he became so inspired that people thought he was being attacked by a bee swarm. Nobody cared to sit in the first three rows when Calhoun started in to point with scorn or gesture with alarm. Before he got to his climax he was shaking like popcorn and when he made a point he pounded the desk until he knocked every hat in the hall for field goals. He didn't have time to look at a paper. In those days nobody ever won a debate unless he was a darned good acrobat.

They not only swayed their audiences but they staggered 'em too. They wore togas made from the hide of the Bull of Bashan and had voices that made the welkin go back to college for singing lessons.

They didn't have to read off papers because they knew their subjects or thought they did. If they didn't nobody ever suspected it.

Jobs, Not Doles, at Last! Roosevelt Acts to Rehabilitate 4,000,000 Workers

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has responded magnificently to the plea of able-bodied men for jobs—not doles.

In setting up the Civil Works Administration, the Chief Executive has provided machinery for promptly getting 2,000,000 individuals and heads of families off the relief rolls, and for giving employment to 2,000,000 others who will be recruited from the unemployed.

The new approach not only increases the income of the beneficiaries and helps local communities in which the funds are distributed, but also removes the intolerable stigma of charity.

Two million men are already going to work on this program, and another two million will follow shortly.

The plan has been underwritten for a three months' period. After the winter, it is hoped, a seasonal spring pickup and also execution of the regular public works program will absorb many of these men. Since last April 1,500,000 families have been taken off public relief rolls, and returned as breadwinners to ordinary employment as business improved, according to official estimates.

But irrespective of speculative economic conditions, the coming winter will be made vastly more tolerable than otherwise for the 4,000,000 men and their dependents, embracing a group of 15,000,000 Americans, whom the temporary program is to aid.

THESE MILLIONS will need no longer to choose between starvation and charity.

They will receive pay for work performed at rates prevailing in the communities where they are employed.

Thus, at length, under the leadership of the Democratic party, the country departs from the shameful system of public doles, which tend to rob the recipients of their self-respect.

The employes under the Civil Works Administration will not be required to take a pauper's oath, but will enjoy the same status as others on the payrolls of the federal, state and local governments.

The benefits cannot be measured exclusively in economic terms.

The rehabilitation of self-respect and the American spirit of independence will entail a rebirth of precious national assets. The undernourished and the ill-clad will be permitted to eat and buy clothing, instead of being asked cruelly to wait for inexorable economic forces to work out their patterns over the long pull.

AT THE same time, however, the increases in payrolls will bring about an immediate and proportionate increase in community purchasing power, which in turn will stimulate private industry and contribute correspondingly to the whole nation's economic recovery.

In his last radio address, the President recognized that the attainment of the full economic objectives of the administration might take one, two or three years.

It cannot wait.

National tranquility depends on the courage and wisdom with which an enlightened people absorb the social cost of a great depression.

It is cruel and unjust to permit the incidence to fall chiefly on the shoulders of those least able to bear it, namely, the unemployed.

In the course of events, these millions, who had long been denied an opportunity for normal employment, had drifted to public relief rolls.

Their daily bread and that of their families depended on official handouts.

The process was degrading, especially to those who were out of work because of obscure economic conditions over which they had no control.

BREAKING THROUGH the cordon of red tape, Mr. Roosevelt has reversed this practice, and set up the doctrine that those who are capable of work should get public employment, not handouts.

According to the President's conception, only those who are unemployable as a result of their own physical and psychological defects, should remain on the relief rolls.

The others, unable to find private employment, should be transferred to public payrolls.

State and local governments are expected to continue their financial contributions, to which the Public Works Administration will add over a three months' period $400,000,000 out of the $3,300,000,000 appropriation which Congress made. The Federal Emergency Relief Administration will also contribute $200,000,000.

In this race against time, these men will engage in emergency work, which will bridge the gap until Secretary Ickes' permanent work projects reach the pick and shovel stage after the winter.

By a stroke of the pen, Mr. Roosevelt relieves the relief rolls, to which the federal government has been contributing, of two-thirds of their beneficiaries.

At the same time, he substantially augments the remuneration of the men engaged in made-work projects. Those who had been receiving less than $15 a month will receive $50 monthly.

A precedent has been set for providing public employment on a sufficiently large scale to take up the slack in private employment during interludes of depression.

AND THEREBY, a socially alert administration puts an end to anarchy in the market place for human services.

The mobilization of these needy men into a self-respecting army of paid workers carries to fruition William James' dream of a "moral equivalent for war."

President Roosevelt has humanized the whole conception of accelerating public works when the need for employment is greatest.

While waiting for his more permanent projects to get under way, he provides protection against the severity of another winter with this far-reaching plan for emergency work.

In so doing, Mr. Roosevelt fulfills his pre-election promise to the unemployed, and goes beyond what the Hearst papers and most advocates of the public works remedy hoped for and urged.

An Impressive Statement

Confidence in the National Credit Is Indispensable to The Achievement of Recovery.

The solemn statement on the present trend in our monetary policy, issued a few days ago by a group of Chicago business and industrial leaders, is impressive in its sincerity and straightforwardness. The partisan and critical tone is completely absent, although the note of alarm is not concealed.

"We are convinced," the statement says, "that monetary policy cannot be wisely determined save on the basis of experience. Untried currency schemes must be abandoned if confidence in the dollar is to be restored. Only upon that confidence can business and all production go forward with a higher price level and greater purchasing power.

"Recovery can be achieved only through an increased volume of business, which increases wages and the whole national income. The fundamental condition for an increased volume of business is confidence in the national credit and a reasonable expectation of profit for individual enterprise in industry, trade and agriculture."

Can the sober truth of these statements be gainsaid? Can we survey unmoved the destruction of confidence in the national credit?

AND ISN'T IT ABOUT TIME that the administration turns its thoughts with more respect TOWARD THE MAXIMS OF EXPERIENCE—and AWAY FROM needlessly VENTURESOME INNOVATION, which like a violently swinging trapeze has made even "THEORY" dizzy and anxious to find a footing?

Shamefully Neglected

The Story of Pennsylvania Is as Important and Interesting as That of Massachusetts.

Some remarks in this column last month, in connection with the Ambridge strike, about historic events that had occurred at or near the scene of the riot, aroused considerable interest. Many persons, it seems, were not aware that Gen. Anthony Wayne trained an army there for a campaign against the Indians.

This is a good illustration of the shameful neglect of Pennsylvania's history in the schools—a situation which has led C. Hale Sipe, of Butler, one of the foremost authorities on the story of our state, to send a vigorous letter of protest to Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction.

Mr. Sipe rightly complains that the history textbooks are lopsided in that they give far more attention to the story of Massachusetts than to that of Pennsylvania, although the latter is just as important and just as interesting.

Mr. Sipe cites one thing after another in Pennsylvania's early history—things that vitally affected the course of the nation—concerning which the average Pennsylvanian knows nothing. And yet that same average Pennsylvanian has been familiar since childhood with the story of the Mayflower and the Pilgrim Fathers, and Miles Standish, and other bits of New England history of less import.

There can be no excuse for this lack of proportion as between the states in the teaching of American history in Pennsylvania schools—and it would be to the advantage of the children in other states also to get a more accurate picture of the origin and early years of our country.

Thrift

There's Still Some.

Old-fashioned Americans who bewail the passing of the traditional Yankee traits of prudence and thrift from our people can take heart again. These virtues still flourish in some parts of the nation, and notably in our neighboring state of Connecticut.

Witness this from Hartford:

"A horse owned by the city collapsed and died on the property of Joseph H. Murphy. The city's claim committee has received the following bill from Mr. Murphy:

"For the use of my property as a veterinary hospital and morgue and damage caused therefrom—$10."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Thoughts while strolling: I like that sign over Hamburg Mary's: "Our hamburgers are made; not accumulated." Katharine Brush seems the plushiest of the literati. With the finest studio workroom in town, she often tires of it and rents a de luxe hotel suite to turn out a chapter or so.

Aubrey Eads, a Houston (Tex.) boy, who made good in the city. Billy Gaxton is the only actor who can clown effeminacy and still seem masculine. Ona Munson is always changing her looks. Now she is thin with bangs. I'm fed up with those Victorian novels with long descriptive passages. Give me Fannie Hurst's staccato!

One of my favorite people—Frank Crowninshield. Jim Flagg attracts more attention than beauties he squires to lunch. The Mayfair dances are having biggest crowds in their history. All the stars and many of the boys from Lindy's. "Camera Eye" Sheridan, the famous veteran detective.

One word description of Helen Hayes—shyish. Lily Pons and Mrs. Eugene O'Neill look alike. So do Al Thomas and Osgood Perkins. John Held, Jr., hasn't changed in 20 years. Maybe the influence of those collegiate pictures he draws. George Akerson, Hoover's secretary.

I walked the other evening with Hi Manning, a 20-year-old youth, whose last 10 years have been spent in private schools abroad. From an impudent jerkin he had become a thorough cosmopolite with great charm and culture. He speaks four languages fluently and has an astonishing grasp of art and literature for one so young. Never before had he seen the Bowery, Chinatown or the Ghetto. What impressed was his utter freedom from affectation, and, although he had caught America on the downswing, he observed: "I've had all I want of Europe. Everything makes me glad I was born here."

New York is to be visited shortly by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements, who are coming from Pasadena to see their book publishers. They rank with Charles and Kathleen Norris and the late C. Among most mispronounced writing names, by the way, is that of John Cowper Powys. It is generally pronounced with a double ow ow. Whereas Cowper is as though spelled Cooper and the Po in Powys is like the Poe in Edgar Allen Poe.

We sang a little ditty.
Suddenly I produced the gin
And we were sippin pritty.

The step-daughter of Kenneth C. Beaton, the sprightly K. C. B. of the newspaper columns, is the outstanding comedienne of the stage in many seasons. In Variety parlance she "wows 'em." She made her first professional appearance in the Billie Burke version of the Follies. Tall, slim, golden-haired, she is somewhat remindful of Charlotte Greenwood. But her droll absurdities strike an absolutely new note in nonsensical hilarities. She is 17 and likely the unstagiest lady the theater has seen in a generation.

* * *

I've often thought one of the most accomplished of the comediennes was Elizabeth Patterson Dial, who gave up her professional career on its upbeat with her marriage to Rupert Hughes, the novelist. A gorgeously red-haired hoyden, she could, like Chaplin, evoke an uproar by a mere flick of the hand or a turn on the heel.

Recently I wrote: "My happiest hours have been after 40." And Bill Moore, out in Fremont, O., in a willful postcard acerbity inquires: "After 40 what?"

Europe Obsessed With Fear of International Spies—The Story of Germany's Ablest Spy

By Edwin C. Hill

IN almost every country of the continent, and even in placid England, the spy fever burns hotly, and the secret police are combing the frontiers and the hiding places of great cities for the military agents who are trying to unearth the secrets of new defenses and new plans for attack. It is the busiest industry in Europe.

It is one of the oldest industries in the world precisely as its evil brother, war, is one of the most ancient. There is no glory in the trade and very little money, yet some of the most brilliant of men and most fascinating of women have eagerly accepted its hardships and its perils. Women are up to their pretty eyes in the thrilling and dangerous business of stealing the secrets of embassies and war departments.

The greatest spy story the war produced was the story of the beautiful young German woman, Anne Marie Lesser, the most successful of all the spies that Germany employed. The story of Anne Marie Lesser is told in a book of true spy stories called "Espionage," and published by Appleton.

In the spring of 1914 Anne Marie Lesser set forth on one of her eternal travels, this time to Belgium. She was sent to get figures about the fortifications of Belgium. How many guns were there at Liege? How was the water in the Belgian canals regulated?

One evening in Brussels a party of Belgian officers were having a gay party. Anne Marie Lesser, blonde, blue-eyed, very lovely and intriguing, was sitting in the same restaurant. A young Belgian lieutenant, Rene Austin, was passing her table when a glass fell to the floor. Pretty young Anne Marie Lesser uttered a faint cry. She had cut her hand in picking up the broken glass.

Lieutenant Rene Austin, a chivalrous gentleman, hastened to her side, escorted her out of the room and helped her bind the cut with cotton and adhesive tape. They sat down together in the hotel lobby, laughed over the odd incident that had brought them together, and proceeded to become great friends.

One day Anne Marie Lesser, enthusiastic art student, purchased a little car and asked Rene Austin to tour the country with her to visit the museums. The lieutenant secured leave of eight days and off they went, happy as a pair of love birds. Anne Marie, who claimed to be the daughter of a former French officer, asked a thousand artless questions and the lieutenant, very much in love, told her all he knew about many things which had little to do with the study of painting.

The Telltale Piece of Paper

AND then one day, as their little car was skirting the Dutch border, a piece of paper whisked from a book Anne Marie was carrying and went dancing before the wind. Rene Austin sprang from the car to recover it.

"No, no," cried Anne Marie. "It is of no consequence. Let it go!"

But the lieutenant, out of sheer gallantry, ran after it, to restore to the girl he loved anything that was hers, however trivial.

The paper was whisked through a hedge, which the lieutenant vaulted swiftly. When he reappeared from behind the hedge there was no paper in his hand. His face was strange. Anne Marie watched him with her hand on her heart. He said, merely:

Without another word they returned to the car, got in and drove away. She saw that her lover's face was white and set like stone. She sat tense as a cat, ready to leap or to fight to the death. The lieutenant gave her the chance for neither. He drove at breakneck speed for the nearest village. When he reached it he jammed on the brakes, leaped from the car and hurried to a nearby policeman.

Instantly Anne Marie drove her pretty foot against the accelerator and the car went shrieking throu the village and out to the edge of the forest, where it crashed against a tree, overturned and caught fire. Thrown clear, Anne Marie ran along a narrow path which led to a canal. She stopped to catch her breath and saw, as she stood there panting like a terrified animal, a big barge moving slowly along in the placid stream of the canal.

Liege Captured Through Her Aid

SHE stripped off her clothes, tied them in a bundle, attached the bundle to her back and swam straight for the canal boat. An old man on the rear deck was so amazed at seeing her with so little on that he dropped his pipe in amazement.

"Three thousand francs," cried Anne Marie, "if you take me across the frontier in your boat. Here are the bills. Quick. I'm smuggling diamonds and the police are after me."

The next afternoon, August 4, the Germans launched their assault against the fortress of Liege, and, due to Anne Marie's information, were able to smash its defenses and capture it.

In the spring of 1918 this extraordinary girl turned up in Barcelona as a Spanish Red Cross nurse. One evening Anne Marie and her group of Red Cross nurses came to a little ambulance crowded with wounded men. As Anne Marie was smoothing the pillow under the head of a young Belgian officer whose face was swathed in bandages, he suddenly cried out:

"On duty, comrades! Come quickly. It is a German spy!"

It was Rene Austin, the young officer who had loved her and who had been betrayed by her.

"God be praised," cried Anna Marie. "Take me at once to the nearest general staff. I am a German spy and have very important information."

After the Armistice was signed, Anne Marie Lesser went to live in a little house in Zehlendorf, surrounded by a garden. Morphi and cocaine destroyed her nerv She is now a patient in a men hospital.
